

INSURANCE AGAINST BURGLARIES RAISED

Increase More Than Doubled on Some New York Risks.

FUR THEFTS ARE IN LEAD

Companies Scorn Holdup Policies and Robberies Are Reduced to Art by Experts.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—In the year just closed the insurance companies that write burglary insurance suffered unparalleled losses, due to the prevalence of crime in this city and elsewhere, especially at the time of the holiday season, when holdups were daily and the police were overwhelmed by the numbers of burglaries. The increase in loss last year over the year before is estimated at between 15 and 20 per cent by the most conservative insurance men, and on some classes of risks the increase ran as high as 100 per cent.

Detailed figures for losses will not be available for some weeks, as they are compiled by each company in its home office and then turned over to the board of underwriters. It is pointed out, however, that with the insurance companies losing much more than in other years the total loss must be great, as hardly one person in five carries such insurance. That the sum will run into the millions is not doubted by the insurance men.

Blame Not Definitely Fixed.

Heads of insurance firms were as one in blaming the increased losses. They differed somewhat, however, as to the cause. Not one would say that the police are to blame entirely, and even those who accused the police qualified the statement by adding that the police administration and not the men were responsible in part.

Because of their desire not to say anything that might be a source of controversy and as they had not complete figures, the insurance men declined to be quoted and asked that the names of their companies be omitted. The men seen, however, represent some of the largest insurance concerns in the city.

The New York manager for one thoroughly conservative company, which has its head office in Maryland, said that conditions were substantially the same all over the country during 1931, the worst spots being New York, Chicago and San Francisco. He estimated that the total increase in losses on burglary, robbery and kindred insurance written by his company would be between 15 and 20 per cent. This was in part due to the crime increase, he said, but also to the fact that the average loss for his company resulting from the robbery of a residence used to be between $15 and $100, whereas it is now between $100 and $200.

Loft Robberies Run High.

This man said that on certain lines of insurance, where a fair average loss for the year would run about 35 per cent, the average for the year past would approach 125 per cent. In the last three months of 1931 the number of loft robberies had been so high that the company had determined not to write policies for this sort of insurance unless firms put in additional safeguards.

The alarm systems installed by certain agencies and generally used were, he said, no longer sufficiently certain and his company would insist on an iron and steel door in addition. He thought economic conditions, especially unemployment, were largely responsible for the conditions.

"Well, I'm glad to see the holdup men had a hard time of it a few days ago," said the manager of another New York agency. If they'd shoot a few more it would do good."

This man put his losses far above those of the year previous. He explained that what was true of his concern was true of all the others. Were it not for the other forms of insurance they wrote the situation would be quite hopeless, so great were the losses.

Recoveries Are Not Important.

In each instance the manager smiled broadly when the question of recoveries was raised. One said, "There ain't no such animal," and the other contended that the recoveries of his company would be negligible. He said he was representing one of the largest companies, acknowledged that possibly $5000 worth of goods had been recovered, but that losses within the last month had aggregated $40,000.

This man said he was making a careful study of the situation because of its seriousness.

At another insurance office the list of causes for the crime wave and its resultant losses to the insurance companies included the general moral breakdown due to the war, unemployment, abandonment of the "third degree" method of dealing with known criminals, overcrowded conditions of the courts, use of the electric chair, influx of foreign servant girls, held Canby responsible for the residence robberies, and scientific business methods now being used by criminals.

Fur Robberies Interrupted.

One man pointed out that four men suspected of robbing fur lofts were arrested on a certain date recently and held in jail for several days. In that period, he contended, not an important fur robbery occurred. Then one of the men was released and on the same night a $20,000 fur theft took place.

"The old-fashioned criminal has disappeared," said this man. "It used to be that a criminal looked the part and we knew something was wrong with him; he was a mental defective, or something of that sort. Not any more. The men who manage these robberies look like prosperous business men, and that is what they are. They shake a business of crime and they always make one jump ahead of the forces they are opposed to."

"For example, in the loft robberies I think there is a lot somewhere where the men are trained who help these fellows. The helpers are not always the same men and their work is comparatively simple. Time is the essence of it. They have to dash into a place, grab as much as they can comfortably carry and run out again and enter an automobile."

Trained to Do Job.

"They have to do this in four minutes. All that. They are trained to do the job in the time specified. They are told the bait they must move at; not to fumble, not to stop to pick anything they may drop."

"Then the brains of the outfit— I think it is a very small group that is responsible for most of this sort of work—lay his plan with exceeding care. He studies the loft, the location of the building on the street, the habits of the watchman in that and adjoining buildings, the habits of the police, the traffic on the street and the safety devices he will encounter. Before anything is done this man knows every angle of the job; he knows and has discounted every possible contingency.

"When the men break into a place they cut the locks first, taking care to leave the protective grill or other alarm device until last. The instant the door is open, they dash through. The rest of the work is theirs, with four minutes to do it in most cases. Four minutes later a high-powered automobile pulls away from in front of the building and perhaps a mile or two away, after that the police and the special watchman summoned by the alarm arrive. These fellows have got the business of looting down to an exact science."

Furs Taken in Quantities.

Furs, this man explained, are taken in quantities because it is impossible to identify them and they may be readily disposed of at good prices. His company, which does a large business in furs, had only two recoveries of goods through the police in six months. He says the losses in furs for the year will run high.

This company, in its New York business, it was estimated, has paid more than $100,000 in the last year in losses paid on residential burglary insurance. The increase in loss last year over the year before is estimated at between 15 and 20 per cent by the most conservative insurance men, and on some classes of risks the increase ran as high as 100 per cent.

Not so now.

While the prevalence of crime has hurt the insurance companies, it has meant a rich harvest for the private detective agencies, the number of which has increased amazingly in the last few years. A well-known person asserts that every one that amounts to anything has all the work it can do.

