

BONUS LEGISLATION DECLARED MADNESS

National Republican Club
Fears "Party Suicide."

LIMITATIONS ARE URGED

Only Men Wounded or Disabled in Action Held to Be Entitled to Bounty of Nation.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Opposition by the national republican club to the granting of a federal bonus "to any soldier who cannot show a wound or who was not disabled by the service," was recommended in a resolution submitted by action by the club's committee at the regular monthly meeting last night. The resolution, which "as party politics" the proposed bonus legislation "spells suicide" while "as public policy, it is madness."

At the same time the committee reported favorably a resolution calling for a congressional inquiry into expenditures of sums already appropriated for the aid of disabled veterans, "to the end that the country may be assured the veterans are receiving the fullest possible benefit from the appropriation made in their behalf."

Care of Afflicted Indorsed.

The report declared the question of care of disabled or indigent soldiers was not involved, going into the description of the hospitals and soldiers' homes maintained by the government for its incapacitated fighting men, showing that the government already is spending nearly $450,000,000 a year for relief of disabled veterans. "There is, therefore," the report stated, "involved in the proposed soldiers' bonus no question of the nation fulfilling its obligations to its disabled veterans."

That obligation is, as the secretary of the treasury has pointed out, continuing and paramount, and the expense, therefore, will be very heavy for years to come.

Bonus Declared Demoralizing.

"A federal soldiers' bonus is an attempt to appraise patriotic service in terms of dollars and cents, with the result that the public spirit of the nation by distributing hundreds of millions, even thousands of millions, of dollars as a gratuity."

"If the money were at hand always to make this distribution the proposal would be highly objectionable on grounds of public policy."

"When, however, the money for such purpose must be raised by imposing new taxes at a time when the business, the labor and the agriculture of the country are staggering under their tax burdens, it is unthinkable that steps should be taken that might result in increase of unemployment and still greater depression of agriculture, and indirectly postponing the revival of business while the great army of taxpayers are compelled to provide the huge sums that would be needed for this purpose."

Public Interest First Factor.

"The committee believe that the national republican club should take the strongest possible ground on this subject and should make an appeal to republican voters and congressmen not to be misled by the clamor of individuals and organizations which may have a personal interest in the proposed action, but to view this question in the light of the financial and economic conditions that have been pointed out by the secretary of the treasury and to act solely from the viewpoint of the highest public interest."

The report was signed by Nicholas Murray Butler, chairman of the committee, James G. Blaine Jr., Cornelius N. Bliss Jr., Thomas C. Desmond, Frank E. Ewing, William W. Hoppin, Joseph E. Levenson, Samuel McChesney Lindsay, Stuart McNamara, Newbold Morris, J. Van Vechten Oloott, Henry W. Taft and Peter Zucker.

M'CORMICK GIRL ROAMS

PARENTAL RESTRAINT LACK-
ING WHILE IN SWITZERLAND.

Miss Mathilde Said to Have Passed
Whole Days Riding With
Hands-on Instructor.

(Copyright by the New York World. Published by Arrangement.)

ZURICH, Feb. 21.—(Special cable.)

—New details of 16-year-old Mathilde McCormick's romance with Max Oser, handsome middle-aged riding master, were brought to light by inquiries here.

Oser is now in Geneva, seeking a home for his prospective bride. Fellow officers in the Swiss artillery—Oser ranks as a major in his outfit—are congratulating him upon his forthcoming marriage into American aristocracy.

During her stay in this city, Miss McCormick was permitted to roam about without parental interference.

The pretty, athletic daughter of America's wealthiest family passed whole days riding with Oser. Other days she passed chatting with stable boys in Oser's stable, her character, little disregard of caste and class causing much amazement among staid citizens.

When her mother left for home in October Mathilde was left in charge of a maid until January 5, when she returned home. Apparently Oser never went to the hotel at which the McCormicks stopped, since he is known there only by reputation as the owner of the best livery stables in town.

