PASSING SHOW WINS LIKE 3-RING CIRCUS

Howard Brothers Put More Punch Into Clever Lines.

FEMININE BEAUTY LURES

Gorgeous Costumes and Scenery Help to Make Shubert Carnival Attractive.

BY LEONE CASS BAER. Mr. and Mrs. Howard's two boys. Willie and Eugene, completely sur-rounded by a spectacular sumptuous-ness, is "The Passing Show of 1921." which opened last night at the Heilig. This Schubert carnival has an allure of feminine beauty in its chorus girls, agile, capering, gorgeous scen-ery and costumes and the two How-ards. Each is a veritable three-ringed circus, Willie the hoodlum and Eugene the dignified, they are clowns, ringmasters and ballyhoo and every-thing. That they have a group of clever entertainers around them in no ring masters and ballyhoo and everything. That they have a group of clever entertainers around them in no way dims their glory. They wrote their own act, they make up the lines and the business and sing whatever song they pick with a persuasive of assistant general freight agent at the craft function. The rest of the show is put together like a patchwork quilt, and a lot of celebrities had their fingers in the pie. For instance, the programme says: "Music by Jean Schwarz; incidental music by Al
Goodman and additional music by Lew Pollock."

It names the are already

It names the art director and the scenic director and the stage direc-tor, it names the orchestra director and mentions that Harold Atteridge wrote the dialogue and lyrics, but all this relates to the rest of the show, that part not occupied by the Howards. When you come away from the theater the part you've forgotten is that part that it took several dozen composers and directors and authors o fix up, and the part you remember s what Willie and Eugene made up between them. They reseived an ovation on their first entrance as travelers on the Sahara, trailing in the wake of a reeling camel, and all through the show they were recalled over and over until they must have been weary with bowling and smiling and selective and covering on and singing and carrying on.

This "Passing Show" is a series o incidents, vaudeville specialties and travesties on New York plays, neatly strung together with songs and dances and with such occasional ex-hilaration as the Howard brothers impart. These poriods fully make up impart. These periods fully make up for the more frequently less exciting

Willie does a series of impersonations in song and chatter that afford him comedy opportunities, and the sings his famous "Bleky From Babylon." He proved his adeptness in comic characterization when he be-came a hired assassin in a court-room scene in "Mecca" and acted un-der the belief that he had been made invisible by having a magic powder blown on him by his confederate,

Burlesque Is Success

In the burlesque of "The Bat" these two were delightful. The most artistic moments of the whole show are the dances of an exquisitely slim and graceful girl. Peggy, with her hand-zome young partner. Cortex a sort of Rodolph Valentino type. These two dance perfectly a series of hauntingly fascinating dances, and were loudly acclaimed by the delighted audience. There are hosts of other dancers, and it may be truthfully said that there isn't a singing voice worth 10 cents in the entire collection, outside the two Howards who both can sing. There are lots of girls, in all the glory and freshness of extreme youth,

There are two acts. Act one has 13 scenes, rich and glowing and gay and colorful. Act two has nine scenes equally rich and colorful and artistic Passing Show" is passing
