

SNOW POSSIBLY RAIN, TUE TODAY

No Real Promise of Relief Yet Made.

POWER IS INTERRUPTED

Linenmen Are Unable to Trace Trouble and Service Resumes By Itself.

A well-known law of physics the wind blows from the high pressure area to that of low pressure. Hence the east wind. Whenever the "high" moves on, as it must eventually, the "low" will take its place, the direction of the wind will be reversed and will blow in warm and wet from the sea, and Portland will again have the kind of weather it understands.

The barograph in the weather bureau office, which gives a continuous record of barometric pressure, traced stair steps up and down across its revolving cylinder yesterday, as the storm off the coast moved in a little, and was then driven out to sea again. How long this game will continue no man can say, but the longer it lasts the better the chances are that it will end soon.

Another bit of consolation offered for shivering Portlanders is that summer is coming. Today and tomorrow are the shortest days of the year, so beginning Friday the days will grow longer and the electric light bill smaller. December 22 is the usual date for the shortest day of the year, but this year the 21st and 23d are so much alike, as far as a fourth of an hour is concerned, that an astronomer, J. W. Daniels of Hill Military academy, was unable to call either one longer or shorter than the other.

The weather bureau table gives each of the two days 3 hours and 37 minutes of possible sunshine—possible but not probable.

Several schools closed. As a result of insufficient electrical power to operate the heating systems and keep the buildings warm, a number of the schools of the city were compelled to shut down before noon yesterday. Some remaining closed during the remainder of the day while others reopened in the afternoon.

Among the schools which were shut down were the Davis, Chapman, Arleta, Woodmere, Linton and Williams, according to announcement of the superintendent of the office. The Couch school was closed for a time during the day but was able to resume operations in the afternoon again. The Hudson school was closed down with the exception of two rooms, which continue to operate. The Gregory Heights school was closed down with the exception of two rooms, and the Franklin primary school was operating but one room.

At the Beaman school the pipes were frozen up so that it was necessary to shut that school also yesterday. The plumbers were working on them yesterday and are expected to be able to open that school again today. The schools which were closed on account of the power outage yesterday were also all expected to open again this morning for work.

Power fluctuates for time. For some freakish reason not fully determined the power from the high tension lines of the Portland Railway, Light & Power company between here and Estacada came and went yesterday morning causing streetcar delays, stoppage of elevators and the dimming of lights. Yesterday afternoon the power was full and normal. As near as the company engineers could make out of the big tension lines must have been blown together by the high winds.

While trouble chasers were attempting to learn what was causing the intermittent trouble, the entire load of the city's electrical demands was thrown upon the two sisan plants. This resulted in partly restoring service until the trouble remedied itself on the streetcar line through on the lines from Estacada.

During the trouble, service was interrupted on practically all the west side and on all the east side district north of Hawthorne avenue. South of Hawthorne avenue, practically no trouble was experienced.

WASCO GETS NO RELIEF. Blizzard Conditions Are Reported Worst in History.

THE DALLES, Or., Dec. 20.—(Special.)—Storm conditions continued to prevail here today, with the temperature ranging between 17 and 20 degrees above zero. Snow continued falling here again shortly before noon after a lull during the entire morning. It was estimated that the snowfall totaled six inches on the level, with drifts ranging in depth from two to five feet in places. Blizzard conditions such as Sherman county had never before known, were reported this morning at both Wasco and More.

A freezing east wind was blowing fine particles of snow and ice with such force that travel out-of-doors was both difficult and dangerous. It was said. Similar conditions were reported at Shaniko, in the southern part of Wasco county, where the mercury reached the low mark of six degrees above zero last night. The storm is causing local merchants to lose thousands of dollars of cash business during the present week, as Wasco county farmers are unable to come to the city to do their Christmas shopping, one business man said today.

REDMOND HAS ZERO WEATHER. Fine Snow Falls, Covering Ground With 3-Inch Blanket.