The riding master comes of an old Swiss family, well-to-do, but not wealthy. Oser keeps the St. Jacobs riding school in this city, where Mathilde went frequently.

Oser is nearing 50. He is short of stature, of powerful build, with a round dark face, a short dark mustache and dark hair, but not a sign of gray or badness.

He leads a simple life. He has rooms above the offices in the riding school property. Fran Mangold, whose daughter accompanied Mathilde to America, keeps house for him.

When Miss Mathilde went riding with Oser she wore a coat, breeches and a felt hat, exactly the style Oser wore. She left this outfit with him when she came back to America.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—The Bursum bill, giving disabled emergency officers of the American expeditionary forces the same retirement privileges as regular army officers, was passed today by the senate, 50 to 11, and transmitted to the house.

Several thousand disabled officers would benefit under the bill, which was sponsored by Senator Bursum, republican, New Mexico, and the American Legion and other organizations.

Opposition based principally on the ground that congress should not discriminate in favor of privates was led by Chairman Wadsworth of the senate military committee and Senator King, democrat, Utah, and Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin. The war department was understood to oppose the measure also.

Under the benefits of the bill disabled officers would be required to have at least a disability of 30 per cent under the war risk law standards. The three-fourths retirement pay and allowances would be in lieu of war risk allowances. The cost next year to the government was estimated at $5,000,000, but Senator King predicted it would cost not more than $100,000,000 and $200,000,000.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—The Bursum bill, giving disabled emergency officers of the American expeditionary forces the same retirement privileges as regular army officers, was passed today by the senate, 50 to 11, and transmitted to the house.

Several thousand disabled officers would benefit under the bill, which was sponsored by Senator Bursum, republican, New Mexico, and the American Legion and other organizations.

Opposition based principally on the ground that congress should not discriminate in favor of privates was led by Chairman Wadsworth of the senate military committee and Senator King, democrat, Utah, and Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin. The war department was understood to oppose the measure also.

Under the benefits of the bill disabled officers would be required to have at least a disability of 30 per cent under the war risk law standards. The three-fourths retirement pay and allowances would be in lieu of war risk allowances. The cost next year to the government was estimated at $5,000,000, but Senator King predicted it would cost not more than $100,000,000 and $200,000,000.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—The Bursum bill, giving disabled emergency officers of the American expeditionary forces the same retirement privileges as regular army officers, was passed today by the senate, 50 to 11, and transmitted to the house.

Several thousand disabled officers would benefit under the bill, which was sponsored by Senator Bursum, republican, New Mexico, and the American Legion and other organizations.

Opposition based principally on the ground that congress should not discriminate in favor of privates was led by Chairman Wadsworth of the senate military committee and Senator King, democrat, Utah, and Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin. The war department was understood to oppose the measure also.

Under the benefits of the bill disabled officers would be required to have at least a disability of 30 per cent under the war risk law standards. The three-fourths retirement pay and allowances would be in lieu of war risk allowances. The cost next year to the government was estimated at $5,000,000, but Senator King predicted it would cost not more than $100,000,000 and $200,000,000.

DANCING SPLITS UP CHURCH SOCIETIES

Dancer Either Drunk or Fool,
Says Pastor.

FEDERATION HAS ROW

Poughkeepsie Presbyterians Re-
sign After Resolution Is Adopted
Barring Practice.

WIFE UNTRUE, IS CHARGE

HUSBAND SAYS WOMAN LIVED
WITH ANOTHER MAN.

Mrs. Lucy Hoffman Said to Have Gone to Sweetheart's Funeral
Posing as His Spouse.

Care of Afflicted Indorsed.

The report declared the question of care of disabled or indigent soldiers was not involved, going into the description of the hospitals and soldiers' homes maintained by the government for its incapacitated fighting men, showing that the government already is spending nearly $450,000,000 a year for relief of disabled veterans. "There is, therefore," the report stated, "involved in the proposed soldiers' bonus no question of the nation fulfilling its obligations to its disabled veterans."

That obligation is, as the secretary of the treasury has pointed out, continuing and paramount, and the expense, therefore, will be very heavy for years to come.

