

HAWLEY DECLARED WINNER IN ACTION

Wife Has Gained Nothing by Suit, Says Attorney.

DECISION DENIES DIVORCE

Woman Merely Has Succeeded in Breaking Up Home and Killing Husband's Love, Is View.

That it was Willard Hawley rather than his wife who won a victory in the recent divorce action in which the state supreme court denied to Mr. Hawley the divorce granted him by the lower tribunal, was the declaration yesterday of Harrison Allen, attorney for young Hawley.

Mr. Allen declared that it was Mrs. Hawley who originally applied for a divorce and a large share of the Hawley fortune. He pointed out that her petition was not only denied in the lower court, but that her husband got the divorce instead. Allen contended that even though the supreme court failed to uphold the divorce to Mr. Hawley the legal action was none the less a victory for his client.

Woman Declared Loser. Mr. Allen's statement follows: "The decision in the Hawley case has been characterized as a victory for Marjorie Hawley. It is quite to the contrary. She left her husband absolutely against his will and in spite of earnest solicitation of his parents and himself that she remain with him. She asked $3000 temporary alimony, $1500 suit money, $15,000 attorneys' fees, a division of her husband's property of $12,000 in cash instead, the custody of the minor child and $250 a month for its support.

Nothing Won, He Says. "Willard Hawley's position was one of self-defense born of necessity, and the divorce finally granted to him, and to which I think he was clearly entitled but which the supreme court set aside, was largely in accordance with testimony given by her at the trial. Her case was dismissed. "What has she gained? Nothing that she asked. What has she accomplished? The breaking up of a beautiful home, a complete and everlasting estrangement from the love and association of her estimable young husband and from the affection and tender solicitude of Mrs. Hawley Sr., who were at all times eager and willing to shower upon the young couple and the wisdom's grand daughter all that the heart might wish for and all that their great wealth could buy."

TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS 1122

Carelessness Is Blamed for 629 Mishaps in July.

Carelessness is declared to be the cause of 629 traffic accidents out of a total of 1122 during July, according to a report filed yesterday by Captain Lewis, in charge of the traffic squad of the police department. Failure to give right of way was said to have caused 194 accidents. Cutting corners caused 83 and failure to signal road block 29. Reckless driving caused eight and defective brakes were blamed for seven. Speeding, too lightly bright lights and jay walking were some of the other reasons given.

Injuries were sustained by 95 persons and two were killed. Automobile accidents totaled 644, streetcars 140, motorcycles 72, bicycles 53, wagons 41, and streetcars 29. Trains 3, coasters 1 and concrete mixers 1. A total of $4223 was collected in municipal court fines for carelessness and speeding.

WOMAN ROBBED IN STREET

Handbag Grabbed by Thief Contains Diamond Valued at $700.

A purse snatcher got away with $15 in cash and two diamonds, one a diamond solitaire valued at $700, about midnight Sunday, when he grabbed the handbag of Mrs. Ethel Davis, 341 Fourteenth street, who was walking with Mrs. Bessie Fisher of the Cromwell apartments, near the corner of Sixth and Jefferson streets. The man, who is described as being about 5 feet 10 inches tall, approached the women, darted suddenly toward them and grabbed the bag from Mrs. Davis' hand. He was gone before they had time to scream.

His description tallies with that of the man who tried about an hour later to rob the apartment of Mrs. J. T. Southard, 55 Luccetta street, but was frustrated when Mrs. Southard awakened and attempted to give an alarm. The man jumped out of a window and ran away.

IN AN outdoor setting of rare artistic beauty, the entertaining story of "The Barbarian" is unfolded on the screen of the Rivoli in a well-balanced cast of film players. The theme centers around Eric Straive, a young man who has grown up in the rugged grandeur of the Canadian forests, unspoiled by the confining atmosphere of nearby cities. Into his life comes the millionaire president of a great syndicate, who wants to obtain Straive's lands, which contain a fortune in rich mineral deposits. The party from civilization attempts to get this territory by unfair means, and there naturally ensues a struggle between the constrained personality of the young man and the millionaire. An interesting phase is added to the plot when the millionaire's daughter, the capitalist and the man of nature fall in love. The story ends with a final fade-out that is perfect from both the artistic and dramatic points of view. Jane Novak, with her blonde beauty, is the central figure in the drama and Monroe Salisbury plays opposite her as "the barbarian" of the woods. The work of Barney Sherry, George Novak, and the Cudahy stands out prominently. The cameraman who photographed the unusual scenic effects is also largely responsible for the success of the picture. "Brownie," a remarkable dog actor, is featured in a two-reel comedy which reaps a harvest of laughs. The canine film player keeps the fun going with