REDMOND, Or., Dec. 20.—(Special.)—Sunny night snow commenced falling throughout the Deschutes valley, on a frozen ground. The temperature at sundown was 16 degrees above zero and at daybreak yesterday the temperature was down to zero, and varied but little during the day. A fine snow continued falling throughout the day, at 5 P. M. there was three inches of fine soft snow on the ground.

There was scarcely any wind and no necessity for any suffering of stock. Frozen water pipes were reported. The city reservoir is full of water and the pump, the Deschutes river running steadily so no water shortage is expected.

Corvallis Gets More Snow. OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvallis, Dec. 20.—(Special.)—"Snow out of a clear sky" fell for nearly an hour this morning, making a total depth on the campus of three inches. Children coating on the slopes near the administration building and the woman's gymnasium had

TODAY'S FILM FEATURES.

Columbia—Mabel Normand, "Molly O." "The Silent Call." "Peoples"—"What Do Men Want?" Majestic—Pauline Frederick, "The Sting of the Laah." Rivoli—Matheson Lang, "Carnival." Blue Mouse—Prisella Dean, "Conflict." Star—Bill Hart, "The Whistle." Hippodrome—Lucy Dornaine, "God and Evil." Circle—"The Family Closet."

WENTRY breezes and flurries of snow cannot keep the crowds away from the Columbia theater, where Mabel Normand's great success, "Molly O." is still being shown.

The picture was held over on account of popular demand, and is rapidly making many additional friends for the popular comedienne.

Miss Normand, whose "Mickey" will always be remembered, has a role just to her liking in "Molly O." and her famed big brown eyes help her to make this comedy thoroughly enjoyable. The picture is an entirely straight comedy, for it has an absorbing plot and romantic interest in the conditions as during the first run. This is the picture which presents Strongheart, a wonder dog, in his first screen production.

Harry Myers, supporting Doris May in her latest Hunt Stromberg production, "Boy Crazy," should be well prepared for the year where he has to pedal her along a rural highway on the handle bars of a bicycle. As the star of Mark Twain's "Connecticut Yankee," Myers led ye valiant knight, mounted on motorcylinder to rescue the picture, in his held prisoner by the cruel villainess.

Mary MacLaren was being substituted for Edith Roberts as leading woman for Wallace Reid in "Across the Continent," as Lila Roberts could not complete a previous engagement in time. Miss MacLaren was the queen in "The Three Musketeers," with Douglas Fairbanks.

When Charles Ray left Los Angeles for New York it is said he received 32 boxes of candy and 11 boxes of cigars. The presence of Mrs. Ray with him no doubt influenced the gifters of the former more than those of the latter.

The re-filming of popular stories is becoming a rage. "Human Hearts," which was done in 1917, is being very pretentiously for those days, is being done over by King Baggot.

The advent of important literary figures in moviedom no longer excites surprise. The latest is Sonia Levin, formerly associate editor of the Metropolitan magazine, who has joined Famous Players-Lasky.

Following the lead of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, Norma Talmadge will now come forward to the story, "The Duchess of Langeais." It's a costume drama of very colorful and dramatic nature.

proprietor of a local oyster concern, said today that thousands of oysters have been killed by the freezing temperature.

The beds located on the sound have yielded large quantities of the Olympia oyster. Continued cold may destroy some of the richest beds of the locality, it is said.

ROSEBURG HAS HEAVY SNOW. Weather Continues Cold, Though Little Damage Is Reported.

ROSEBURG, Or., Dec. 20.—(Special.)—This city experienced a heavy snowfall today, the storm lasting the greater part of the morning. Ice formed on the pavement made travel dangerous, but few accidents were reported. The weather remained cold tonight and further snow is anticipated.

THE TEMPERATURE fell to 22 degrees above zero, the coldest for this month. No real damage, however, has been caused by the storm, and unless the temperature drops to a much lower level there is little that will be hurt. A real low temperature might injure brocoli, which as yet has not been injured by the cold.

19 1/2 DEGREES AT VANCOUVER. Mark Coldest Recorded by Thermometer So Far This Year.