Bonus Declared Demoralizing.

"A federal soldiers' bonus is an attempt to appraise patriotic service in terms of dollars and cents, with the result that the public spirit of the nation by distributing hundreds of millions, even thousands of millions, of dollars as a gratuity."

"If the money were at hand always to make this distribution the proposal would be highly objectionable on grounds of public policy."

"When, however, the money for such purpose must be raised by imposing new taxes at a time when the business, the labor and the agriculture of the country are staggering under their tax burdens, it is unthinkable that steps should be taken that might result in increase of unemployment and still greater depression of agriculture, and indirectly postponing the revival of business while the great army of taxpayers are compelled to provide the huge sums that would be needed for this purpose."

Public Interest First Factor.

"The committee believe that the national republican club should take the strongest possible ground on this subject and should make an appeal to republican voters and congressmen not to be misled by the clamor of individuals and organizations which may have a personal interest in the proposed action, but to view this question in the light of the financial and economic conditions that have been pointed out by the secretary of the treasury and to act solely from the viewpoint of the highest public interest."

The report was signed by Nicholas Murray Butler, chairman of the committee, James G. Blaine Jr., Cornelius N. Bliss Jr., Thomas C. Desmond, Frank E. Ewing, William W. Hoppin, Joseph E. Levenson, Samuel McChesney Lindsay, Stuart McNamara, Newbold Morris, J. Van Vechten Oloott, Henry W. Taft and Peter Zucker.

M'CORMICK GIRL ROAMS

PARENTAL RESTRAINT LACK-
ING WHILE IN SWITZERLAND.

Miss Mathilde Said to Have Passed
Whole Days Riding With
Hands-on Instructor.

(Copyright by the New York World. Published by Arrangement.)

ZURICH, Feb. 21.—(Special cable.)

—New details of 16-year-old Mathilde McCormick's romance with Max Oser, handsome middle-aged riding master, were brought to light by inquiries here.

Oser is now in Geneva, seeking a home for his prospective bride. Fellow officers in the Swiss artillery—Oser ranks as a major in his outfit—are congratulating him upon his forthcoming marriage into American aristocracy.

During her stay in this city, Miss McCormick was permitted to roam about without parental interference.

The pretty, athletic daughter of America's wealthiest family passed whole days riding with Oser. Other days she passed chatting with stable boys in Oser's stable, her character, little disregard of caste and class causing much amazement among staid citizens.

When her mother left for home in October Mathilde was left in charge of a maid until January 5, when she returned home. Apparently Oser never went to the hotel at which the McCormicks stopped, since he is known there only by reputation as the owner of the best livery stables in town.

The riding master comes of an old Swiss family, well-to-do, but not wealthy. Oser keeps the St. Jacobs riding school in this city, where Mathilde went frequently.

Oser is nearing 50. He is short of stature, of powerful build, with a round dark face, a short dark mustache and dark hair, but not a sign of gray or badness.

He leads a simple life. He has rooms above the offices in the riding school property. Fran Mangold, whose daughter accompanied Mathilde to America, keeps house for him.

When Miss Mathilde went riding with Oser she wore a coat, breeches and a felt hat, exactly the style Oser wore. She left this outfit with him when she came back to America.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—The Bursum bill, giving disabled emergency officers of the American expeditionary forces the same retirement privileges as regular army officers, was passed today by the senate, 50 to 11, and transmitted to the house.

Several thousand disabled officers would benefit under the bill, which was sponsored by Senator Bursum, republican, New Mexico, and the American Legion and other organizations.

Opposition based principally on the ground that congress should not discriminate in favor of privates was led by Chairman Wadsworth of the senate military committee and Senator King, democrat, Utah, and Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin. The war department was understood to oppose the measure also.

