

EASIER IMMIGRATION LAW HELD UNLIKELY

Congress Little Disposed to Let Down Bars.

PRESENT LAW NEAR END

Lawmakers Generally Are More Inclined to Increase Than Relax Restriction on Incomers.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

(Copyright, 1921, by the New York Evening Post, Inc., Published by Arrangement.) WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 20.—(Special.)—The present immigration law, which was passed early last spring for the duration of one year, is now close to its termination, and a committee of congress is taking testimony with a view to determining what changes, if any, to make in the law.

The general disposition of congress on this subject is clear. The house and the senate are rarely so nearly unanimous about anything as they are now about the immigration law. The law will not be made any less strict than it now is. If any change is made it is more likely to be in the direction of reducing the number of immigrants admitted.

As it has turned out, several countries had exhausted their quotas before the first half of the year had passed. This happened even during a period of practically no demand for new labor in the United States. Unless the present law is renewed, and unless the principle of right restriction of immigration is adopted as a permanent policy, there can be no question that America will be deluged just as soon as the first period of prosperity arrives.

The practically universal sentiment in Washington is to continue to restrict immigration. There is no possibility of the present law being made more lax. The number of members of the house and senate who believe in more lax immigration is practically negligible. There might conceivably be enough members to delay the passage of a new law, but in any case the call on the merits of the policy they would be swamped.

Practically the only persons who favor more lax immigration are certain racial groups, especially Hebrews, who would make it possible to bring in large numbers of their race from the east and other points in eastern Europe; a few commercial interests, such as the steamship companies, which profit largely from the carrying of immigrants; and a few large employers, who want a continuing supply of raw labor at low prices.

All the specific proposals that have been made so far for changes in the law when it comes to the coming spring are in the direction of further restriction of immigration. A restriction proposed by Representative Johnson of Washington would prohibit as to bar out all immigrants except close relatives of persons already here, and Senator King of Utah would reduce the percentage from 3 to 2 per cent.

Probably the most intelligent proposal so far made is one on the basis not the census of 1910, but that of 1900. A fixed percentage based on the census of 1900 would set the maximum number of immigrants from western European countries and would keep the number from eastern and southeastern Europe down to the minimum.

Acute alcoholism, brought about by overindulgence in moonshine liquor, was said by police yesterday to have caused the death of J. E. Tuberculosis Survey Is Made.

A tuberculosis survey of the Klamath Indian reservation has just been completed by Miss L. Grace Holmes of the department of surveys of the Oregon Tuberculosis association, the survey having been made at the request of the superintendent, W. G. West. Ninety-one families in all parts of the reservation were visited and 60 suspects were located. Dr. E. A. Pierce of Portland held two clinics in which 36 Indians showed some symptoms of tuberculosis, most of them in early stages. A number of borderline cases were located in the government boarding school. The death rate from tuberculosis among the Indians is somewhat higher than in other parts of the state, a total of 36 deaths having occurred from the disease in the past five years. There are on the reservation about 1200 Indians. Based on the average number in a family, 213 persons were exposed by the 56 who have died in the five-year period.

LEGION OFFICER RESIGNS

STATE ADJUTANT EIVERS TO RETIRE FROM SERVICE.

Duties as Head of National Play Society of Organization Demand His Attention.

Edward J. Eivers, first temporary chairman of the American Legion in Oregon and department adjutant of the ex-service men's organization since inception in this state, tendered his resignation to Lane Goodell, department commander, yesterday afternoon, verifying a verbal notice of November 15 and taking effect January 1. His successor will be chosen at the next meeting of the department executive committee.

The recent election of Mr. Eivers as head of the national playground society of the American Legion, that of the "40 Hommes et 8 Chevaux," has compelled him to give so much time to that organization that he felt it would not be fair for him to remain in the post of state adjutant, he explained in a letter to be submitted to the state committee. At the same time, he is taking over the advertising and circulation management of the Pacific Legion, official publication of the American Legion in Oregon and Washington, with a view in view which is expected to relieve department headquarters of the financial problem which has been constantly in the office during his three years' tenure as adjutant.

Mr. Eivers long has been associated with military affairs, entering the Oregon national guard in 1910 as a private, serving in successive grades in the ranks until commissioned a second lieutenant in 1911. During the world war he served overseas from December, 1917, to February, 1919, as captain of the machine-gun company of the 162d "Old Oregon" infantry.

On his return he attended the St. Louis caucus of the legion on its preliminary organization in the United States and was elected by the delegates as first temporary chairman for Oregon. The first caucus of the legion in this state elected Mr. Eivers as state adjutant, to which office he was re-elected by the last two state conventions.

62 WORK IN WOODYARD

CITY TO FURNISH JOBS FOR UNEMPLOYED MEN.

Foreman Says Laborers Show Good Spirit and No Desire to Loaf Away Time.

Sixty-two unemployed men braved the weather yesterday to work three hours at the municipal woodyard in the old Northwest Steel plant at the foot of Sheridan street for three meal tickets and 25 cents to purchase cheap lodging for the night. The force is expected to be more than 100 today, and actual cutting of logs probably will begin.

The men displayed good spirit and no desire to loaf, according to C. H. Martin, formerly employment man with the Northwest Steel company, who is in charge of the woodyard. He found the men clearing out planking in the old plate shop of the plant. Today call logs will be hoisted out of the river by donkey engine and rolled into the shop for the cross-cut saw and sledges men.

