

FINEST OF CHERRIES HERE IN ABUNDANCE

Fruit Reaches Market at Reasonable Prices.

CANNING STOCKS GOOD

Raspberries, Currants and Loganberries Also Appear in Large Quantities at Stores.

It's cherry buying time in Portland now or should be, for this luscious fruit is displayed in plentiful quantities at reasonable prices in local markets.

This week has marked the inauguration of the annual export of Oregon cherries to cities all over the United States, for the cherries produced in this state satisfy the gastronomic cravings of the country on the same large scale that Oregon roses please lovers of the beautiful. Fortunately, home consumers are not seriously affected by the activities of the exporters, for there are enough cherries to go around.

Cherries are from 5 to 12 1/2 cents a pound, depending on quality. The predominance of variety just now, with an abundance of hand in the best condition, is the Royal Anne, which is not yet represented in large quantities, the quality is excellent. Bing will probably become the favorite next week. The little Kent or pie cherries are displayed in small quantities, and Lamberts have not started coming in yet.

Berries provide the housewife with pleasing dishes for the summer menu. The last days of the strawberry are at hand, but a number of other varieties of berries are taking the place of this favorite.

The time is just right for raspberries, black caps, currants and loganberries. Prices range from $1.10 to $2 a crate, depending on quality. The abundance of berries makes it possible for the consumer to purchase in generous amounts either for immediate table consumption or for transformation into a canned supply for a rainy day.

Berry prices, which are the lowest in many years, and the fact that sugar is still declining in price should be sweet music to the thrifty housewife who plans an active summer season. Sugar has dropped 30 cents a sack in the last week, and is quoted wholesale at $6.25 a sack, with corresponding reduction in small retail quantities.

Peaches are on display. Sweet peaches from California are on display in plentiful amounts, 25 to 40 cents a dozen, and the Oregon peaches are starting to make an appearance in small quantities. California plums of several varieties are on display, and are seen in a tempting array, and apricots are becoming numerous.

Watermelons are selling at 5 cents a pound, and the best grades of this fruit are expected to appear in early next week. Cantaloupes continue to occupy an important place in the markets. Oregon cantaloupes will not supplant the California brand for several weeks. Fresh figs are among the delicacies in the fruit line on display.

BOYS HELD AS THIEVES

Lads Surprised While Stealing Auto Parts Confess.

After stealing one automobile, it is alleged, and wrecking it, Joe Bukovsky, aged 17, and Joe Heredia, aged 14, appropriated another and were stripping it when they were caught by Police Inspectors Powell and Sobum at Twenty-eighth and Raleigh streets early yesterday morning. The two boys are said to have made complete confessions. They are being held for juvenile court authorities.

The boys are said to have admitted they first stole a machine belonging to George Haban at Twenty-fifth and Raleigh streets. After running it for several blocks they ran it into a sandpile and wrecked it. They then found an automobile belonging to W. V. Glasscock, 1003 Raleigh street, and were proceeding to steal the parts when the detectives surprised them. The boys were hiding in tall grass in a vacant lot nearby when they were captured.

CITY CLUB HEARS DOCTOR'S ADVICE. Diseases No Longer Contagious, Declares Chicagoan.

"Diseases that were called contagious diseases only a few years ago are now called preventable diseases," said Dr. Frederick Green of Chicago, secretary of the council of health of the American Medical association, in an address to the members of the City club at their meeting yesterday.

Through the discoveries of Pasteur and other noted scientists it has been possible to learn the causes of disease and the methods of prevention, he continued. "Every child in school should become acquainted with the use of a microscope and know how to use it."

Dr. Green asked for the co-operation of the people with the public health departments in educating the citizens in ways of preventing disease, thus adding to the length of life and also to their comfort and happiness.

L. D. Bosley, president of the club, outlined the programme for the year at the meeting and in doing so he said: "We shall renew our study of municipal problems through our committees and concentrate our efforts upon those activities which tend to advance the civic welfare, to raise the standard of ideals of citizenship and to increase the efficiency of our government."

TILLAMOOK CHEESE. "How my Sunday suppers became popular." One Sunday afternoon a few weeks ago, half a dozen of us went hiking. Later, the crowd dropped into our house to rest a few moments. But you know how moments lengthen out after a hike! "Supper time came and not enough cold chicken or any other one thing for a hungry half a dozen. "Then I remembered the Tillamook Cheese we'd bought the day before. In a jiffy, everyone was busy. We made a rabbit they all declared to be the best they'd ever eaten. Everyone wanted the recipe. So I'm giving it to you below. "Well, just this crazy, rich Tillamook rabbit, with pickles, preserves and steaming cups of coffee made my Sunday suppers famous. We have a jolly crowd almost every week now—and no trouble at all! "But let me tell you—it isn't my 'secret recipe' so much as the cheese. I always look for Tillamook on the rind when I buy cheese—because it is the best! Look for TILLAMOOK on the Rind! TILLAMOOK COUNTY CREAMERY ASSOCIATION, Tillamook, Oregon.
