BONUS LEGISLATION TO WAIT TEN DAYS

Senators to Be Given Time to Make Campaigns.

McNARY SUGGESTS PLAN

Oregon Senator Proposes Reclamation Measure as Land Settlement Feature.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Efforts to obtain senate consideration of the soldiers' bonus bill will be deferred for at least ten days, it was stated today authoritatively. Whether it will be taken up by agreement among republican leaders or without the consent of some, remains to be determined.

Chairman McCumber of the finance committee, who will present the legislation on the floor, has informed senators that in fixing a time to call the bill up, he will try to suit the convenience of most of them. He said he realized that there were those on each side who had to be absent from time to time because of primary campaigns in their states and who desired to be present when the bonus is considered.

Amendment Is Offered.

Another amendment to the bonus measure was offered today, Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, proposing the Smith-McNary $350,000,000 reclamation measure as a land settlement feature. This bill already has been reported to both the house and senate but as a part of the bonus measure it would be changed, Senator McNary said, so the veterans would be given preference in the purchase of land in excess of the farm unit, and in the preference to homestead public lands lying within a reclamation district.

Veterans to Be Utilized.

Under another change, the service of veterans would be utilized as practicable in the construction of each reclamation project.

Senator McNary said it was his purpose to press his amendment provided a majority of the senate show a desire to incorporate land settlement provisions in the bonus bill.

CITY DECKED FOR SHRINE

FESTIVAL IS ADVERTISED BY GAY GREENS AND BLOOMS.

Directors of Annual Show Plan Entertainment for 1500 Visiting Sailors.

In honor of the visiting Shriners and in order that the red fezzed guests may be advised of the approaching Rose Festival, official rose fete decorations all along Sixth street, from the union station to Washington street, were rushed to completion yesterday by Noble Clay S. Morse, of the local shrine, who is also first vice-president of the Rose Festival board of governors, and active on the festival street decorations committee.

By 3 P. M. the entry way to the city was made gay with the pennants, streamers, festoons of greens and blooms, and baskets of roses for the incoming and departing Shriners.

This scheme of decoration within the next ten days will be carried out through the downtown section of both the east and west sides, for a length of 20 blocks.

At a meeting of the festival officials last night, Fred W. German was appointed chairman of a committee to consider the provision of entertainment features for the 1500 enlisted men comprising the crews of the battleship Connecticut and the six scouts of destroyer division No. 31, who will be in the city during Festival week.

SHRINERS TO GET FLOWERS

Eugene to Give Rhododendrons to Delegates on Trains.

EUGENE, Or., June 9.—(Special.)—A carload of rhododendrons will be distributed by the Eugene Shrine club among the Shriners on special trains over the Southern Pacific line tomorrow night on their way to the national conclave in San Francisco next week.

The flowers were gathered at Lakeside on the coast today and will arrive in Eugene on the midnight train. Committees will meet every passing Shrine train tomorrow and bouquets will be placed in every coach with cards bearing the compliments of the local club and with the statement that these beautiful flowers grow wild in the mountains and along the coast of Oregon.

Members of the local club have concluded that the visiting fez-wearers from the east and middle west will have been surfeited with roses in passing through Portland and other valley cities and that rhododendrons will be a pleasant surprise for them.

Tetu, potentate of Al Kader temple. 3—Four members of national hospital board of trustees: (Left to right) Bishop Frederick W. Keator, Tacoma; Dr. Oscar M. Lanstrom, Helena, Mont.; Sam P. handful of Masons to an organization numbering more than half a million men, was to do something constructive, something more than producing pageantry and having good times.

Thought Turned to Cripples.

"This man, who has been head of every Masonic body in Philadelphia, who is a 33d degree Mason and who has been the head of Lu Lu temple for sixteen consecutive years, thought of the poor, hapless and helpless crippled children and decided that the Shrine could do nothing better for humanity than to construct hospitals throughout North America where the best orthopedic surgeons might use their skill in returning the crippled children to a normal condition."

