

BIG FAIR INDORSED BY RESEARCH CLUB

Approval Given Exposition at Luncheon Meeting.

400 PROMISE SUPPORT

Opening Gun of Tax Levy Drive Brings to Campaign Pledge of Support and Service.

Four hundred women, members of the Portland Research club, heard the message of the 1931 exposition yesterday noon at the Multnomah hotel, at the regular weekly luncheon meeting, and indorsed the project unanimously with every evidence of enthusiasm. They pledged their whole-hearted support and volunteered their services for any work they can do to aid the cause.

The women heard the opening gun of the campaign fired, for the meeting was the first since the committees were fully organized and the pre-election educational work launched. The campaign started off under a full head of steam in the morning and will continue until election day, November 19.

Informing Address Made.

The 1931 exposition campaign had been assigned as the programme topic by the Portland Research club and Mayor Baker, Julius E. Meier, chairman of the exposition committee, and F. V. Fisher, campaign manager, had been invited to explain the project. The three made informing talks with the exposition as their theme and at the conclusion of the meeting all were of one mind as to the merits of the exposition plan and no doubt remained that the club membership would be 100 per cent in favor of the big project.

Mayor Baker told of the favorable results that would be realized throughout the state. He said the exposition would serve to "sell" Oregon to the state as a whole, to bring from everywhere to the great material resources and scenic beauty of Oregon.

Exposition Benefits Detailed.

Campaign Manager Fisher outlined briefly the plan of bringing the nation and the world, figuratively speaking, to Oregon and told of the greatly widened field that would come to the state as a result. He said this would give Oregon a definite objective toward which to work, without which the state would stand still.

A. M. Meier discussed the financial plan, whereby it is proposed to raise $2,000,000 by a tax to be voted at the special city election November 19, an additional $1,000,000 by subscriptions to the exposition stock, and $3,000,000 by a tax to be voted at a state election.

In illustrating how light these taxes would be, he said that to the small homeowner with property having an assessed valuation of $1000, the tax for exposition purposes would be $2.12 a year for three years, while the benefits from the exposition in increased property values would be much larger.

Campaigners Are Encouraged.

The campaigners felt rather good about their first victory and were proud of the 100 per cent indorsement of the club. However, they expect some opposition and have issued an open invitation to everyone, friend or foe, who wants more information on the exposition to ask questions freely, promising to answer all inquiries addressed to any phase of the project. Facilities have been provided at campaign headquarters in the Corbett building, where questions should be sent.

Plans for reaching large numbers of citizens in groups were completed yesterday. H. J. Frank was announced as chairman of the manufacturers and industrial department, which includes the utilities and industrial plants generally, and J. C. English is head of the merchants and retail division. In both these departments the campaign committee will use speakers and literature to explain the merits of the exposition.

Odds and Ends

BY LILLIAN TINGLE.

ONE of the minor economies possible by the use of "unconsidered trifles" lies in the utilization of orange and lemon rinds that might otherwise be thrown away.

Home-canned peel is easily made and helps to lower the cost of holiday dishes such as mince, fruit cake and plum pudding. Besides being useful as a confection or "candy substitute" or a garnish for fancy cakes, cookies, fruit salads and desserts.

Following is detailed recipe for preserving the peel. This can be prepared at this time in order to be ready for Thanksgiving mince pie.

Candied Orange Peel—Save all orange skins, and throw them into a crock filled with brine, using 1 cup salt to 4 quarts water. Use a plate to keep the skins well below the brine or they may become mouldy.

When the crock is full, or whenever convenient, wash the peels in several waters to remove the salt, and scrape away any fibrous "stringy" material. Do not, however, remove all the firm white parts. Simmer gently, changing the water as may be necessary until all trace of salt is removed; then cook until tender in just enough water to cover, adding (if a slightly acid taste is desired) a little lemon juice or citric acid to give a pleasant acidity, though this is not always done. When the rind is nearly tender place several pieces one above the other and cut, if desired, into neat strips.

This is best done before putting into the acidified water. When quite tender, add sugar gradually, boiling or boiling and letting stand alternately until the syrup is thick and the peel rich and clear looking.

Drain and spread on greased platters or on sticks to dry slightly; then roll in fine granulated sugar and store in wooden boxes.

If to be used for mince-cake, plum pudding or fruit cake, the peel may be left uncut, if desired and put up in jars in the very thick syrup instead of drying. When wanted for use, it should be drained from the syrup and put through the food chopper.

The remaining syrup may be used to give a pleasant orange flavor to mince-cake, fruit cakes, puddings or pudding sauce, or may be used in fig or raisin pie, where a little hint of orange flavor is liked. Lemon or grapefruit peels may be similarly treated.

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets absorb the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away go indigestion and stomach troubles, the rest of the ailment—clogged tongue, poor appetite, a lacy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without gripping, cramps or pain. Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like, 15c and 30c—Adv.

Symphony Is Most Complex of Orchestra Settings.

Melodies Run Through Elaborate and Intricate Compositions.

BY CAVERLY BEAUMONT.

THE composer who first grouped the instruments into four families was Franz Josef Haydn, and for this reason he is called the "father of the modern orchestra." He is also called "the father of the symphony," for he was the first to make these pieces for orchestra in four parts. A "symphony" is to the orchestra what a "sonata" is to the violin, and he wrote the most elaborate composition for that particular instrument. In fact, the "symphony" grew out of the "sonata," which in turn developed from the old-fashioned "suites"—those sets of old-fashioned dances which Bach and Handel used to write. You remember some of them! There would be a fast dance first; then a slow one, a stately "Sarabande," perhaps; finally, a lively dance again—a "gigue," maybe.

The first movement of a symphony is quick and is the most elaborate, always having two principal melodies or "themes." The first theme usually sing the other, or vice versa. When the tale really begins, characters are described, they act and talk and many ideas are discussed, leading up to new surprises, but eventually returning to the first theme. The second movement is slower, while the third is playful and lively, and the fourth always the fastest of all.

In designating the movement of a symphony, the names of the old-fashioned dances gave place to simple Italian words indicative of mood. For instance when you look at the programme of the Portland symphony orchestra November 2, you will see under the Mendelssohn symphony which is to be played these words—allegro vivace, meaning quick and lively; andante, slow; con moto moderato, fairly fast; presto, very fast. These are the names of the movements of that particular symphony. Mozart and Beethoven both followed the ideas of "Papa" Haydn, but it was Beethoven who brought the symphony to its state of perfection. As one writer has said, "Beethoven built a palace, where Mozart had started a charming garden house, on the plans of Haydn."

Tomorrow's talk will be about Mendelssohn, who wrote the symphony to be played a week from tomorrow night.

Portland Street Names

The year of 1851 is important in the history of Portland, for many of the pioneers of the city and state whose memory still lives crossed the plains or landed from sailing vessels and took up their residence in the young village that year.

Patrick Raleigh, for whom R street was named, was one of these and came with his family by steamer, having shipped a cargo of merchandise by sailing vessel. He was born in Ireland on January 1, 1817, and married Mary Louise Rain in 1844 just before he emigrated to New York.

Coming to Portland in 1851, he established a merchandise store on the southeast corner of First and Stark streets and the building which he erected there still stands, one of the first brick structures built in Portland. Later he took up land in Yamhill county and engaged in cattle raising and farming. There he had the reputation of being one of the few who were not molested by the Indians on account of his honest dealing with them.

He held great confidence in the future of Portland and became the owner of much land, one piece, known as Raleigh's out-let, embracing the triangular piece extending from Stark to Arkeny and from Broadway to Twelfth street. On the lot where the imperial hotel now stands he built his home which stood for many years.
