"AMERICA TO GO ON"

President Addresses Thousands at Big Homecoming Celebration in Marion.

for more than a third of a century. I have done a lot of cheering, which is no less essential to the forward movement in a community than it is in football or baseball. Amid the cheering and shouting, I did my share of observing and recording, and I could relate things interesting to me, probably interesting to you of Marion, but they would seem rather trivial to that large community which is habituated to expect some form of broadcasting to every presidential utterance.

"An interesting reminder of the inescapable responsibility for presidential utterance came to me a year ago. I was on a brief vacation in the mountains of New Hampshire and my generous host said we must go to the nearby village which had been his boyhood home and meet the people who would be assembled. We motored down the mountain, we had a most agreeable meeting, and I spoke extemporaneously for probably 15 minutes.

"Sixty days later there came to me a desk newspaper published in Pekin, China, with a verbatim reprint of the speech.
"Of course there was nothing in it which I did not say sincerely. No one fit for public service will ever be guilty of that.

"My thought is that, ordinarily, there is time and place for particular speech, but in the presidential office all times and all places are very much alike. There may be a justified pride in the manifest interest of all our own people and all the world being interested in what the United States government is thinking or saying, but I confess being humane enough to wish to talk of the intimate things relating to Marion, without misconception or misapprehension.

Leaders of Industry Met.

"There is very much of the latter. Maybe it will not be unseemly to relate an instance. Several weeks ago, when the returning tide of industrial activity made the time seem opportune, I invited some 40 or 50 captains of the great iron and steel industry to dine with me, to confer about the abolition of the 11-hour work day. I did not choose to proclaim the purpose in advance, because I dislike the tendency to promise excessively and accomplish inadequately. Imagine my surprise, yea, my amusement, to read in an important metropolitan newspaper that I was dining the steel barons to 'shake them down' for the deficit in campaign funds of the president.

"It would be good to talk about Marion, just among ourselves. I know nothing more interesting to any man than his own community. If he isn't interested, he isn't a good citizen.
"A century sounds like a long while at first impression, but after all it is only a little while. The world is communities in the world ten or 20 centuries old, not half so important in world activities today; perhaps they have contributed to human progress infinitely less in all their time than Marion has in one century. Nay, in a shorter time than that, for the Marion we boast has been really only a half-century in the making.

Disparagement Not Meant.

"I mean no disparagement of the older and earlier citizenship. There was a great and highly essential work in blazing the way for the present-day civilization. It required strong men and not a few women to turn wilderness into worth-while habitations. Malaria and ague sorely tried human bodies even though souls cheerfully resisted. General Pershing has spoken of the fearless colonists, and we ought to reverence them for their surpassing request of liberty and nationality, but the builders of the west, the men and women who marched with the 'Western Star of Empire,' were no less brave, no less heroic, and were more prophetic. They sensed the greater possibilities of which the colonists had not dreamed.

"I said a century seemed a long time in which to achieve, and it is yet only a little while. The nation lacks four years of boasting a century and a half, but discovery came four centuries ago and a century and a half of colonial development preceded the national beginning.

Pilgrim Celebration Recalled.

"It was my fortune to participate in the tercentenary celebration of the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth a year ago, and there was the constant reminder that New England had preceded us two centuries in the making of America.

"But there is a rather more personal reason for the 'little while' view. I became a citizen of Marion 40 years ago, almost to a day, and have been a resident of the county just about 50 years. And it all has the seeming of being but a little while. Yet I could almost qualify as a pioneer.

"The Marion I first saw in 1882 had less than 4000 people, but my first impression was that of a very much a city, in which I feared I should be hopelessly lost. The industrial awakening had not been given notable expression. Edward Huber began the industrial march, but he was still struggling as most industries struggle before they are firmly founded.

"Probably Marion was countrified as I felt, but I did not know. It was my viewpoint, my limited vision, which kept me from knowing. You see, I came from the farm and village and the county seat of 4000 loomed big in my vision, because I had seen nothing greater. Surely it looked ten times as large as it does today, though the Marion of today is ten times larger than then and twice ten times as important in its relationship to the world of human activities.

"This confession is meant to have application. How important is the viewpoint to all the impressions and problems of life. The village goes to the great city, is confused by

Mr. Shura Rulowa.
Mr. Shura Rulowa is perfectly satisfied to remain in America, although Russia is her native land. The doings of the bolsheviks have no appeal for her. The Slavic temperament, however, is necessary in the interpretation of classic dancing and the conception of something new, Mr. Rulowa believes.

Mr. Rulowa and her company are presenting an act they call "The Poetry of Motion," which is beautiful and colorful and the company supporting the star are all skilled dancers.

The high tide of activities, and awed by the complacency of those accustomed to the narrow vision of a provincial, and is so designated. But those who proclaim him are oftentimes no less provincial, because they too have the narrow vision; they do not know the village and country life, which is ever freshening and swelling through the current of our national life.

