Editor of Stars and Stripes Says Soldiers Succeed.

SUBSIDY HELD FAILURE

W. P. Strandborg of Portland Confers in Washington on Land Settlement Plans.

THE OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, D. C., May 24.—W. P. Strandborg of Portland, member of the Oregon Land Settlement commission, is in Washington for conference with various federal government departments and other agencies with reference to both national and state movements designed to assist veterans of the world war.

He is making a survey of the measures enacted by various states granting aid to veterans in establishing themselves on productive land and in home buying. States which have already passed such acts are Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Minnesota, New Mexico, Oregon, South Dakota and Washington, with a bill now pending in Wyoming.

Work in South Dakota Studied. Mr. Strandborg has gone over the situation in the various states with Richard S. Jones, editor of the Stars and Stripes, and with Senator McNary, father of the pending reclamation bill. He is giving special attention to the work in South Dakota, which has been strongly fostered by Representative Johnson that state, and for which excellent results are claimed.

Editor Jones of Stars and Stripes told Mr. Strandborg that experience has shown that the world war veterans are making good farmers wherever they have been given a fighting chance after being established on productive land.

"From the rather casual study I have made of the subject so far," said Strandborg, "I am convinced that the best results are going to be had by the state if they will work in closest harmony with the reclamation service. The McNary measure, if passed, will open the public lands and constructive work and I believe it will be of great assistance to our organization's association of Oregon now in placing the right kind of veterans on land that will earn them a profitable living. It has already been very well shown by careful and somewhat distressing experience in various sections that you cannot make desirable farmers on a subsidy basis.

Plan Must Be Economically Sound. "The plan to be effective must be economically sound and must not be an artificial subsidy plan. However, the 'preferential' plan adopted by the reclamation service, as in the cases of the Shoshone and North Platte projects in Wyoming, where the veterans are given a 60-day priority filling right, has worked out very successfully without in any sense embodying the questionable subsidy feature.

"It further seems to be true in most states that the veterans are given measures and created land settlement commissions that the legislatures have told the commissions in effect to act in the best interests of the wood and supplied them with manure and saws, instead of with axes and saws."

BEVERIDGE BACKS CHIEF (Continued From First Page.) guided by fundamental principles and never by shallow expediency. Senator Watson praised the executive, legislative and diplomatic record of the present administration and said the recent democratic administration as "debt-incurring, deficit-creating, bond-issuing, surplus-scattering, factory-closing, industry-paralyzing, property-destroying, social-upheaving and cataclysm-producing."

ROW IN TREASURY TAKEN TO HARDING Dover and Blair Involved in "Finish Fight." WORK TAKES BACK SEAT Bureau Employees So Interested in Controversy That Little Attention Given Business.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 24.—The intra-departmental controversy which resulted in the treasury from failure of Assistant Secretary Dover and Collector Blair of the internal revenue bureau to agree on a proposed reorganization of the bureau was carried to President Harding today, but there was no indication from the White House as to what position he would take.

Removal Is Discussed. Earlier in the day members of the Iowa congressional delegation took up the removal of Mr. Sumner with the president and Senator Cummins, republican, Iowa, had a talk with Senator Pepper, republican, Pennsylvania, who is regarded as being close to Mr. Mellon, but no further developments were made known.

Harding Much Concerned. President Harding was said to be much concerned over the apparent conflict, much of which he was said to believe was personal between treasury executives and which generally is considered as having led to the displacement yesterday of two high officers of the internal revenue bureau.

The first morning I was on duty here he arrived with three dollars, and after regarding me with some suspicion he finally entrusted me with his deposit.

He told me he was in the "newspaper business"—a retailer of newspapers. That's Fitz for you! He hasn't been in for a week or two now—I wonder—

At any rate Fitz has long known the value of saving even a little from his slim earnings. I looked at his balance today and he could long ago have left his papers for comfort.