Under the benefits of the bill disabled officers would be required to have at least a disability of 30 per cent under the war risk law standards. The three-fourths retirement pay and allowances would be in lieu of war risk allowances. The cost next year to the government was estimated at $5,000,000, but Senator King predicted it would cost not more than $100,000,000 and $200,000,000.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—The Bursum bill, giving disabled emergency officers of the American expeditionary forces the same retirement privileges as regular army officers, was passed today by the senate, 50 to 11, and transmitted to the house.

Several thousand disabled officers would benefit under the bill, which was sponsored by Senator Bursum, republican, New Mexico, and the American Legion and other organizations.

Opposition based principally on the ground that congress should not discriminate in favor of privates was led by Chairman Wadsworth of the senate military committee and Senator King, democrat, Utah, and Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin. The war department was understood to oppose the measure also.

Under the benefits of the bill disabled officers would be required to have at least a disability of 30 per cent under the war risk law standards. The three-fourths retirement pay and allowances would be in lieu of war risk allowances. The cost next year to the government was estimated at $5,000,000, but Senator King predicted it would cost not more than $100,000,000 and $200,000,000.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—The Bursum bill, giving disabled emergency officers of the American expeditionary forces the same retirement privileges as regular army officers, was passed today by the senate, 50 to 11, and transmitted to the house.

Several thousand disabled officers would benefit under the bill, which was sponsored by Senator Bursum, republican, New Mexico, and the American Legion and other organizations.

Opposition based principally on the ground that congress should not discriminate in favor of privates was led by Chairman Wadsworth of the senate military committee and Senator King, democrat, Utah, and Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin. The war department was understood to oppose the measure also.

DANCING SPLITS UP CHURCH SOCIETIES

Dancer Either Drunk or Fool,
Says Pastor.

FEDERATION HAS ROW

Poughkeepsie Presbyterians Re-
sign After Resolution Is Adopted
Barring Practice.

WIFE UNTRUE, IS CHARGE

HUSBAND SAYS WOMAN LIVED
WITH ANOTHER MAN.

Mrs. Lucy Hoffman Said to Have Gone to Sweetheart's Funeral
Posing as His Spouse.

Care of Afflicted Indorsed.

The report declared the question of care of disabled or indigent soldiers was not involved, going into the description of the hospitals and soldiers' homes maintained by the government for its incapacitated fighting men, showing that the government already is spending nearly $450,000,000 a year for relief of disabled veterans. "There is, therefore," the report stated, "involved in the proposed soldiers' bonus no question of the nation fulfilling its obligations to its disabled veterans."

That obligation is, as the secretary of the treasury has pointed out, continuing and paramount, and the expense, therefore, will be very heavy for years to come.

Bonus Declared Demoralizing.

"A federal soldiers' bonus is an attempt to appraise patriotic service in terms of dollars and cents, with the result that the public spirit of the nation by distributing hundreds of millions, even thousands of millions, of dollars as a gratuity."

"If the money were at hand always to make this distribution the proposal would be highly objectionable on grounds of public policy."

"When, however, the money for such purpose must be raised by imposing new taxes at a time when the business, the labor and the agriculture of the country are staggering under their tax burdens, it is unthinkable that steps should be taken that might result in increase of unemployment and still greater depression of agriculture, and indirectly postponing the revival of business while the great army of taxpayers are compelled to provide the huge sums that would be needed for this purpose."

Public Interest First Factor.

"The committee believe that the national republican club should take the strongest possible ground on this subject and should make an appeal to republican voters and congressmen not to be misled by the clamor of individuals and organizations which may have a personal interest in the proposed action, but to view this question in the light of the financial and economic conditions that have been pointed out by the secretary of the treasury and to act solely from the viewpoint of the highest public interest."

The report was signed by Nicholas Murray Butler, chairman of the committee, James G. Blaine Jr., Cornelius N. Bliss Jr., Thomas C. Desmond, Frank E. Ewing, William W. Hoppin, Joseph E. Levenson, Samuel McChesney Lindsay, Stuart McNamara, Newbold Morris, J. Van Vechten Oloott, Henry W. Taft and Peter Zucker.

M'CORMICK GIRL ROAMS

PARENTAL RESTRAINT LACK-
ING WHILE IN SWITZERLAND.

