Portland housewives may be the means of tiding the berry men of Multnomah county and adjacent territory through the period when the canning industry is recevering from financial reverses following last season's pack. It is proposed, through an agreement now under negotiation with the city council, to market in the city in the neighborhood of 190 tons of raspberries, loganberries, blackberries and blackcaps at a price fair to consumer and grower during blackberries and blackcaps at a price fair to consumer and grower during the month of July.

The berries will be sold at a new market area to be established in Yamhili street, between First and Front streets, and will be disposed of from grower or growers' association direct to the Portland housewives. It is probable that some berries will be marketed by the close of next week, but definite announcement will be forthcoming as soon as negotiations for the transaction are completed between Market Master Eastman and D. E. Towel, manager of the Co-Operative Berrygrowers' association of Gresham.

Commerce Body Backs Plan.

The negotiations are not in line with the strawberry flasce of a month age, inaugurated by Fred Wright of the Hubbard Berrygrowers' association, but are backed by the Portland Chamber of Commerce in an effort to avert a crieds that confronts the berry men of this county. Judge George E. Stapleton introduced the matter before the city council yesterday as spekesman of a committee from the Chamber of Commerce.

Berry growers of the Gresham neighborhood face the alternative of finding a market for 470 tons of small fruit during the next six weeks or allowing their season's work and investment to go to waste. The cannery which has handled their product in the past is closed down. The berry men are trying to raise enough capifinding a market for 470 tons of small fruit during the next six weeks or allowing their season's work and investment to go to waste. The cannery which has handled their product in the past is closed down. The berry men are trying to raise enough capital to open the cannery. If they are able to do that they will divide their berries between the Portland market and the cannery. If they fail with the cannery Portland is their only hope for an outlet to an enormous crop of berries.

New Industry Threatened.

New Industry Threatened.

The question of disposing of the crop is not merely one of preventing waste, but of saving a new industry worth thousands of dollars to the county, Judge Stapleton explained.

Fortland housewives do not stand to lose by the transaction, for one of the stipulations made by the council was that the market should be supplied with first-class fruit in quantities at the fairest price the growers could make and realize a profit on the transaction.

could make and realize a profit of the transaction.

The exact price will not be known until a meeting of the directors of the association at Gresham tonight, but it was indicated before the council that loganborries and blackberries would be about $1.10 the crate, Cuthbert raspberries and blackcaps, $1.50, and Mariborough raspberries $1.25 as a maximum price. A further reducant logans sould be about $1.10 ...

mean a great opportunity to Portland families with sugar prices at the present level, members of the council and the Chamber of Commerce committee declared. The refusal of canneries to handle fruit except at exceedingly low prices may not mean cheap canned fruit to the consumer who depends on the canned product. The actual canning costs are high and will amount to about $3 the 24-can case, according to figures submitted to the council.

The fact that canners are packing only a fraction of their usual output may hold up prices rather than force them down some members pointed them down, some members pointed out, but if Portland housewives make 1921 a "home canning" season they will have little to fear from the fruit supply, no matter what turn affairs may take.

The Chamber of Commerce delega-tion included Judge Stapleton, E. C. Johnson, W. O. Munsell, O. M. Plum-mer, F. W. Merrill and E. N. Wein-baum.

Portland Registers Greatest Decrease In Cost of Living!

-Babson's Report on business conditions throughout the country gives Portland first place in decrease of cost of living from June, 1920, to May, 1921-the percentage being 19.1. This is a much greater decrease than is shown by any other large city, including New York, Buffalo, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Houston and San Francisco. This report is considered authentic and shows conclusively that Portland merchants are giving the residents of this city the lowest prices on commodities known anywhere in the United States.