VANCOUVER, Wash., Dec. 20.—(Special.)—The coldest temperature of the year to date was about 3 degrees above zero, when the government thermometer registered 19 1/2 degrees above zero, according to A. A. Quarnberg, official weather observer. During the night the temperature rose to 22, where it remained about all night. Today the maximum was 29 degrees.

At 8 o'clock tonight the thermometer was dropping and a storm was looked for.

The snow has been disagreeable, a cold east wind making it so unpleasant that it has affected Christmas shopping considerably.

SNOW FALLS FOR 24 HOURS

White Blanket at Klamath Falls Reported One Foot Deep.

KLAMATH FALLS, Or., Dec. 20.—(Special.)—Snow has been falling steadily here for the last 24 hours and now lies a foot deep, with no sign of abatement. So far no damage has been reported.

The morning train for Weed left on schedule time this morning, but is reported as having trouble on its return trip on account of the heavy snow and it is being brought back to arrive here at 7 o'clock, but is reported at least three hours late.

Dust Storm Hits Boardman.

BOARDMAN, Or., Dec. 20.—(Special.)—A severe sand storm broke over this section Sunday noon following a slight snowfall Sunday morning. Freezing weather prevails and it was found necessary to discontinue school, as the rooms could not be kept warm. Clouds of dust have been sweeping across the horsehaven country into Oregon.

Mercury 19 Degrees at Albany.

ALBANY, Or., Dec. 20.—(Special.)—Nineteen degrees above zero was the minimum temperature at Albany in the last 24 hours, and the thermometer has hovered around the freezing point all day. There was a slight snowfall, but it melted away in the four inches of snow which fell Sunday night remains on the ground.

Snow Falls in Reedsport.

REEDSPORT, Or., Dec. 20.—(Special.)—Reedsport awoke this morning to find an inch and a half of snow on the ground, the first in two weeks. The temperature was below the exception here, where the winter temperature usually stands between 40 and 60 degrees.

Minimum at Eugene 19.

EUGENE, Or., Dec. 20.—(Special.)—The temperature reached a minimum of 19 degrees early this morning and the maximum throughout the day was 28. The thin coating of snow which fell early Monday morning still lies on the ground as the temperature has been above freezing but little since then.

Snow Falls at Pendleton.

PENDLETON, Or., Dec. 20.—(Special.)—Two more inches of snow fell today, and tonight the fall was continuing, making a total of six inches since the storm started. The thermometer registered only 17 degrees above zero at the highest today and the minimum was 12 above zero.

Mercury at Bend Two Above.

BEND, Or., Dec. 20.—(Special.)—A new two-day minimum was recorded here today when the mercury in the official government thermometer dropped to two degrees above zero.

COLD GRIPS WILLAPA HARBOR. Thermometer Drops to Low Point of 24 Degrees.

SOUTH BEND, Wash., Dec. 20.—(Special.)—South Bend and the Willapa harbor region today were in the grip of a cold snap, and an east wind was keeping the residents of this vicinity shivering. The thermometer started dropping five days ago, and this morning reached a low point of 24 degrees above zero. The weather is colder in the wind. Many water pipes have been broken, and the Broadway grammar school was closed on that account.

An inch of snow fell Saturday night, but the wind swept it away in the clear spots and it had drifted down obstructions to a considerable depth.

ROSEBURG HAS HEAVY SNOW. Weather Continues Cold, Though Little Damage Is Reported.

NORTHEAST GALE IS FACED. Warning Out at Astoria and Lower Columbia River.

ASTORIA, Or., Dec. 20.—(Special.)—The thermometer this morning registered 20 degrees above zero, the coldest of the season, and there were intermittent flurries of snow this afternoon. The wind from the north and lower Columbia river were facing strong northeast gale, according to a warning issued by the weather bureau. The warning said the storm was central off Cape Mendocino, moving slowly eastward, and will cause fresh to strong northeast gales off the Oregon and Washington coasts, with a moderate southeast gale along the coast of California.

ment is that so many people on the lower levels have been letting the water run during the cold weather that the pressure is weakened to such an extent that the hill people get no water. The mercury stood at 22 degrees at 7 o'clock this morning, with a cold east wind blowing.
