

BARBER IN CUSTODY IN ALBANY MURDER

Hecker Is Said to Have Given $815 to Frank Coleman.

SEARCH FOR BODY FAILS

Alleged Slayer Tells Authorities Victim Was Thrown Into Calapooia River.

ALBANY, Or., April 19.—(Special.)—Portland officers tonight took into custody Harry Coleman, local barber, to whom Russell Hecker, ex-Albany youth accused of murdering Frank Bowker, musician, gave $82 late Sunday night. It was said that Hecker also had given Coleman $750 in addition to the $85, and that early Monday Coleman had placed the money in a safety deposit vault in the Cusick bank here.

Bowker's body has not been recovered. The police from Portland arrived here today and continued their investigation with little communication with the local authorities. It was said here that Coleman has been taken to Portland, either to be held as a witness or for further investigation. Hecker has been charged with first-degree murder.

Search for Body Fails.
Working from information supplied yesterday by young Hecker, who led Portland police to a point on the highway bridge which spans the Calapooia between Albany and Corvallis, grapplers dragged through the water current throughout the day. Shortly before noon Hugh Brady, Portland city grappler, reached Albany, and set out in a small skiff, armed with grappling irons and hooks. But try as he would during the long hours of the afternoon, the Portland grappler was unable to find any evidence of the corpse, which Hecker, the confessed slayer, has said he tied in a hop sack, weighted down with stones near the bridge over the bridge falling into the water. The search was abandoned temporarily late this afternoon. Portland officers quit work at 4:15 o'clock and left for Portland. Local men who had been dragging the river all day gave up less than an hour later. Hugh Brady said he doubted if the body would be found before it floated.

Conference to Be Held.
Whether the Portland men engaged in today's work will return tomorrow was not known. Officers of the Portland police force said in leaving here this afternoon they would not know until they reached Portland and talked with their superiors whether they would be back tomorrow or at all. Whether local officers will take up the direction of the work if the Portland officers do not return was also undetermined tonight.

Veteran Falls in Search.
Both Portland and Linn county authorities are a bit disheartened over the failure to locate the body of the slain Portland man. It was thought that the arrival of Hugh Brady would dispel all doubt as to the location of the body, but the grizzled veteran was unable to solve the many strange twists and eddies of the puzzling little river.

Hecker, Alleged Slayer, Is Favored Prisoner.
The most favored of prisoners in the city jail is Russell E. Hecker, alleged slayer of Frank Bowker last Sunday night. Hecker, since his incarceration, has been treated with more consideration by everyone, from the chief down to the janitor in the memory of the oldest police reporter on the Babylon Brick.

rowed from him some weeks before. On the chance that this money may have belonged to the missing man, Detective Heilger took charge of the money and will hold it as evidence. Residents of Albany who know young Hecker since early childhood are stunned. They know of him only as a spoiled child, whose every want had been satisfied and who had never shown vicious tendencies during the 20 years he had lived there. People who know him still are unable to believe that he killed Bowker in cold blood for the $1400 which Bowker was said to have carried when he took the fatal automobile ride with Hecker last Sunday night. There are many here who really predict that when Bowker's

SEATTLE MAN TO ADDRESS BAPTIST LAYMEN TOMORROW

Eight hundred laymen are expected to hear Mr. Shank's message. His subject will be "The Layman and His Church."

The meeting is being held to create interest in the world-wide campaign now being conducted by the Baptists for their missionary and educational work. The goal for this year is $18,000,000. This year's quota is $1,500,000. Mr. Shank will preside at the meeting tomorrow night.

body is recovered from the river the money he carried will be found upon his clothing intact.

Source of Sack Mystery.
Just where Hecker procured the hop sack in which he tied his victim before hurling the body into the river still remains as much of a mystery as ever. Detective Mallett made a close examination of hop yards in the vicinity of Jefferson but was unable to gain any information of value. Hecker's father is said to have told the police the boy admitted getting the sack in a hophouse near Jefferson, but there is only one such place on the east side of the river and this house has contained no sacks for several years. It was ascertained that how long the work of dragging the river will continue is not now known, but it is believed that the work will be continued under the direction of Sheriff Lewelling until all hope of finding the body is abandoned.

The Calapooia flows into the Willamette about two miles from the bridge where the body went into the water. Because it is absolutely impossible for the body to leave the Calapooia and enter the Willamette, persons familiar with the two streams say. Local officials said that the search might possibly be lengthened into several weeks.