Mr. Kendrick, who can laugh like a child but who cannot keep back the tears when he finds any child who cannot smile and laugh, saw the realization of his greatest hope in the beginning of construction of the Shriners' hospital here.

Occasion Called Happy One.

"It is a happy occasion for me," he said, "to be here to break the ground for this mercy house.

"It is a happy thought to me that this hospital is to be erected in Portland, where two years ago, in our national convention, it was my pleasure to introduce a resolution which began this work throughout our domain in North America.

"But I do not believe that this work would be under way today if we had not had the wonderful help from the representatives that Al Kader temple of Portland sent back to Des Moines, Ia., last year, when an effort to upset the plan was made.

No Distinction to Be Made.

"As I stand on this wonderful site, I see a vision of a great Mystic Shrine. I can see members of our order pointing proudly to this and similar buildings as the havens of hope for the pain-wracked bodies of destitute children.

"And let it be understood that crippled children of any race, creed or religion will be admitted to these hospitals. If God Almighty put these little crippled children here on earth, the men of the Mystic Shrine will give them skilled treatment, which in the end will return them to the world with the same chance in life as the more fortunate children who are not afflicted in any way."

The parade which had been scheduled was called off by A. L. Tetu, illustrious potentate of Al Kader temple, because of fear that a sudden rain shower would ruin the uniforms of the visiting Shrine bodies.

As a result, the visiting Shriners and many members of Al Kader temple went directly to the hospital site in automobiles.

National Trustees on Hand.

Four members of the national board of trustees in charge of the hospital project—Sam Cochran of Dallas, Tex., chairman of the board; D. Oscar M. Lanstrom of Helena, Mont.; W. Freeland Kendrick and Bishop Frederick W. Keator of Tacoma, posed before a battery of cameras and all took a hand at the silver spade that was used by Mr. Kendrick in turning the first earth on the site. Bishop Keator, although a member of the clergy, proved the most adept in the use of the spade and every shovelful of earth that he threw over his shoulder spelled progress.

With the preliminaries over, young Jack Tetu, 6-year-old son of A. L. Tetu, and Albert Ladner, the third, 8-year-old son of Al Ladner, chief raban of Lu Lu temple of Philadelphia, raised a large American flag.

Shrine Uniforms Worn.

Both Jack Tetu and Albert Ladner were in full Shrine patrol uniform. As if realizing that the very raising of the starry banner meant joy and gladness to many sad little hearts in years to come, the two little chaps performed their important parts in a most serious manner.

Illustrious Potentate Tetu, acting in behalf of Al Kader temple, presented the deed to the 10-acre site to Mayor Baker, chairman of the local board of governors. Mayor Baker, in turn, presented the document to Sam P. Cochran, chairman of the national board of trustees.

"Portland is famed for its scenic wonders and its wonderful, fragrant flowers," said Mr. Cochran, after accepting the deed. "A new beauty has been born in Portland this afternoon, a beauty that will have more fragrance than that of the flower. This beauty is the happiness that will be brought to the hearts of the little children to whom will be given new life and hope by the care that will be bestowed upon them in the institution which will soon rise on this site.

History Is Outlined.

An outline of the history of the Shrine hospital project was given by Dr. Oscar M. Lanstrom of Helena, Mont., who was next to speak.

Bishop Keator, one of the board which selected the site here, gave as one of the chief reasons for his choice that by looking north from the site one could see the state of Washington in the distance.

"And on a clear day one can stand on this site and see four mountains in Washington."

Bishop Keator explained that the hospital would serve a greater area than that contained in Portland or Multnomah county. "It would serve the entire northwest, he said, at least for a time.

More Hospitals Wanted.

"We hope that ultimately there will not be a city or town in all North America that does not contain a Shrine hospital easily accessible to all crippled children," he said.

Following the short talks, Mayor Baker called the site committee of Al Kader temple to the center of the group and the board of governors of the hospital.

