controversy as the relative merits of the modern egnference as against the old diplomacy, is not particularly interesting, since it concerns only the former. But the controversy foreshadows disquieting disagreements about essentials.

When Premier Poincare asked me to take a portfolio in his cabinet I told him that while I approved his purposes, I did not think he could achieve them, because of his controversial acts of the last two and a half years. This alluded not only to the fact that he constantly approved the acts of Premiers Mifferand and Briand, whom he now combats but also to his personal situabats but also to his personal situa-tion relative to British circles. What is happening now confirms my fears.

Granted. Newspaper work is fascinating and we do meet interesting people, but we just as often have thrust upon us dumb-bells with the emotion of an oyster, the intelligence of a goldfish and the personality of a glass of water. From the lips of such as these it is repor-torial first aid to make fall utter-ances calculated to please both the dumb-bell who is being interviewed, as well as the readers of your farm and fireally nature.