Miss Mathilde Said to Have Passed
Whole Days Riding With
Hands-on Instructor.

(Copyright by the New York World. Published by Arrangement.)

ZURICH, Feb. 21.—(Special cable.)

—New details of 16-year-old Mathilde McCormick's romance with Max Oser, handsome middle-aged riding master, were brought to light by inquiries here.

Oser is now in Geneva, seeking a home for his prospective bride. Fellow officers in the Swiss artillery—Oser ranks as a major in his outfit—are congratulating him upon his forthcoming marriage into American aristocracy.

During her stay in this city, Miss McCormick was permitted to roam about without parental interference.

The pretty, athletic daughter of America's wealthiest family passed whole days riding with Oser. Other days she passed chatting with stable boys in Oser's stable, her character, little disregard of caste and class causing much amazement among staid citizens.

When her mother left for home in October Mathilde was left in charge of a maid until January 5, when she returned home. Apparently Oser never went to the hotel at which the McCormicks stopped, since he is known there only by reputation as the owner of the best livery stables in town.

The riding master comes of an old Swiss family, well-to-do, but not wealthy. Oser keeps the St. Jacobs riding school in this city, where Mathilde went frequently.

Oser is nearing 50. He is short of stature, of powerful build, with a round dark face, a short dark mustache and dark hair, but not a sign of gray or badness.

He leads a simple life. He has rooms above the offices in the riding school property. Fran Mangold, whose daughter accompanied Mathilde to America, keeps house for him.

When Miss Mathilde went riding with Oser she wore a coat, breeches and a felt hat, exactly the style Oser wore. She left this outfit with him when she came back to America.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—The Bursum bill, giving disabled emergency officers of the American expeditionary forces the same retirement privileges as regular army officers, was passed today by the senate, 50 to 11, and transmitted to the house.

Several thousand disabled officers would benefit under the bill, which was sponsored by Senator Bursum, republican, New Mexico, and the American Legion and other organizations.

Opposition based principally on the ground that congress should not discriminate in favor of privates was led by Chairman Wadsworth of the senate military committee and Senator King, democrat, Utah, and Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin. The war department was understood to oppose the measure also.

Under the benefits of the bill disabled officers would be required to have at least a disability of 30 per cent under the war risk law standards. The three-fourths retirement pay and allowances would be in lieu of war risk allowances. The cost next year to the government was estimated at $5,000,000, but Senator King predicted it would cost not more than $100,000,000 and $200,000,000.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—The Bursum bill, giving disabled emergency officers of the American expeditionary forces the same retirement privileges as regular army officers, was passed today by the senate, 50 to 11, and transmitted to the house.

Several thousand disabled officers would benefit under the bill, which was sponsored by Senator Bursum, republican, New Mexico, and the American Legion and other organizations.

Opposition based principally on the ground that congress should not discriminate in favor of privates was led by Chairman Wadsworth of the senate military committee and Senator King, democrat, Utah, and Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin. The war department was understood to oppose the measure also.

Under the benefits of the bill disabled officers would be required to have at least a disability of 30 per cent under the war risk law standards. The three-fourths retirement pay and allowances would be in lieu of war risk allowances. The cost next year to the government was estimated at $5,000,000, but Senator King predicted it would cost not more than $100,000,000 and $200,000,000.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—The Bursum bill, giving disabled emergency officers of the American expeditionary forces the same retirement privileges as regular army officers, was passed today by the senate, 50 to 11, and transmitted to the house.

Several thousand disabled officers would benefit under the bill, which was sponsored by Senator Bursum, republican, New Mexico, and the American Legion and other organizations.

Opposition based principally on the ground that congress should not discriminate in favor of privates was led by Chairman Wadsworth of the senate military committee and Senator King, democrat, Utah, and Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin. The war department was understood to oppose the measure also.

DANCING SPLITS UP CHURCH SOCIETIES

Dancer Either Drunk or Fool,
Says Pastor.

