Other Motorists Complain to Police and Pair Are Placed in Jail as Result.

Arso Yonavich loved a maid, Eleanor Runke. He took her riding in his flivver yesterday afternoon. Yonawich has a police record as a liquor violator. His companion now has a police record as a drunk, while Yonavich has added the charge of reckless driving to his other accomplishments. Police say a bootlegger loves, same as anyone else.

His love was so passionate as they sped through the soft spring after-noon near Twenty-third and Vaughn streets that love pats were impotent to express it. He used his fists. "Be mine, honey," he whispered softly as the car caromed to a curb, and bam! he gave his words emphasis by banging her in the right eye with his fist. With his other hand he as tist. With his other hand he steered the flivver from the curb and dashed at another car just ahead. It is very difficult to drive an automobile with one hand and beat up your loved one at the same time, as anyone will admit who has tried it, police say. Yonavich did his best.