MARX ACT OVER TODAY

ORPHEUM'S COMEDY SHOW TO CLOSE ENGAGEMENT.

Several Pretty Girls and Harpist Add to Fun Inspired by Four Brothers.

The Orpheum's comedy show headlined by the favorite fustlers, the four Marx brothers, will close its engagement today.

Because of their desire not to say anything that might be a source of controversy and as they had not complete figures, the insurance men declined to be quoted and asked that the names of their companies be omitted. The men seen, however, represent some of the largest insurance concerns in the city.

The New York manager for one thoroughly conservative company, which has its head office in Maryland, said that conditions were substantially the same all over the country during 1931, the worst spots being New York, Chicago and San Francisco. He estimated that the total increase in losses on burglary, robbery and kindred insurance written by his company would be between 15 and 20 per cent. This was in part due to the crime increase, he said, but also to the fact that the average loss for his company resulting from the robbery of a residence used to be between $15 and $100, whereas it is now between $100 and $200.

Arthur Marx, the comedy harpist of the family, is the star of the act. He is a natural comedian and has not a word to say throughout the performance but he is here, there and everywhere with his antics for the puny and the act with hearty laughter. The added attraction of this show is the act of the Marx brothers, who specialize in comedy dancing.

An act which is not in big type on the poster is one of the hits of the show. This is the act of Leo Flinders, pianist, and Geneva Butler, singer. Leo Flinders has a rare voice and Mr. Flinders is a virtuoso at the piano.

Of special interest to Portland is the fact that two compositions by Mary Evelyn Calbreath of this city are played by the orchestra in the overture. The selections are "Daphne," both of which are artistic and tuneful.

CANBY ELECTION IS SET

At the meeting held Wednesday night, January 25, the ordinance was up for final hearing.

Redmen to Build Hall.

OREGON CITY, Or., Jan. 31.—(Special.)—A modern fireproof building containing lodge rooms and living quarters will be erected by the Redmen's lodge at Tenth and Washington streets, according to plans now under way. An agreement for the purchase of the site, involving 65 feet on the water front, has been made between the lodge and the T. L. Chamberlain, representing the Clackamas Abstract & Trust company. The purchase price was said to be $200. The estimated cost of the building is $50,000.

The company has been obtained from the state. The incorporators are C. V. Looney, E. M. Leever and H. B. Looney.

STRIKE OF PACKING HOUSE LABOR EBBED

Men Advised by Their Union to Return to Work.

PACKERS NOT SURPRISED

Fully 50,000 Men in Big Centers of Industry Are Affected by Recession Order.

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—Messages were sent to all unions affiliated with the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America today recommending that the strike of packing house employees be called off immediately. Dennis Lane, secretary of the union, announced tonight that the strike had ended and advised the union men to take their old jobs. Mr. Lane said he said that the union executive council had decided to make the recommendation and that there would be no further concerted strike action.

Packers Are Not Surprised.

Spokesmen for the big five packers expressed little surprise when informed that the strike order had been virtually rescinded.

The strike began December 5, after the packers had negotiated agreements with their employees through a plan of plant representation and after wage reductions had been put into effect. The packers refused to recognize the unions in their negotiations. The unions declared most of the packing plants were crippled and that more than 50,000 men were on strike. The packers asserted that their plants were operating at almost normal and employed non-union workers.

Disorder Follows Strike.

Disorders in several cities resulted from the strike. Several persons were shot in Chicago and other cities during the first two weeks of the strike. The union offered to submit to government arbitration of the strike, but the packers maintained there was nothing to arbitrate. A week ago the union voted on calling off the strike.

PENDLETON PROBE ENDED

Evidence Against Officials Inadequate for Indictment.

PENDLETON, Or., Jan. 31.—(Special.)—The grand jury which has been investigating charges against officers of the law in Umatilla county reported tonight following a week's deliberation that there was not sufficient evidence to indict District Attorney Keator, former Special Probation Officer Ridgway, Deputy District Attorney Randall, Chief of Police Taylor and other persons on the charges.

Loose court action on the issuance of search warrants for liquor raids was reported. The suggestion was made that a careful check be kept on confiscated liquor and the grand jury declared it was not compatible with the best interests of the county that Ridgway be re-employed as an officer. That there will be persistent efforts to violate the prohibition law in the future and that all officers should co-operate in support of the law was the most important phrase in the report, which was read and examination of 125 witnesses.

FOREST PROTECTION TOPIC

NEEDED IMPROVEMENTS IN ADMINISTRATION DISCUSSED.

Standardization Committee of Western Association Takes Up Matter Before Adjourning.

Needed improvements in forest protection and administration of present laws were discussed yesterday before the final adjournment of the standardization committee of the Western Forestry and Conservation association, with government, state and private fire wardens in attendance from five states.

A stricter enforcement of existing fire laws is necessary if proper results are reached, according to the decision of the conference following talks by M. B. Pratt, California state forester, H. C. Shellworth, representing private fire protection interests of Idaho, and T. M. Talbot of the United States forest service, Portland.

C. S. Cowan of the British Columbia provincial forest service spoke on the portable fire pump and its use, especially in the protection of camps and timber. The portable pump is being tried out in the northwest and may come into extensive use where transportation facilities will permit.

More adequate laws are needed in regulating the disposal of slash, according to P. E. Page, state superintendent of forestry for Washington. The federal government is taking a more active part in protecting growing timber and is increasing its appropriations for that purpose, according to R. H. Chapin, weeks law inspector for Oregon and Washington.

Since the Weeks law was enacted in 1913 the government has increased its appropriations until $400,000 is available yearly for protection of young forests, he said.

C. S. Chapman, chairman of the standardization committee, presided.
