Golf Facts Worth Knowing.

What is the proper procedure, and is there any penalty?

A. Either player is entitled to have the other hall lifted without penalty; that is, if B is away. A must lift his ball or play it, if requested.

Q. Where a player plays a stroke, say for example an approach to the green, sees his ball stop but does not walk immediately to the green, possibly stopping to help his opponent hunt his ball, then later, on reaching the green, is marable.

to find his ball, can he drop to be control to ther ball as near as possible to where the first was seen to stop?

A. No. Unless he' saw something or somebody actually remove the ball, the case must be treated as a lost ball and played accordingly.

Safe or Out.

A. He is. A runner is out to be standing.

Q. An umpire warned players in a game that they must not slide head foremost. Had he the right to do so?

A. No. A runner may slide as he pleases. There is more risk to the runner in sliding head foremost than feet foremost.

Q. It happened that with three on bases and two out the batter, who hit the ball for a home run, falled to touch first base and was called out and that none of the runner score?

A. The runs did not score because of the provision in rule 59 which says that with two out if the batter is out before he reaches first base he run can count.
