When she stalked to Kennedy about Burch, she testified that he refused to believe there was anyone by the name of Burch, being under the impression that she was trying to hide the fact from him that her ex-husband, Ralph R. Obenchain, was in Los Angeles. She testified she told Kennedy such was not the case, but that Burch really was here and stopping in the hotel across the street from Kennedy's office.

When she urged Kennedy to meet Burch at her hotel, she testified, he suggested that she first go across the street to Burch's room in the hotel and wave her handkerchief from his window and he would then Kennedy Urged to Meet Burch.

She testified that Kennedy telephoned her frequently during the next few days.

on August 5, the day on which Kennedy was killed, she testified that he called her early in the morning and asked her to drive to the beach with him.

Afternoon Call Related.

As her counsel's questions led her over every event of that day, she told of Burch calling on her in the afternoon. During their conservation, she testified that Burch told her he was planning to go east the next morning and as he would be leaving early he would say goodbye then. That was the last time she saw Burch, she said.

Kennedy called for her about 4 o'clock that afternoon, Mrs. Obenchain said, and at his suggestion they drove to the beach.