The site committee is composed of Hal M. Hutchinson, Harry M. Euler, Dr. S. M. Strohecker, Mayor Baker and Dr. M. B. Marcellus. The mayor informed those gathered that the site was first found and reported to the committee by Mr. Euler and Dr. Marcellus.

The local board of governors who will have charge of the construction and operation of the Portland hospital is composed of Mayor Baker, chairman; Judge George Stapleton, A. L. Tetu, Frank S. Grant, Dr. S. M. Strohecker and W. J. Hofmann.

Shrine Delegations Arrive.

Early yesterday morning Shrine delegations from Hella temple, Dallas, Tex.; Osman temple, St. Paul; El Kahir temple, Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Gizah temple, Victoria, B. C., and representatives from many other temples arrived in Portland.

The Hella delegation, headed by Dr. Harrison B. Cave, potentate, was the largest that entered the city yesterday. It arrived in two special trains, and the entire city was aware of its arrival before the union station was reached. A huge siren, manipulated by Tommie Hunter of Dallas, made Portland residents think that the town was on fire. But it was only the live wires of Texas arriving.

At 9 o'clock the crack Hella organizations, including a band that rivals Sousa's, a patrol that parades like a regular army battalion, a drum corps that would bring joy to any civil war veteran, chanters that can sing and trumpeters that are hard to equal, marced from the union station to the Multnomah hotel. These organizations were accompanied by Al Kader's band and patrol.

Band Enjoys Entertaining.

Two minutes after the wild Texans had reached the lobby of the Multnomah hotel it seemed like the days in June two years ago when the Shrine bands and drum corps serenaded in the hotel lobbies continually.

For, while there was but one band, its members seemed to enjoy entertaining. They played one piece after another, and probably would still be furnishing music if some of Potentate Tetu's lieutenants had not insisted that they take a ride over the Columbia river highway.

The other delegations were met by members of the committee appointed by Al Kader temple and headed by A. H. Lea, past potentate and imperial representative of Al Kader, and escorted to the hotel.

Today nine special trains will stop in Portland, and one three-car special as well as many individual Shriners who are headed to the oasis in San Francisco.

SIDELIGHTS OF SHRINE VISIT

THREE guardsmen of Hella temple, James E. Forrest, weighing 240 pounds; Long Slim Bill Ellis, 6 feet 3 inches and as thin as he is tall, and Harrison B. Cave, potentate, are the inseparables of the Texas delegation. Potentate Cave measures up only 5 feet 6 inches and is always placed in the center of the trio. When occupying a sidewalk, it is impossible for any person to pass the three guardsmen.

Things were all upset in the Hella temple delegation Thursday at Seattle, for Potentate Cave was missing. It seems that on the day previous the "pote" met a former resident of Dallas, Tex., in the person of L. D. McLean, and these two men were so overjoyed at meeting one another that the potentate missed both sections of his train.

From the waitresses in a restaurant to the chorus in the Follies in one jump is the story that George Mead, owner of one of the largest eating emporiums in Philadelphia, tells to the boys. He had a waitress who was the best in the land, he says, who was chosen to represent Philadelphia at a pageant at Atlantic City. No sooner had the pageant ended than the waitress was signed for the Follies, and now she is dancing her way to fame in New York every night.

Hella temple has some of the best musical organizations to be found anywhere. And one of the features in these organizations is big Pat Fabiger, the bass drummer, who has yet to learn the meaning of the word "tired." Pat holds the world's record for constant drumming and at San Francisco next week he expects to break his own record.

* * *

"Say it with flowers," the famous trade phrase that all florists now use, was originated by Charles H. Grakelow, who is in Portland with the Lu Lu temple delegation of Philadelphia. Mr. Grakelow is assistant rabban of Lu Lu temple and is exalted ruler of the Elks lodge in the Quaker city.

* * *

W. G. Haskell, state senator in Iowa, who arrived in Portland yesterday on the Osman temple special, had a birthday a few days ago. He invited the entire party on the Osman car and when they were about half through the meal he took up a collection. The Osman boys claim that Senator Haskell made $10.80 on the dinner.

