Yesterday's Results.

At Portland—Portland 2, Los Angeles 3.
At Seattle—Seattle 10, San Francisco 9.

Sam Ross deserved to win against Los Angeles yesterday, for the only veteran left on the Beaver hurling staff turned in the best game a Portland pitcher has tossed since Herman Pillette beat Seattle nearly two weeks ago; but it simply wasn't in the cards. Sam was responsible for only one of the three Los Angeles runs, which made it especially tough for him to lose, 3 to 2.

Though the Angels nicked Sam for 11 hits, they were never bunched more than two to the inning, and there was no heavy cannonading. A couple of the blows, at that, might have been cut off by fast fielding. However, Sam has no kick on that score, for his teammates evened it up by cutting off some sharp raps and making four double plays, three of which were started by Marty Krug.

Except in one inning, the fourth, the Beavers simply couldn't hit ol' Doc Crandall. They could tap him easily enough, but they generally popped in the air or went out on easy infield grounders. For the second game in succession he has pitched against Portland the Doc didn't whiff a man. His system is to make 'em hit it where somebody is waiting for the ball. It's a great system, all right, when it works. And it seems to work for the Doc.

Beavers Tie Score.

In the fourth Crandall temporarily mislaid his pop-fly recipe and the Beavers tied up the score at two-all when Cox rammed a grounder between first and second. Hale walked and Jimmy Poole came across with a smashing two-bagger that scored Cox and sent Hale to third. Then Wolfer drove a fly to Killifer on which Hale ambled in. But that ended the home celebration.

Aside from the first inning, the Beavers played dashing ball. They put up by far the best game they have played in many a day. They seemed to be on their toes and imbued with real life. Two of their four double plays were corking exhibitions of fielding.

In the fourth, Griggs singled to right, but when he tried to stretch it to second Cox nailed him with a perfect peg to Krug. Crawford repeated with another hit to right, and then Niehoff got hold of a pitch just right and lay on it for a screaming drive over Mee's head. The collegian raced back a couple of steps, leaped into the air and speared the ball. He doubled Crawford easily at first, for the old boy was almost to second on what had looked like a certain hit.

Krug Makes Clever Spear.

In the eighth, Marty Krug turned in the star fielding stunt of the day. With Griggs on first, Crawford smacked a fast grounder past the pitcher's box and just to the right of second base. Marty dashed after it, but it was apparent he didn't have a chance. Just as the ball was passing him, Marty made a dive at it, which threw him flat on the ground, grabbed the ball with his gloved hand, flipped it instantly to Mee, who stepped on the bag and doubled Crawford at first.

The Angels scored twice in the first when Staatz led off with a hit, went to second on McAuley's sacrifice and to third on Red Killifer's hit through Mee. Sam Ross caught Red so flat-footed off first with a throw that he beat it for second. Poole pegged nicely to Mee, but the youngster muffed the ball and Staatz scored on the error. Killifer stole third and came in after Griggs had walked while Poole and Ross were retiring Crawford.

Their other run was scored in the fifth, and was the only tally that can be charged up to Sam Ross. Old Rollie Zeider, who played third while Lindimore took a rest, busted a hit down the third base line. Stanage sacrificed him to second and he came in on Crandall's two-bagger.

Angels Win Six Straight.

By taking the game the Angels made it six straight, but losing a real pitchers' battle like that yesterday doesn't leave a bad taste behind it like the massacres Sunday and the other days of last week.

Walter McCredie yesterday announced the release of Harold Polson and Rudy Kallio, pitchers, to Salt Lake, the only Coast league club that declined to waive on them. They have already departed for San Francisco to join the Bees, who play Oakland there this week. Polson has been going bad all season, but it's a pretty safe bet that Kallio will turn in a lot of victories for Salt Lake, for he has had all kinds of stuff but has simply been unlucky.

This leaves Portland with Sam Ross the only veteran on the staff, for Pillette and Syl Johnson, the other two holdovers from last season, were considered youngsters when they joined the club late last year. For the remainder of his pitching, McCredie will have to depend on kids.

San Francisco, the league leader, plays here this week after a tough series in Seattle. Yesterday's score:

TIME RIPE FOR DASH UP MOUNT EVEREST

Political Obstacles Have Been Removed.

SCIENTISTS INTERESTED

Expedition Under Auspices of British Alpine Club and Royal Geographic Society.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Announcement that American newspapers will chronicle the adventures of the British explorers now setting out in the latest attempt to scale Mount Everest, the world's highest peak, was received with marked interest by officials of the National Geographic society.