FEDERATION HAS ROW

Poughkeepsie Presbyterians Re-
sign After Resolution Is Adopted
Barring Practice.

WIFE UNTRUE, IS CHARGE

HUSBAND SAYS WOMAN LIVED
WITH ANOTHER MAN.

Mrs. Lucy Hoffman Said to Have Gone to Sweetheart's Funeral
Posing as His Spouse.

Care of Afflicted Indorsed.

The report declared the question of care of disabled or indigent soldiers was not involved, going into the description of the hospitals and soldiers' homes maintained by the government for its incapacitated fighting men, showing that the government already is spending nearly $450,000,000 a year for relief of disabled veterans. "There is, therefore," the report stated, "involved in the proposed soldiers' bonus no question of the nation fulfilling its obligations to its disabled veterans."

That obligation is, as the secretary of the treasury has pointed out, continuing and paramount, and the expense, therefore, will be very heavy for years to come.

Bonus Declared Demoralizing.

"A federal soldiers' bonus is an attempt to appraise patriotic service in terms of dollars and cents, with the result that the public spirit of the nation by distributing hundreds of millions, even thousands of millions, of dollars as a gratuity."

"If the money were at hand always to make this distribution the proposal would be highly objectionable on grounds of public policy."

"When, however, the money for such purpose must be raised by imposing new taxes at a time when the business, the labor and the agriculture of the country are staggering under their tax burdens, it is unthinkable that steps should be taken that might result in increase of unemployment and still greater depression of agriculture, and indirectly postponing the revival of business while the great army of taxpayers are compelled to provide the huge sums that would be needed for this purpose."

Public Interest First Factor.

"The committee believe that the national republican club should take the strongest possible ground on this subject and should make an appeal to republican voters and congressmen not to be misled by the clamor of individuals and organizations which may have a personal interest in the proposed action, but to view this question in the light of the financial and economic conditions that have been pointed out by the secretary of the treasury and to act solely from the viewpoint of the highest public interest."

The report was signed by Nicholas Murray Butler, chairman of the committee, James G. Blaine Jr., Cornelius N. Bliss Jr., Thomas C. Desmond, Frank E. Ewing, William W. Hoppin, Joseph E. Levenson, Samuel McChesney Lindsay, Stuart McNamara, Newbold Morris, J. Van Vechten Oloott, Henry W. Taft and Peter Zucker.

M'CORMICK GIRL ROAMS

PARENTAL RESTRAINT LACK-
ING WHILE IN SWITZERLAND.

Miss Mathilde Said to Have Passed
Whole Days Riding With
Hands-on Instructor.

(Copyright by the New York World. Published by Arrangement.)

ZURICH, Feb. 21.—(Special cable.)

—New details of 16-year-old Mathilde McCormick's romance with Max Oser, handsome middle-aged riding master, were brought to light by inquiries here.

Oser is now in Geneva, seeking a home for his prospective bride. Fellow officers in the Swiss artillery—Oser ranks as a major in his outfit—are congratulating him upon his forthcoming marriage into American aristocracy.

During her stay in this city, Miss McCormick was permitted to roam about without parental interference.

The pretty, athletic daughter of America's wealthiest family passed whole days riding with Oser. Other days she passed chatting with stable boys in Oser's stable, her character, little disregard of caste and class causing much amazement among staid citizens.

When her mother left for home in October Mathilde was left in charge of a maid until January 5, when she returned home. Apparently Oser never went to the hotel at which the McCormicks stopped, since he is known there only by reputation as the owner of the best livery stables in town.

The riding master comes of an old Swiss family, well-to-do, but not wealthy. Oser keeps the St. Jacobs riding school in this city, where Mathilde went frequently.

Oser is nearing 50. He is short of stature, of powerful build, with a round dark face, a short dark mustache and dark hair, but not a sign of gray or badness.

He leads a simple life. He has rooms above the offices in the riding school property. Fran Mangold, whose daughter accompanied Mathilde to America, keeps house for him.

When Miss Mathilde went riding with Oser she wore a coat,