permit of a full answer to a large number of questions. The "left over" questions have to wait their turn with letters from other correspondents received later.

A little study of some of the excellent cook books in the public library, used in connection with careful personal observation of results obtained, is advised.

In reply to Mrs. L. E. T.:
1. If ordinary mayonnaise is kept closely sealed in a cool place, it will keep for a long time. Of course it cannot be canned by heating. A thin layer of warm (not hot) paraffine is sometimes helpful.

2. Recipes for sweet fruit salad dressings have been given recently. I hope you saw them.

3. Please describe the kind of dressing you want for a vegetable salad. Any cooked dressing (except the very sweet ones) may have additional seasoning for vegetable salads. This naturally varies with the vegetables used. Thousand Island dressing of any preferred kind made on a cooked dressing basis may be used for vegetable salads.

Any thick unseasoned soft custard can be converted into a vegetable salad dressing by adding lemon juice (or lemon juice and vinegar) to taste, with salt, pepper, mustard if liked, as much sugar as salt and, if desired, a spoonful of tomato catsup or chili sauce.

4. A "salad principally of oranges" might be the traditional "accompaniment" salad for wild duck—two parts orange to one part chopped celery, with French dressing.

5. Or it might be a "dessert salad," combined a sweet dressing and any preferred fruits in smaller quantity.

6. It might be a plain lettuce heart and orange salad, with French dressing, mayonnaise or cooked dressing, to serve in the regular salad course. Make it to serve your own taste and the rest of the menu.

I will try to answer your other questions later. If you don't see them, please write again.

Mrs. Blake's Favorite Recipe

No-Egg Mayonnaise Dressing

I have found this method of making mayonnaise both convenient and economical:

1 tsp. salt, 2 tsp. Carnation Milk, 1 cup oil, 1 tsp. paprika, 1 tsp. lemon juice or vinegar.

Put salt and paprika in a bowl; add Carnation Milk and mix thoroughly; add oil slowly, stirring constantly. Then add the lemon juice or vinegar. This recipe makes 1 cup salad dressing.