* * *

Al Reed, one of the committee in charge of the two Hella temple trains, is the sleepless wonder. He never sleeps and he doesn't want anyone else to sleep and this explains why all of the Hella party on the second section slept yesterday until after 10 o'clock. Al left the train and several hundred Texans got the first undisturbed sleep since they left Dallas.

* * *

When the Hella delegation returns to Dallas there is one of its party that will have to go into hiding. He is Oswin K. King, better known as Uncle Jake, the official scribe of Hella temple. Some of the stories that he has sent back to the Dallas Journal will cause some of the Turkish squadron to do some fast explaining. And when men from Texas become aroused, it's time to move, so Uncle Jake will have to take a vacation for at least a few weeks when the boys find out what he has said about them.

* * *

J. Harry Lewis of St. Paul, publisher of the Crescent, the official organ of the Shrine, received congratulations on all sides when Hella temple drove in yesterday. Mr. Cave of Hella explained that the reason his temple could make the trip to San Francisco in the two specials was that the Crescent had actually paid a dividend to the temple on stock bought eight years ago. It was the first dividend, but it was a juicy one, according to Cave.

Beautiful Portland girls who were down town yesterday, or the majority of them, met Fred McJunkin (in person), the dwarf drum major of Hella temple band. According to his card, which he handed to the girls with a hug and a kiss, he is only 120 inches tall, weighs but 4000 ounces and is single—always has been, but will listen to reason. He was still single when he left Portland early this morning.

* * *

Warrants for the arrest of Tom Hunter, the royal keeper of the Hella temple siren, which aroused thousands of people in Portland yesterday morning, have been issued in at least three northwest towns. For in these three towns the fire department came dashing down the street in response to the siren which is kept in constant use by Tom Hunter. Not only are the fire department officials on the war path, but the boys in charge of the baggage cars are also sore. They say that the siren makes so much noise that it breaks up their game of African golf. "We can't talk to the galloping ivories, so how can we play?" one of the baggage smashers complained.

* * *

Tommie Risworth of Osman temple brought his wife along on this trip and the other members of the delegation say that he hasn't acted a bit natural. However, his wife has some friends who will keep her busy in San Francisco and it is freely predicted that Tommie will hit his stride in the city by the Golden Gate.

Usually on caravans taken by Shriners where stops are made in different cities, chicken is the daily fare three times a day. But it seems since hitting the west coast salmon has been substituted for chicken. "It's so now," said Dr. A. C. Scott, "that when we are handed the menu we just say, bring on your salmon."

* * *

Hella's special trains were worth seeing for the decorations alone. On the front of each engine was a kewpie likeness of Potentate Cave, "Hella temple, Dallas," was painted on each of the baggage cars, and on the sides of each of the Pullman cars were illuminated camels. On the rear of each train was an illuminated desert scene to carry out the idea of the pilgrimage. The decorators in the delegation are John Bounds and T. S. Puthcock.

* * *

"What's the price now?" was the first question Charlie Welsh, potentate of Gizah temple of Victoria, asked when he hopped from the train. Charlie always is interested in the activities of the wet goods provenders in the states, because he says it's such a novelty to the boys from the other side of the line. "Price doesn't make any difference with us. Come up some time and we'll prove it."

Fines and Jail Terms Imposed.

MEDFORD, Or., June 9.—(Special.)—As the result of a raid made by the Medford officers last night, in Justice Taylor's court today Jerry Barnes, local citizen, and K. Suzuki, well-known local Japanese gardener, each were sentenced to one month in jail and to pay fines of $300 each. Barnes was found with a small quantity of moonshine liquor in his room at a hotel and at Suzuki's residence were found three gallons of moonshine and a still. For some time he had been making liquor of wormy and imperfect figs and delivering it to customers, concealed in baskets of lettuce and other garden products.
