WIFE HIS INSPIRATION AND LODE STAR, KREISLER AVOWS

Tribute Paid to Partner by Famous Violinist—Childless Pair Make Lot of Orphans Happy—All Talents Held God-Given.

"A GOOD wife is the noblest work of God," paraphrased Fritz Kreisler, eminent violinist. We were talking of success, artistic and material, and he had been counting off a few of the contributing factors toward his own success.

Fritz Kreisler, violinist, who appears here tomorrow.

"First and last, I owe whatever I have achieved to my wife," he said. "She has been my constant inspiration, my lode-star and the source of my happiness."

"If a man happens to have a good wife for his best friend—naturally I am speaking of the man's own wife—can go to her and to her every-thing, even if he has been every kind of a fool or failure that there is. The right kind of a wife will help her husband pick up the pieces and convince him that in each new day he is given a new chance."

"I have always noticed that the man who hasn't some fine womanly woman to go alongside of him on the trail misses much happiness. Along the way and whatever success he arrives at is not complete. My wife is an American woman, and we are both proud of that fact. We have no children of our own, but all over America and Europe are scattered children in whom Mrs. Kreisler and I take personal interest, so much so that we regard ourselves as foster parents to some half hundred childrenless violinists, sometimes it is because the mother fancies that if she only had had a chance when she was a girl she would have started the world with her ridding, but more often it is just a maternal vanity which must be satisfied, even if it ruins a girl's career as a first-class violinist or Nellie's chances for matrimony and a bungalow and babies on them."

Gifts Held God-Given. Fritz Kreisler is a believer in gifts from God. "It is utter rot to say that all children can be taught to sing, or to dance or to play an instrument," he says.

"Insofar as the actual mechanical process is concerned, yes, every child, unless he or she is mentally deficient, can be taught to open its mouth and emit sounds, to saw across the strings of a violin in a bow, to read a course across the keys of a piano. But if there is no love or reverence for music, if there is no definite and positive gift from God lodging within the heart and mind of the child, there will be no results. "Primarily there must be a genius, a gift, an inborn art. If it is there it will find expression and nothing can stop it. If it is not there all the teachers in the world cannot put a technical training in its place. The world is full of sad little boys and little girls who should be playing in the sunshine, or with their waxes and dolls, but who are compelled to stand for hours and see-saw on a

SALEM, Or., April 10.—(Special.)—T. A. Rafferty, chief inspector for the law enforcement bureau of the state motor vehicle department, returned here today from eastern Oregon where he went to investigate a request for special state patrol of the highway extending from Pendleton to Freewater.

Mr. Rafferty said travel in eastern Oregon is very heavy at the present time and that the officials of Umatilla county are anxious that the roads there shall have additional protection. The state has a traffic officer at Pendleton, but his territory includes a wide expanse of country. It is likely, Mr. Rafferty said, that another officer will be assigned to the eastern Oregon division.

Accum Accused of Theft. Accommodations on Spokane, Portland and Seattle freight trains lack many modern conveniences that may be found in the passenger trains, so the Clarence Cook, after coming into Portland via freight, is said to have attempted to square matters by stealing an auto robe from the automobile of the road's president, W. F. Turner, 246 East Twenty-third street North, as it was parked near the army. Inspectors Spaug and Powell said they saw Cook take the robe into 85 North Third street, where he pawned it for 75 cents. Its value was $25. Cook was arrested and charged with larceny.
