MOON IS FOUND SPEEDING

Dreadful Things in Store.

BY WILLIAM BIRD. (Copyright, 1921, by The Oregonian.) LONDON, Dec. 11.—(Special Cable.) -The full and frightful consequences of the Einstein theory are just beginning to be appreciated. Too many people up to this time have gone quietly about their business—if any—without regard to the professor and Tacoma survive. his advanced ideas (not to use the longer and ugiler word "propaganda"), blissfully ignorant of the fact that, while they were thus occupied, the professor was patiently at work undermining the very bases of Dallas hospital of heart disease. Mr.

Greenwich observatory have just discovered that, thanks to the Einstein theory of relativity, the moon has speeded up in its orbit and is now 800 yards (about half a mile) ahead of the point where it was 24 years ago—relatively speaking, of course.

If this sort of thing goes on—and it will go on—they declare, unless something is done about it, it won't be many million years before we shall have two or three full moons every month and four or five tides made near shall have two or three full moons of Clarke county. Burial will be instead of two every day.

General De

General Derangement Seen. Imagine the consequences, Visitors at summer hotels, when that time comes, will be obliged to overhear the moonings of moonstruck couples on the verandas at least twice as Foundation Fund.

often as they now do.

Criminals, "taking advantage of the dark of the moon," will have twice as many opportunities for their fell deeds. Graveyard ghosts will scarcely get any rest at all, and the demand for rabbits' feet will force the price far out of reach of the common man obliged to pass by a cemetery on his way home from his nocturnal toils. All this, coupled with the fact that publishers of almanacs and calendars will have to scrap their whole stock of tables and plates, means a direct loss that is certain to be reflected in higher taxes, unemployment and general misery. And why?

Simply because a man with a fine sounding title and an unmistakably German name has been allowed to spread his subversive doctrine among the patriotic and conservative masses.

And That Isn't All.

Nor is this all. The matter of the tides alone concerns every citizen, iltitie as he may realize it. If it is true today—and it has never been successfully contested—that time and tide wait for no man, how much more so will it be the case when said tides are bobbing up and down every few hours along the American coasts

In view of this menace, what is be ing done by our public authorities? Can anybody point to a single bill introduced into the parliament of any allied country, putting a stop to this sort of tampering with things that as they are and that the vast majority of people the world over would prefer to maintain on their prenent historical and traditional basis? To look at the record one would think that our legislators were perfectly content to have the moon racing around in its orbit at a reckless pace, in defiance of all the laws of celestial traffic and astronomy.

Eight-Day Week Loomie.

Eight-Day Week Looming. And if the moon is to be allowed to break the laws with impunity the ex-ample is sure to spread. The next thing the sun will join the race and we shall have eight days in a week and the most popular poem in the English language will have to be revised to read:

Thirty-five days bath September, April, June and November, All the rest have thirty-six, Excepting February, which alone Hath thirty-two, and in bisectile or leap years, thirty-three.

You see, the whole rhyme and swing of the thing is destroyed. There will be 424 days in a year and this in turn is sure to be used by unscrupulous landlords as a new pretext for raising rents. By and large, then, there is little to be hoped from our legislators, who, as usual, are too busy looking out for their own narrow political interests to concern themselves with the gen-eral welfare, and the only chance of avoiding calamity lies in an aroused and awakened public opinion. People who want to avoid having the sun rise and wake the baby at ock in the morning should organize now before it is too late and make their sentiments felt.