Scientists were quick to point out that a newspaper story of the expedition will do much to popularize in the United States what promises to be a two-year struggle for the attainment of one of the earth's outposts which has so long defied human endurance. Since man reached the North and South poles, the climbing of the great mountain in the almost inaccessible heart of the Himalayas has been the dream of explorers.

America will not be represented on the exposition, which is backed by the British Alpine club and the Royal Geographic society and headed by Brigadier General C. G. Bruce, an explorer long familiar with North India and Tibet, and who accompanied the memorable Younghusband expedition into the forbidden city of Lahasa.

Preserve of British Explorers.

The mountains of northern India, Tibet and Afghanistan, the peaks of the Himalayas and the Hindu Kush are considered the preserve of British explorers and American organizations have no thought of putting a rival expedition in the field. Many officials believe, however, that a representative of the National Geographic society should accompany General Bruce, but thus far no steps have been taken to have an American assigned. The most noteworthy attempt to scale Mount Everest, made by others than British explorers, was undertaken some years ago by the Duke of Abruzzi, the Italian nobleman.

The interest in the Bruce expedition, now being manifested in northern India, is intense, according to Maynard Owens Williams, of the National Geographic Magazine, who has just returned from the far east. Mr. Williams, who not more than two months ago was in Darjeeling, the end of the railroad line in northern India, from which the Bruce expedition will start, said recently that the time was ripe for a dash to Mount Everest. Political obstacles which heretofore have mitigated against attempts to enter the territory from which the peak must be reached have been largely removed and the try of General Bruce and his compatriots will have the backing of the government of India.

How Expedition Will Operate.

According to reports received by the National Geographic society the Bruce expedition contemplates two years' work. A thorough reconnaissance of country surrounding the northern slopes of Mount Everest will be made this summer, with the hope of making the dash for the peak in the summer months of July and August, 1922.

It is General Bruce's plan, as outlined to the Royal Geographic society, to proceed north through the friendly state of Sikkim into Tibet and move across the Tingri Maidan plateaus so as to come up to the mountain from the north. No attempt will be made to pass through the Nepal because of the unfriendly attitude of the natives and the almost impassable nature of the country. Supplies will be received by way of the Arun river and the Indian government will be expected to furnish airplanes to aid in the survey.

Supply Camp High Up.

Whether airplanes can find landing places in the mountains and their use made practical will be determined by British army aviators in India. General Bruce holds the success of the expedition to depend largely upon the thoroughness of the summer's survey and ability to establish supply camps in the northern slopes of Mount Everest at a height of 25,000 feet. The peak is something over 29,000 feet.

The Duke of Abruzzi managed to get his camps as high as 22,000 feet, but man power was unable to go the additional distance. With a camp at 25,000 feet General Bruce believes human endurance is capable of the final dash. Much time during the first months will be spent in finding the easiest way from Kampa Dzong, in Tibet, over the Tingri plateau to the foot of Mount Everest. The way is over unexplored Tibetan country and will be sought carefully so as to assure the expedition of the movement of its supplies.

News of the progress of the expedition will come out of the vast mountain ranges by runners dispatched from time to time and perhaps over field wireless used to Gangkak, which maintains postal service to Darjeeling.

FARMERS TO BUY COAL

Orders to Be Pooled and Supply Obtained Direct From Mines.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va.,—Farmers of Ohio, Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky, Georgia, Alabama, Maryland, New York, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri and the New England states, through their farm bureau organizations, are ready to buy West Virginia coal direct from the mines, according to J. B. McLaughlin, secretary of the West Virginia farm bureau federation.

Negotiations have been conducted through Mr. McLaughlin with coal dealers of every section of the state of West Virginia county farm bureaus in Berkely, Jefferson and Greenbrier counties, West Virginia, are likewise taking steps toward pooling their coal orders and buying direct from the coal mines, Mr. McLaughlin said. Quotations on many thousand tons are already in Mr. McLaughlin's hands.

BURGLAR KITS PERFECT

Recently Captured Implements Exhibit Fine Workmanship.

LONDON — International burglars who have been captured of late in various European cities have displayed "kits" of such beauty and perfection of workmanship that the police have felt certain that there must exist somewhere a well-equipped factory for their manufacture.