NAMING OF COUNCIL CREST IS RECALLED

Church Moderator Claims Distinction of Christening.

MEETING HELD IN 1898

Dr. William E. Barton Declares Indian Sessions Did Not Give Title to Heights.

The story of how Council Crest received its name was told again as the result of the visit to Portland of Dr. William E. Barton of Oak Park, Ill., moderator of the national council of Congregational churches, who claims the distinction of having officially christened the "crest" of the city.

Probably the majority of the citizens of Portland take it for granted that Council Crest received its name from the fact that the Indians used to hold councils there, but that is far from the case, according to Dr. Barton, who declared the crest received its name at the time of and in honor of the national council of Congregational churches held in Portland in July, 1898.

Story of Naming Told. "The Indians may or may not have held councils there," declared Dr. Barton, "but it was decidedly not this which gave the name to the height." The story of the naming of the crest as told by him yesterday followed: "In July, 1898, the national council of Congregational churches met in Portland. At the close of one of the afternoon sessions George H. Himes of Portland invited about 25 men and women to take a drive. There were about five or six carriages, as I remember, and there were a few women, but most of those who went were men. As we were leaving the drive we inquired of Mr. Himes the name of the place we were to visit. He said it was 'Council Crest.' It was simply one of the hills overlooking the city and one from whose summit we could obtain a fine view of the city and the hills around it. As we started we agreed to name it and to commemorate in the name the national council then in session. "We rode up a deep ravine, as I remember, and around the hill, approaching the top from the back. As we slowly ascended in carriages we shouted from carriage to carriage, 'Council Crest, Council Crest, Council Crest.' The name 'Council Hill' and 'Council Bluff' were some of the names proposed. The man who made the happy suggestion was not accepted. Rev. Leavitt H. Hallock, he proposed 'Council Crest.' The national council then in session, wondered why it took any of us so long to think of it. "We got to the top as the sun was setting. The committee advised there was one house that stood back a little distance, a farm house, I think. The house was the former dean of women of Oregon Agricultural college. Mr. Campbell is a well-known Portland man who has made his home at the University club. After a honeymoon trip they will make their home in Portland.

Former Oregonian Dead. Mrs. Ada Cornish Hertsche Passes Away at Omaha, Neb. The death of Mrs. Ada Cornish Hertsche, a former Oregon resident, occurred at the home of her sister, Mrs. Joseph M. Metcalf, in Omaha, Neb., yesterday. Death followed a long illness. She was associated with Mrs. Abigail Scott Duniway in organizing the first suffrage association in Oregon in 1894. She gave the chief address at the congress of women which was held in June, 1896, and was vice-president and treasurer and a member of the executive committee of the state association. Her death constitutes the only murder during the month. Three deaths by automobiles were investigated. The victims were Valdicated that he would make all possible concession in price to obtain the exposition for the Ross island site, but that he could not donate one of the islands. The same communication from the Ross island committee suggests the need of prompt action by the council to prevent profiteering in rentals for parking space and concessions in grounds adjacent to the exposition site, wherever it may be located.

ROSS ISLAND SITE URGED

Purchase by Portland for 1925 Fair Is Advocated. The purchase of Ross island by the city of Portland for the 1925 exposition site is advocated by the Ross island fair site committee in a communication filed yesterday with the city council. The committee advises the purchase under the conditions that the island be turned back to the city for a public park when the exposition is over. The communication stated that it had proposed to John Kierman, owner of the property, that he donate one of the two islands to the city on condition that the city buy the other at the average price now asked for the entire property. Mr. Kierman had in-