The city employment office and American Legion employment bureau are sending men to the woodyard who report that they have no funds or lodges. The city employment office report direct to the plant for work or residence of the city may refer men without funds to them.

Preference given to men with families and ex-service men, but all are placed who can be supplied with work. The rooms of the bureau, upstairs at 174 Fourth street, are filled daily with crowds of unemployed. Short time jobs of almost any kind are sought. The bureau is in position to distribute shoes or men's clothing in cases where applicants have insufficient clothing to protect them from the weather.

SOLDIER'S BODY ARRIVES

REMAINS OF ALAN V. MERCER HERE FROM OVERSEAS.

Cooston Youth First Representative of Oregon Unit to Lay Down His Life in France.

The body of Alan V. Mercer, first representative of an Oregon unit to lay down his life in France in the recent war, arrived in Portland from overseas yesterday en route to his former home at Cooston, near Marshfield, by several hundred men and women who arrived yesterday morning and were sent out later to various cities of the northwest. Four of the seven men were Oregonians.

He died of pneumonia in September shortly after the arrival of his unit on French soil. His body was buried in a little cemetery at Talence, France, where it lay until exhumed for return to Oregon.

Other Oregon men whose bodies arrived yesterday were Bert E. Velain, of Myrtle Creek, company B, 23d engineers; Harry L. Rice of Silverton, Or., battery B, 14th field artillery, and Robert F. Ingalls, headquarters at army, Cooston, Or.

WHAT CONGRESS DID AS ITS DAYS' WORK.

Senate. Bill passed appropriating $20,000,000 for relief of the destitute in Russia.

Capper replied to the criticism made by Secretary Weeks on the soldier's bill. A resolution was offered by Senator Robinson to investigate the exercise of political influence on appointments under the civil service.

Agreement made to vote on the bill amending the federal reserve act. House. Fillibuster by democrats proved effective in causing anti-lynching bill to be postponed indefinitely.

Floor Leader Mondell announced that Russian relief bill would be disposed of tomorrow.

court-martial? Chairman Brandegee asked. "I don't know," Taylor said the second hanging was similar to the first.

Harrison told of another lynching after the armistice, which he declared was directed by "hard-boiled" Smith. "This was my first," said Harrison, "lifting his left arm, 'was broken while trying to save myself from 'hard-boiled' Smith and a couple of his sergeants."

On Manks Denied. The witness said he saw men taken to the firing line without gas masks or gas as a form of punishment. "I was not the cause of the lynching," Harrison said the victim had been ordered by Smith to sweep the stockyard with a toothbrush, "and they had a little party when they were court-martialed," Senator Overman, democrat, North Carolina, asked.

"Yes, the colonel cursed me and I cursed him back and he had me sent to the firing line after trial. His name was Colonel Holdbrook. If I ever get him I'll make him remember me. They wouldn't give me a gas mask, and I couldn't get any due to gas, and the medical record shows."

Soldier Not Allowed to Testify. Questioned by Senator Watson, democrat, Georgia, whose charge is that American soldiers were illegally executed in France, led to the inquiry, Taylor, the Philadelphia witness, said the evidence in the court-martial of the defendant was given in French, but an interpreter was in attendance. The crime was rape.

"Was the man allowed counsel?" Senator Brandegee asked. "One American officer was there. He asked some questions." After the hanging, Taylor said he saw the man's heart and brain removed, "to see if he was crazy." "Who did that?" "A major in the American medical corps." "Know his name?" "No." "Was the Detroit sergeant allowed to tell his side of it to the French court?" Senator Watson asked.

"No, sir; he wasn't asked to testify, but he did say he wasn't responsible for the death of the girl concerned." Fumigation Kills Passenger. DEFICIT LEFT AFTER RECENT FRUIT EXPOSITION.

Producers of Northwest Expected to Cover Losses Sustained in Exhibition in Seattle.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 20.—(Special.)—Northwest fruit growers represented in the recently held board of trustees of the Pacific northwest fruit exposition, are again to be asked to make good the deficit left by the show held in Seattle during Thanksgiving week, according to the plan presented at a meeting of creditors by George W. When the exposition closed November 30, after 10 days of bad weather and insufficient attendance, Drilling called a meeting of the men repre-

IRON

Over 4,000,000 People Annually Are Using Nuxated Iron. When your blood is starving for iron, no ordinary tonics or stimulants can put you right. Starving blood must have iron from which people usually take. Metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the mine, and is therefore entirely different from organic iron. Organic iron takes the iron in your blood and gives it back in spinach, lentils, and apples.

Last Saturday creditors of the exposition representing claims aggregating approximately $9000 met on Dilling's invitation and were advised to select a committee of their own number to whom all claims should be assigned, the committee then to demand payment by the new board of trustees of the exposition which is to hold its first meeting in Seattle early in January. This advice was followed and a committee was named, consisting of Charles W. Goodman, who furnished the exposition decorations; Carl E. Croston, lawyer representing a transfer company, and F. K. Singleton, who placed the newspaper advertising for the show.

The January meeting of the trustees will therefore have other business before it in addition to the programmed election of officers and the discussion of plans for next year's exposition.
