Problems of Dressmaking

LINNTON, Or.—Dear Madam Richet: I like to read your answers to others and am sure I'll enjoy my clothes better if I have your help.

I have ripped up an old dress and would like to dye it the color of the blue enclosed. If I have good luck dyeing it, would it look well made up with silk or cotton crepe the same shade into one-piece dress for evening wear? The enclosed picture will give you a good idea of what I had in mind to have the sleeves and underpart of silk and an open effect of the wool grade, sub-colored with some neat pattern.

I am 5 feet 10 inches in height and weigh 145 pounds; have black hair and fair skin.

I am a little skeptical about the cases. Don't you think I'm too short and heavy to wear them? I have a navy blue wool, one-piece dress, with just a little red trimming, and would like the cape with red silk. Would you suggest a long cape or a short one? Thanking you.

MRS. K. C. LINNTON, Or.—I am glad to know that the column is of interest and help to you and trust that the suggestions here given will be the very things you wish.

In the July Delineator, page 28, No. 3317, there is a model which is in better taste for evening than either of the ones enclosed. Have the under drop of satin or taffeta, also the sleeves, and embroider designs as shown in black rope silk. This will make you a stunning frock and one which will serve many occasions. If I can be of further help feel free to write.

The stout figure can wear the cape if in choosing the wearer considers the line which gives length rather than the one which detracts. A splendid model is also shown in the issue above mentioned, on page 29, No. 3748. The only touch of red on the blue cape should be in the fringe.

PORTLAND.—Dear Madam Richet: In making a one-piece dress or myself, can make the best fit only by taking a tuck across at the waistline, an inch or more at the center, and another at the side seams. This prevents wearing a loose tied girdle, which is unbecoming. Could the tuck be laid in the pattern or the difficulty be dealt with in any other way? I wish to put a little hand work on a

TODAY'S AID TO BEAUTY

Hair is by far the most conspicuous thing about us and is probably the most easily damaged by bad or careless treatment. If we are very careful in hair washing, we will have virtually no hair troubles. An especially fine shampoo for this weather, one that brings out all the natural beauty of the hair; that dissolves and entirely removes all dirt, excess oil and dandruff; can easily be used at trifling expense by simply dissolving a teaspoonful of canthox (which you can get at any drugist's) in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid—enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. This chemically dissolves all impurities and creates a soothing, cooling lather. Rinsing leaves the scalp spotlessly clean, soft and pliant, while the hair takes on the glossy richness of natural color, but is fluffiness which makes it seem much heavier than it is. After a canthox shampoo, arranging the hair is a pleasure.—Adv.

A SPECIAL meeting of the Portland Parent-Teacher council was called by the new president, Mrs. D. B. Kelly, for last Friday afternoon, and was responded to by representatives from 23 circles. O. Webb it was voted to continue the gatherings as called meetings through the vacation season.
