GOLF OF NORTHWEST IS SURPRISE IN EAST

Course Much More Difficult Than Anything Out Here, Says Portland Player on Return.

BY GEORGE COWNE.

The showing made by the team of northwestern golfers in the national amateur championships at St. Louis last week opened the eyes of eastern erns for the first time to the quality of gelf played in this section. So de clares Dr. O. F. Willing, first of the northwesterners to return home.

Although none of the western club wielders advanced further than the second round of match play in the tournament, so much golfing ability was displayed by the members of the northwfest team as to gain the re-spect of everyone who witnessed the Course Found Difficult. "The course at St. Louis is much more difficult than anything we have in the northwest," said Dr. Willing. "Every hole of the course calls for straight drives, with little roll, and second shots that stay exactly where they are put. As for the greens, they were so fast as to seem almost un-fair. On a downhill putt it was al-most impossible to sink the ball. "It was the terrific heat that made the greens so fast. Where the ground rolled considerably the rapidity with which the putt rolled approached the unfair."

A golfer was decidedly out of luck who did not pace every shot straight down the course, said Dr. Willing. The greens were well trapped with deep bunkers, mostly close in. Due to heavy rains, which usually fell at night, the greens became muddy. This mud was a big handicap to the players, for it would collect on the hall. ers, for it would collect on the bal and prevent accurate work with the putter. In the first two rounds of medal play the players were permit-ted to remove the mud from the ball-but in the match play they were de-nied this privilege. Dr. Willing declares he saw many putts of five feet and less missed because a lump of mud on the ball would throw it out of Jones had Dr. Willing five down at the end of the morning round. The Portland player's chief difficulty was in sinking his putts. Against Reggie Lewis, whom Dr. Willing played on the first day, the Portland golfer was getting his putts down in fine style, but against Jones he could not get the touch of the greens. In the American league a good southpaw gives the Yankees more trouble than the Indians. Possibly this can be explained by the shift sine-up which Speaker uses.