Youth Treated With More Consideration by Everyone From Chief Down Than Anyone in Memory of Oldest Police Reporter.

Prison rules at the city jail are that prisoners shall not smoke and Hecker is kept well supplied with fags, smoking them at will, and he is allowed to have a pipe. He is supplied with all the Portland papers and follows with interest the developments in his case. Newspapers and books are sent "ordinary" prisoners, because they jam them down the plumbing fixtures and cause much inconvenience. Hecker, however, is shown him, also, that is denied the prisoner who is sobering up from a jag and has not killed anyone.

Friend of Hecker Tells How He Remained Away From Home and Worry It Caused Her.

Although grilled all afternoon and a large part of the afternoon by Captain Moore, chief inspector; Captain of Detectives Harms, and Deputy District Attorney Mowry; Nellie Lainhart, friend of Russell Hecker, tearfully stuck to her original story that she knew nothing of the killing of Frank Bowker, either before or after it was committed.

Bail Provided for Girl.
At 5 o'clock in the afternoon through the efforts of Mr. Lea, George S. King of the Imperial hotel appeared at headquarters and deposited $2000 bail for Miss Lainhart's release. Mr. King said that he would take her to his home, 664 Everett street, and see that she did nothing in the way of retaining an attorney or of any other nature that might help the case for Hecker.

Disappearance Causes Worry.
"I had no chance to talk with him. I noticed that he was wearing a close-fitting gray overcoat. He went out the door and I did not see him again until 7:30 o'clock Monday morning. When he didn't come home at night I was greatly worried, because it was the first time he had stayed away all night and I could not imagine what he was doing."

Story at First Doubted.
"I didn't see him again after he left the apartment, and knew nothing of the affair until the officers came for me. That's all I know, really."

Attorney Still Silent.
Thomas G. Ryan, attorney for Hecker, was at police headquarters yesterday afternoon, but maintained the same silence as he has maintained his client since he was first arrested. "I have nothing to say," Mr. Ryan said, "and shall not talk until the case comes up in court."

CADILLAC BUSINESS IS GOOD!

March Portland Police Registrations for Licenses forcibly show Cadillac "POPULARITY:"

Eighteen cars were registered in the city—one more delivered, making nineteen for the city—four were delivered in the state, making a total of twenty-three. Eight additional orders were taken which could not be delivered, due to our inability to get stock from the factory fast enough.

The Cadillac showing in the state for the past seven months is just as remarkable. Here is the record for the last four months of 1921 and first three months of 1922:

Cadillac69	Third5
Second8	Fourth2

More than four and one-half times as many Cadillacs delivered as all other makes combined, selling at or above Cadillac price.

Cadillac preference so evident cannot be denied. There must be, and is, a solid foundation for such preponderant choice.

The CADILLAC, backed by the sincere service this concern strives to render, is surely the reason.

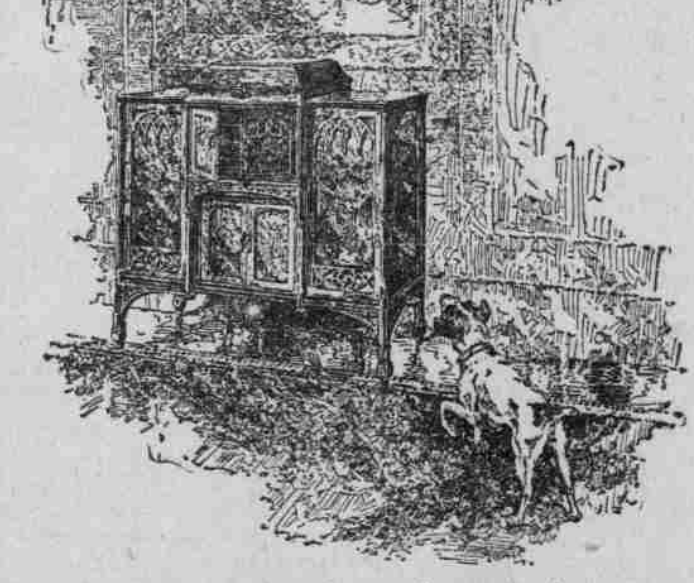

Let your next automobile be a Cadillac, and prove to yourself that
