

PHILADELPHIA HAS EXPOSITION MONEY

Manager for Sesqui-Centennial Fair Chief Need.

OREGON FAILURE WANTED

Portland Plans Declared at Once Obstacle and Help to Quaker City's 1926 Proposal.

brought against Madame Katherine Tingley, supreme leader of the International Brotherhood and Theosophical society, by Mrs. Irene M. Mohn, after the trial court had decided against her and the district court of appeals for Mrs. Tingley.

Mrs. Tingley was charged by Mrs. Mohn with having alienated the affections of her husband, Dr. George F. Mohn, and the trial court awarded her $100,000 in April, 1921. The second division of the Los Angeles court reversed the judgment, holding that the trial jury had based its judgment on "suspicion and innuendo." Mrs. Mohn appealed to the supreme court.

The hearing will be held during the next Los Angeles session of the court.

In the action Mrs. Mohn had gained control over Dr. Mohn during the 12 years that she had resided with him at theosophical society and tried to induce him to give large sums of money to the theosophical cause. The defense contended that the breaking up of the Mohns' marriage was due to disagreements between the couple over Mrs. Mohn's daughter by a former marriage.

EX-KAISER DEVELOPS MANIA FOR RELIGION

Mental State of War Exile Causes Anxiety at Doorn.

RECLUSE DWELLS IN PAST

Allusion to Politics Is Seldom and Time Devoted to Study of Bible and Prayer.

AMSTERDAM, May 11.—Ex-Emperor William's devotion to religion has progressed to the point of mania. Admiral von Tirpitz, ex-minister of the German navy, is reported to have told a friend recently:

"The German ex-kaiser is described as spending the greater part of each day in reading the Scriptures, commentaries, sermons and other religious books and in prayer. His physical health appears to be good, but some members of his entourage at Doorn regard his mental state with some anxiety."

Mad Dwell in Past.

It is observed that his interest in European affairs has greatly diminished, even politics finding somewhat uninteresting to his mind.

The famous old Cosmos Club

May night opened its doors not only to its members but to women and other guests called it "a gala night."

Gilbert Gruenberg, editor of the National Geographic magazine and president of the club, introduced the lecturer to the audience, which included members of congress, heads of government bureaus, judges and distinguished visitors from other parts of the country sojourning in the city.

The University club was the scene of Tuesday night's lecture and many of the leading statesmen of Prussia and as such he always studied theology and cultivated experience in defense of Lutheran doctrines and their application. His mind was often divided in those years between the study of military and religious questions, but now he is said to be enthralled in religious questions alone to the exclusion of all else.

He has also looked forward to have narrowed and his rare visitors find his mind shut in and closed to present German affairs and the relations between Germany and the remainder of the European countries.

TROOP MOVES ARRANGED

War Department Explains New Policy in Distribution.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 11.—(Special)—A breach of promise and a breach of faith, according to the citizens of this country who feel that a man of the proper caliber can be found at home, if proper search is made.

Another thing that is worrying the Philadelphia exposition people is recognition. A movement has now been inaugurated to gain congressional recognition.

Oregon is proving somewhat of a stumbling-block in this respect for the exposition, but in view of its financial campaign it has obtained congressional recognition. The delay in arranging the financial affairs of the 1925 exposition in Oregon is encouraging to the Philadelphia exposition folk, who are little by little hopefully awaiting word that such arrangements cannot be performed.

Oregon Plans Obstacle.

The Oregon exposition plans, if they should not materialize, will prove of considerable benefit to the exposition of 1925, but the talk has served to keep several cities out of the exposition game. This is just what the boys in the Quaker city had hoped for.

Oregon steps behind the wheels, as the bumper, and raises the money. Philadelphia will find it more difficult to get the assistance that is necessary, but it is certain to cause embarrassment particularly with regard to getting the men to arrive for participation in two world exhibitions within a year of one another, and both on American soil.

Philadelphia and her people are confident that they have no trouble in getting the fair, and from the manner in which financial aid has been lined up there can be no doubt that its plans will move forward rapidly. Oregon in 1925 is a fly in the ointment, which of course can be overcome, but to Philadelphia's way of thinking, it would be best if the fair plans out in the far west were abandoned.

Work on Site Begun.

The work of preparing the exposition ground which is adjacent to Lincoln Park, being carried on, the buildings, the main hotel and treatment dwellings and flats, are being raised as rapidly as the wrecking crews can operate.

The site is an ideal one for an exposition, overlooking Scott Hill River which is parked on both sides and is used extensively for boating and aquatic sports. The site is directly across the river from the site of the Centennial exposition held in Philadelphia in 1876, and it is probable that the old grounds, which are now known as Lincoln park, as well as the sole surviving building, now utilized as the Pennsylvania museum, will be a part of the 1925 exposition in Philadelphia.

TINGLEY CASE APPEALED

Supreme Court to Pass on Action Against Theosophist.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—The state supreme court granted a hearing today of the action for $200,000 war-built cantonments will be abandoned.