A clew to the location was provided by the French police, who had arrested a well-known English visitor for smuggling. A search of his baggage revealed a dozen complete sets of burglar tools, a list of a dozen names of French crooks, and a London address on the back of a picture.

The London house was watched for several days and two crooks with long records were seen to enter it. A raid was carried out by a large force of policemen. A search of the house revealed an up-to-date plant for the manufacture of burglars' implements. An unusual feature was a tailor shop which specialized in the making of suits with cunningly contrived pockets to hold the tools without bulging.

Tools of all kinds were found—silk ladders, which might be concealed under the vest; jimmies, skeleton keys, containers for nitroglycerin; keyhole pliers, which are used for opening doors locked on the inside; and even gas pistols, which would render the victim unconscious for an hour or more.

The most interesting find probably was a small instrument connected to a small battery. Inquiry showed that it was a microphone specially invented for intensifying the sound made by the falling of the tumblers when revolving the knob of a safe. The almost inaudible sound of the falling tumblers was magnified by this instrument into a noise like thunder.

OIL SUPPLY IS FAILING

Geologist Asserts U. S. Product Will Be Exhausted in 16 Years.

COLUMBUS, O.—The oil supply of the United States will be exhausted in 16 years if present rates of consumption are kept up and no new producing territory is discovered, it is asserted by Professor John A. Bownocker, state geologist and professor of geology at Ohio State university.

According to Professor Bownocker, the United States has petroleum reserves amounting to 6,000,000,000 or 7,000,000,000 barrels. The rate of production in 1920 was 440,000,000 barrels a year. However this is thought to be the highest mark production will reach, Bownocker said geologists believe. The production rate is expected to decline this year.

Thus, Professor Bownocker points out, this country actually can produce oil for longer than 16 years, but at a constantly decreasing rate each year.

More than 60 per cent of the world's oil supply is produced in the United States. Much oil is imported here from Mexico, second in oil production, but, Professor Bownocker declared, at Mexico's present rate of proudction, her wells will cease to be a factor in two or three years.

Russian Caviare Unobtainable.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—One of the cruel results of bolshevism, from the standpoint of Washington hostesses, is the disapeparance of Russian caviare from the American market. Ordinarily no great dinner at the capital at this season is without the famed delicacy. It is said that a shipment of 200 pounds recently reached the United States, thanks to the enterprise of a merchant ship captain. It sold at retail in New York at $30 a pound.

JENNE AND SPEAROW TO WEAR WINGED M

Crack Vaulters to Compete Against New York.

BURTT TO BE OPPONENT

Record of Easterner, 12 Feet 6 Inches, a Mark Surpassed by Both Local Athletes.

BY GEORGE COWNE,

Multnomah Amateur Athletic club is assured points in the pole vault event in the dual track and field meet with the New York Athletic club next Saturday on Multnomah field. Both Eldon Jenne, Washington State college vaulter, and Ralph Spearow, vaulting specialist of the University of Oregon, will wear the Winged M emblem.

According to present reports, R. M. Burtt is the man the New York club is depending on to top the field in the pole vault. Burtt is a good man in this event, having a mark of 12 feet 6 inches, but if past performances count it is going to take a better climb than that to stop the two Multnomah vaulters.

The New Yorker holds the Metropolitan association championship, while for Jenne and Spearow it can be said they are without a doubt the class of the vaulters on the Pacific coast. Spearow sprang into prominence while competing for the Lincoln high school of Portland in 1915 and 1916, and his showing with the bamboo pole was so remarkable that the Multnomah club induced him to wear the colors of that institution.

University Colors Donned.

Following his graduation, Spearow did not enter a college, but continued to compete under colors of the Multnomah club. Last year he decided to enter the University of Oregon and this season found him competing for the Lemon-Yellow as a member of the freshman team.

Spearow had his best year in competition in 1919, when in two meets, the Pacific Northwest association championships held in Portland and the Pacific coast fixture held at Tacoma, he established two new marks. When Spearow set the new Pacific northwest mark he soared 12 feet 9¼ inches.

A few weeks later, at Tacoma in the Pacific coast meet, Spearow hung up a mark of 13 feet ⅜ inch, which still stands as a coast record. Incidentally, Spearow was coming close to the national mark of 13 feet 3 9-16 inches when he set the coast record.

Jenne Second to Spearow.

