

BOURBONS THRILLED BY FIERY SPEECHES

Democrats at Olympia Vision Return to Power.

REPUBLICANS ARE LASHED

Fervent Oratory Features Washington State Convention—Storm Develops Over Platform.

PUGET SOUND BUREAU, Olympia, Wash., May 24.—The red line on the chart of democratic hopes in the state of Washington took a sharp upward slant in the course of the party's state convention held here today. Easily moved to enthusiasm by visions of glory, the party might do it restored to power in the state and nation, the assembled delegates spent almost the entire afternoon enthralled by the word pictures of their most eloquent orators.

A platform was adopted. It was for this that the convention was held, but the platform was not presented until late in the day and its contents had been fairly discounted in advance by the many speeches made while waiting for its presentation.

This was not a nominating convention. The direct primary prohibits anything of the sort, but the course of the day and the many conferences several candidates came more or less into the open, either by explicit declaration or by implication.

C. C. Dill of Spokane, ex-representative in Congress, is now an avowed candidate for the United States senate.

Aspirants Are Lining Up. Francis A. Garrecht, of Spokane, ex-district attorney, will be a candidate for the democratic nomination for congress from the fifth district.

Guy O. Shumate of Yakima will be a candidate for a like nomination in the fourth district.

George Fishburn of Tacoma is expected to seek the nomination for congress in the third district. Democratic leaders are doing their best to prevail on William Short, president of the state federation of labor, to be the party's nominee for congress in the first district.

Under the immediate influence and urging of old party friends and associates, Stephen J. Chaskey, chief justice of the supreme court, is said to have admitted his willingness to be the democratic nominee for governor in 1925.

Freston M. Troy, democratic lawyer, of Olympia, will seek election as a nonpartisan to the supreme court bench.

These matters were none of the convention's business, but they were very much the business of the democrats brought together for the occasion.

Major-Elect Speechless. The convention didn't get a good start today. Dr. Edwin J. Brown, mayor-elect of Seattle, and selected for temporary chairman, found himself speechless this morning for the first time in his life.

Today it was apparent that the temporary chairman was playing off the home ground and it was only when he turned away from his manuscript and talked off-hand that the convention got a taste of his usual style.

The promise of a short platform was fulfilled, though the committee kept the convention waiting all afternoon for it. Presumably the time spent by the committee in boiling down the many suggested planks, but in this operation virtually all the promised spice and snap were evaporated.

Toward its close, when it was thought that the convention would end without an inflammatory moment, William R. Lee of Pierce sought to have added to the platform a specific endorsement of the league of nations. The proposal, which had been rejected by the platform committee, brought a storm of protest and support from all sections of the hall. For half an hour the convention resembled an old-time democratic gathering before the direct primary.

Opposition to the plank in view of the complete endorsement of Wilsonian policies carried in the preamble and on the ground that it was not well that the platform be cluttered up with national issues, brought Dr. Brown once more to the floor with an appeal for harmony. Lee then withdrew his plank, and the platform, without addition or amendment of any kind, was adopted as reported by the committee. The platform follows:

COLLINS-DE VALERA PACT CAUSES WORRY

Irish Feared Likely to Demand Independence.

DEFIANT STAND NOTED

English Papers Wonder What Will Be Result of Alliance of Dail Leaders.

LONDON, May 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—The latest developments in Ireland are regarded here as having added to the seriousness of the situation, and considerable anxiety is manifest as to the outcome. The pact between Michael Collins and Eamon de Valera, which was viewed with deep distrust by many from the outset, owing to the latter's avowed uncompromising hostility to the Anglo-Irish treaty and the proposed constitution, now is regarded with increased suspicion in consequence of the Collins address before the Ard Fheis.

(In his address, Mr. Collins said: "If, as has been said, this agreement imperils the Anglo-Irish treaty, we will have to face that in this manner. We have made an agreement which will bring stable conditions to the country, and if these stable conditions are not more valuable than any other agreement, then we must face what these stable conditions will enable us to face.")

This is interpreted generally here as defiance of Great Britain and the Times' Dublin correspondent says: "The statement is so grave that hasty comment upon it would be improper."

The Dublin correspondent of the Daily Telegraph predicts that Great Britain will be confronted at the earliest possible moment with a demand from the whole forces of the Dail Eireann for acknowledgment of Ireland as an independent republic, owing no allegiance to the empire and embracing the whole of Ireland.

He adds: "The treaty from today is of little value. Collins in his speech tore it to fragments and declared himself prepared to face the worst."

The Morning Post's correspondent says the statement means that "if Great Britain objects to the pact on the ground that it violates the treaty, then Great Britain can go to the devil and take the treaty with it."

Irish on Way to London. LONDON, May 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—Representatives of the Irish provisional government are coming to London Thursday night for a conference with representatives of the British cabinet concerning the agreement reached last Saturday between the two Irish political factions. The announcement was made this afternoon in the house of commons by Austen Chamberlain, the government leader.

De Valera Father of Twins. DUBLIN, May 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—Mrs. Eamon de Valera, wife of the republican leader, is giving birth to twin boys, and Mrs. Charles Burgess, wife of the former minister of defense, in Mr. De Valera's cabinet and a prominent opponent of the Anglo-Irish treaty, gave birth to a daughter.

English General Shot. BELFAST, May 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—Brigadier-General Higginson, who recently was in command of British infantry brigade at Cork, was shot and wounded while riding near Tipperary today.

CONDUCTOR IS SUICIDE. John M. Kinney, 50, Takes Strychnine Following Court Summons.

TACOMA, Wash., May 24.—(Special.)—John M. Kinney, 50, one of the best conductors in point of service on the Milwaukee railroad, ended his life by taking strychnine late last night in a hotel here.

In his pocket was a summons to appear before Judge M. L. Clifford in superior court in answer to contempt charges through his failure to provide alimony for his divorced wife. Other papers in his pockets showed that he owed several hundred dollars for court costs, attorney fees and other bills.

Kinney was widely known among railroad men, having worked in the west for 30 years.