The third division at Camp Lewis will be broken up and the units scattered among army posts throughout the state.

Infantry regiments must be reduced below 1312 men as compared to nearly 3000 during the war.

Divisional headquarters will be retained intact.

In the eighth corps area part of the 28th infantry will be moved to Fort Logan, Colorado, from Camp Lewis, Washington.

The ninth corps area unit will be moved from Camp Lewis:

Fifth infantry brigade headquarters to Vancouver barracks, Washington; fourth infantry to Fort Wright, and second cavalry to Washington, and Fort Missoula, Montana; seventh infantry to Vancouver barracks, Washington, and Alaska; sixth infantry brigade headquarters to Fort Douglas, Utah, and Logan, Colorado; 7th field artillery, less two battalions, to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyoming; second battalion, 4th field artillery, to Fort Missoula, Montana, California; second battalion, sixth engineers, to Fort Winfield Scott, California.

Mr. Vail sought to enjoin enforcement of the orders of the board closing Puget Sound ports to shipping between August 26 and September 15, and between October 26 and April 30, claiming that delegation of such authority by the legislature was an unlawful delegation of legislative power.

The supreme court found, however, that the legislature had prefaced the law with the declaration of its intention to protect the state's fast disappearing food fish supply of the state to the people of the state, to whom such food fish belong, and thereafter was delegating only the power to administer such protection.

Justice Tolman wrote a dissenting opinion in which he held that the court had departed more and more during the past 20 years from the foundation on which representation was based in permitting legislative power to be delegated to some administrative body and, believing the time has come when a halt should be called, he was unable to concur with the majority.

A statement by the federal and state investigators of the charges said that both Judge Flynn and Sheriff Rutledge have accepted the new prohibition laws, but there is "positive evidence where the judge and sheriff together have taken money and other valuables to release prisoners sentenced to jail for violating the liquor laws and that the judge himself has accepted whiskey in exchange for valuables left by prisoners."

BLOW AIMED AT OFFICERS

Citizens Seek to Oust County Judge and Sheriff; Neglect Charged.

LINCOLN, Neb., May 11.—(Special)—Removal from office of Frank Flynn, county judge, and Charles Rutledge, sheriff of Thurston county, for alleged misconduct in office and alleged "neglect, failure and refusal to do their duty in the enforcement of prohibition in Thurston county," is requested by citizens petitions filed with Governor McKelvey today. Governor McKelvey set a hearing for Saturday.

Justice Tolman wrote a dissenting opinion in which he held that the court had departed more and more during the past 20 years from the foundation on which representation was based in permitting legislative power to be delegated to some administrative body and, believing the time has come when a halt should be called, he was unable to concur with the majority.

STILL FOUND ON FARM

Beet Grower Arrested on Charge of Selling Moonshine.

HOUQUAM, Wash., May 11.—(Special)—Sheriffs of Thurston and Pierce counties and Federal officers, after a strenuous hike into the country near Alder, close to the southern boundary line of Thurston and Pierce counties in the Nisqually valley, found a bee gatherer who was also turning out first-class moonshine, according to W. Y. Croxall of the federal service.

A 50-gallon still and 150 gallons of moonshine and 25 gallons of liquor were confiscated. The officers arrived late in the afternoon and remained overnight. All they could find on the place to eat was honey, strained and in combs.

Bankers Meet at Montesano

MONTESANO, Wash., May 11.—(Special)—At a regular meeting of the county bankers at the Presbyterian church parlor here Tuesday evening, plans were completed to finance pure livestock breeding in the county.

Officers were elected as follows: W. H. France of the Montesano State Bank, president; J. C. Cowan, county auditor, secretary, and George French of the Farmers and Lumbermen's bank of Elma, treasurer.

The women of the Presbyterian church prepared a banquet for the bankers.

FISH CLOSING IS UPHELD

CASE AGAINST WASHINGTON SUPERVISOR DISMISSED.

Law Creating State Board and Delegating Power to Fix Seasons Held Constitutional.

OLYMPIA, Wash., May 11.—(Special)—Constitutionality of the law creating the state fisheries board and delegating to it powers to fix open and closed seasons for salmon, trout, rockfish and other species of fish in the waters of the state upheld by the supreme court today in affirmance of the decision of Judge Augustus Brawley of Skagit county dismissing the case of C. S. Vail against E. A. Seaborg, supervisor of fisheries, and the state fisheries board.

Mr. Vail sought to enjoin enforcement of the orders of the board closing Puget Sound ports to shipping between August 26 and September 15, and between October 26 and April 30, claiming that delegation of such authority by the legislature was an unlawful delegation of legislative power.

The supreme court found, however, that the legislature had prefaced the law with the declaration of its intention to protect the state's fast disappearing food fish supply of the state to the people of the state, to whom such food fish belong, and thereafter was delegating only the power to administer such protection.
