In Colonel Bury's 14th section of his Mount Everest narrative he gives details as the expedition's difficulties, which however, were overcome to the extent of finding what seems to be a practical spirated to the mountain, as told in his brief dispatch to The Oresonian, published on October 11.

As predicted by scientista, the expedition will be able to go further useli nearly spring, and Colonel Bury's dispatch to would seem to substantiate a report from similar sources, to the effect that the expedition will return to Darpeleiling the latter part of October.

Students of the stuation believe that if the expedition could find what its members believe to be a practical approach to Mount Everest under such trying weather corditions, when spring members believe to the extenditions, when spring members believe to the a practical approach to Mount Everest under such trying weather corditions, when spring the following members believe to the a practical approach to Mount Everest under such trying weather corditions, when spring the following the camp was curiously still towering 7000 feet above us, while we were going the following the provided down on us from the west.

Clouds Low in Valley. The following day was wet at starting, with clouds low down in the valley, and we saw much white an-dromeda on the hillside. After going a short way we passed the surveyors camp, for the weather had prevented their work. As we rose higher the rain became snow, and by the time we arrived at our advanced base camp it was snowing steadily.

The camp is situated at an elevation of more than 17,000 feet in a small grassy hollow, with good shelter from the wind. From the camp clear weather there is a fine view Mount Everest westward and also the big glaciated peaks northward, the side of our tent was a regular Alpine garden, with three kinds of gentians; lovely, little, white saxi-frage, inside of whose yellow cups were yellow and brown spots; pretty pink androsage, dwarf blue delphiwith a single deep blue flower, light blue, musk-scented delphinium, with an overpowering odor. The last named is said to be a great preventive against lice.

We had plenty of time to observe the animal life up here, for in the next few days the wenther got stead-lify worse. In the afternoon we were in the midst of the usual snowstorm. The bad weather continued to September 17, when there was a sudden change. This time we did not hurry or rush to the upper camp, but utilized the day by climbing a snow peak 21,300 feet high to the south. Leaving camp at 2 o'clock in the morning, with 13 degrees of frost, we climbed up to the ridge post camp at 20,000 feet. The moon was full and made the going as easy as by daylight.

Every peak, from Bakalu to Mount Everest, stood out sharply in the brilliantly clear atmosphere, and even Kanchenjunga and Jannu, though So miles away, were clearly visible. The stillness was most wonderful. I never have seen the moon shine as brightly. Far away to the south, over the plains, there was constant lightning. As the gray dawn gradually began to show on the east we could make out great thunder.

Sikkim.

Never was seen such a wonderful sunrise. Westward towered the ley cliffs of Mount Everest, now white and with a deep purple sky behind. All of a sudden the whole mountain crest became golden purple, the sky changing to a deep orange. Shafts of sunlight almost simultaneously struck sunlight almost simultaneously struck the rock crest of Maktala. A few ninutes later the vast sea of cloud glowed with a rosy light. Like live things all the high peaks emerged from that great sea, from the distant peaks of the trans-Himalayan range on the watershed of the Brahamaputra to the great mass of Kanchenjunga.

Twenty-two of the 140 springs at Saratoga are radio active and for centuries the Indians brought their old chiefs and warriors there for treatment. The curative results of the springs for rheumatism and dis-eases of old age were long ago noted. The same thing is true of the hot springs in Arkansas and Colorado and springs in Arkansas and Colorado and most of the European spas. One day I saw a gray wolf stalking them, but on seeing me he loped away. I also met red fox and hares at more than 19,000 feet. During a short improvement of the weather, Messrs, Bullock and Mailory moved up to the next camp, established at 20,000 feet, only to be driven back the next day by a still heavier snow. In those days of forced in action we climbed a rocky ridge to the south, but acrobatics at more than 19,000 feet are quite exhausting.

September 23—At the first opportunity we hurried up to the hill post camp, at just 26,000 feet, form whose top there was a giorious view eastward over a vast sea of clouds covering the Arun valley and Nepal. Kanchen, Junga and Jannu were lower and westward, with Mount Everest, with its various ridges, showing clearly against a deep blue sky about ten milest ong, as clouds rapidly rolled up.

Report Remarkable Gains in Weight.

"I gained 12 pounds, my wife gained 26 pounds and my daughter is gaining day by day taking Taniac. It's the biggest surprise of our lives and all our friends and neighbors are talking about it. This medicine has made a wonderful change in every one of us. Before I got Taniac I could hardly drag one foot after the other. I had indigestion perfectly awful. In fact we were all regular dyspeptics. We all swear by Taniac now at our house. It ought to be in every home. It's the world's greatest every home. It's the world's greatest family medicine."