Jenne placed second to Spearow in both the northwest and Pacific coast meets. Jenne has done his best work in intercollegiate meets. In the Pacific coast conference meet in 1920 he startled the followers of track events with a vault of 13 feet ⅝ inch for a new coast conference record, and at the same time the best vaulting mark ever made on the coast. The record was 2-8 of an inch better than that made by Spearow in 1919. Previous to Jenne's remarkable performance the coast college record had been held by Leland Stanford Scott of Stanford university, whose best showing was 12 feet 10 inches.

Jenne won his event in the western Olympic games tryouts held at Pasadena, Cal., last year with a leap of 12 feet 6 inches, but in the final tryouts held at the Harvard stadium he tied for third at 12 feet 10 inches and lost out in the jump-off.

Jenne's latest achievement was in the national intercollegiate games held at Chicago Saturday, in which he tied for first place at an even 12 feet with Welch of Georgia Tech, Wilder, Wisconsin, and Gardner of Yale.

TAME MALLARDS ARE ISSUE

Owners of Ducks Hatched From Eggs Defy Deputy Warden.

PROSSER, Wash., June 20.—(Special.)—J. Edward Brown, deputy game warden, created a stir among the residents of Richland when he pounced upon a number of them and advised them that they were liable for a heavy fine under the state game laws for having migratory ducks in captivity.

Last spring F. Dresser, who at that time owned a farm on the Yakima river, found several nests of what Warden Brown said were mallard duck eggs. Mr. Dresser set a hen on these duck eggs and from the resulting hatch made presents to several friends of fine young ducklings. Among those who were recipients of these, which later proved to be such costly gifts, were George Gress, F. J. O'Brien and W. L. Muncey.

Now comes the game warden with his story of their lawlessness. Gress came through with a fine of $27.50 for having the migratory ducks in his possession, but O'Brien and Muncey advised the warden that the sky was an open field for the ducks and they had their permission to fly away at any time; that they were not penned up in any way; if they decided to take to their wings and travel, well and good. These men have paid no fine and will have to be shown where they are acting contrary to law before they do.

TRIAL OF EX-PLAYERS SET

Judge Friend to Sit in Case of Men Accused of Throwing Games.

CHICAGO, June 20.—Chief Justice McDonald today assigned the trial of 18 ex-baseball players and gamblers, charged with conspiracy to "throw" the 1919 world's series to Judge Friend, who announced he would set the case for next Monday. Benjamin Franklin of St. Louis, who with Carl Zork, a St. Louis manufacturer, is accused by the state of concocting the scheme, may have a separate trial as he is reported confined to his bed by illness.

Hal Chase also may escape trial for the present as he never has been arraigned here. Chase was arrested in California but released on a writ of habeas corpus. The state is not certain that Abe Attel, ex-prize fighter, who has been fighting extradition from New York, will be here for the trial.

LANDIS RUNS INTO BETTING

'Crooked Politicians' Scored for Allowing Gambling at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, June 20.—Judge Landis, commissioner of organized baseball, deplored open betting by "cheap shoestring gamblers" at the Pittsburg baseball park and criticised the police for permitting it in a statement issued today, after he attended the game between the Pirates and Philadelphia. He said the Pittsburg club was doing its best to combat the evil but that when arrests were made the gamblers were released.

Judge Landis' recommendation was to find the "crooked politicians, big and small, and nail their hides to the barn."

Ouimet Back From Hoylake.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Francis Ouimet, member of the American golf team recently defeated by the British at Hoylake, returned today on the Celtic. He said arrangements would be made for a return match, adding that the American defeat was due to unfamiliarity with conditions on the lonks.

VICEROY HAS NEW PLAN

Irish Paper Says "Black and Tans" May Be Withdrawn.

DUBLIN.—The statement is made in the Independent that Viscount Fitzalan (formerly Lord Edmund Talbot), the new viceroy for Ireland, obtained from the cabinet as a condition of his acceptance of the viceroyalty, an undertaking that the inception of his regime would be marked by the withdrawal of the auxiliary police, called in Ireland the "black and tans."

In official quarters in Dublin this statement is not confirmed. But it is generally taken to point to some change in the control of the auxiliary force.

Nominally the force is composed of men who are supposed to be cadets for the royal Irish constabulary awaiting appointment as district inspectors, and is therefore technically part of the police. But it is not controlled by the heads of the royal Irish constabulary and has its own commander-in-chief in General Tudor.

It is composed exclusively of ex-officers who served in the war, and numbers about 1500 men. It is not believed here that, in present conditions, it is likely to be disbanded.