Expansion is Contemplated.

"The early Marion had only the viewpoint of the county civic and trading center, until industrial genius flashed on the screen the picture of factory production, balances of trade in larger circles and the attending advancements incident to greater activities. It is not for me to detail the expansion and transformation. We are an outstanding industrial and commercial community today, and I join you in a very great pride in the Marion of 1922 and wish for it accelerated growth, magnified importance and larger social, educational, moral and patriotic attainment in the century to come. It would little avail to record more material enlargements. The consciousness of mental and spiritual attainment readily fostered by material growth is the real compensation to be striven for.

"Let me turn my thoughts to the natal day of the nation. One hundred and forty-six years have passed since the prophet's beginning, and it will be a patriotic thing to stop for retrospection and introspection, and circumspection, to take stock about our keeping of the legacy bequeathed by the founding fathers.

World Relations Secure.

"In our international relations all is well. They are secure today with more assuring prospects of peace than ever before in the history of the republic.
"Frankly, we have a broader viewpoint than the founding fathers; we must have, because human progress has altered our world relationships, but we have held firmly to all the fundamentals to which they committed us. We cannot be aloof from the world, but we can impress the world with American ideals. I mean to say it, because it is seemingly to say it, the world believes today in American national unselfishness as never before and recognizes our commitment to justice to be no less resolute than our determination to preserve our liberties. Even Russia, toward whom we remain aloof, except in sympathy and a very practical proof thereof, looks upon America as a friend and example.

"But let us turn specifically to introspection, take stock among ourselves. Materially we have surpassed the wildest dreams of the inspired founders.

"We are great and rich and powerful as to states and sections;

we are in the full concord of union. This great organic law has been preserved and its ambiguities removed. The constitution has been amended to meet the popular will. Our representative form of constitutional government is responsive to the will of the majority, responsive to the expression of deliberate public opinion. It must be so to endure.

"The foremost thought in the constitution is the right to freedom and the pursuit of happiness. Men must be free to live and achieve. Liberty is gone in America when any man is denied by anybody the right to work and live by that work. It does not matter who denies. Governments cannot tolerate any class or group, denomination through force. It will be a sorry day when group domination is reflected in our laws. Government and the laws which government is charged with enforcing, must be for all the people, ever aiming at the common good.

Tendencies Not Surprising.
"The tendencies of the present day are not surprising. War stirred the passions of men and left the world in upheaval. But the readjustment is no less inevitable and it is world wide. It is the problem of mankind. Your government has sought to aid with patience, with tolerance, with sympathy. It has sought to mitigate the burdens, it has sought the merging of viewpoints to make the way easier. It believes the America of our opportunity and unchallenged security affords the way to solution.

"In war we give all we possess, all our lives, all our resources, every one to make sure of national survival. Our preservation in peace is no less important. It calls for every patriotic offering because dangers from within are more difficult to meet than the alien enemy.

"My one outstanding conviction after 16 months in the presidency is that the greatest traitor to his country is he who appeals to prejudice and inflames passion, when sober judgment and honest speech are so necessary to establish tranquility and security.

Truth is Declared Needed.
"I leave you that thought that on this centennial day, because its lesson will save many a wound, many a cross current in the happiness of the community; it will save many a menace in the national life.

"I have no fear about the republic. We are not only stronger, but we are morally better than when we began. If there is seeming excess of exploitation, profiteering, dishonesty and betrayal, it is only because we are grown the larger, and we know theills of life and read of them more than the good that is done. I don't wonder that the ignorant and ill-informed are made restless by the magnified stories of public abuses and proclaimed privilege. We need truth, only the truth, the wholesome truth, as the highest aid to Americanization and the manifestation of highest patriotism. "America will go on. The fundamentals of the republic and all its liberties will be preserved and government must maintain the supremacy of law and authority. Under these liberties has its fullest fruition and men attain to reveal the glory of liberty's institutions."

BERLIN, July 4.—(By the Associated Press.)—Herrmann Mueller, on behalf of the majority socialists, has written a letter to the leader of the independent socialists in the Reichstag, it was announced today, stating that it will be possible to suppress permanently the German monarchists only if a solid republican government is formed, and asking the independents if they are prepared to join Chancellor Wirth's cabinet with that object in view.

Herr Crispian on behalf of the independents replied, agreeing to discuss the question.
The Maerchrichtenblatt, the only newspaper appearing in Berlin today, said negotiations had commenced between the leaders of the trades union and the majority and independent socialists on the question of joining the government and that the proceedings are going forward harmoniously.

You can talk business in print

When you talk business with men, you say things that are worth listening to.

The chances are that if you wrote down on paper and had printed many of the things you say about your business, these remarks would be read with interest by your customers and prospects.

People subscribe to trade papers and technical papers because they contain facts of value and interest. Surely there are equally interesting facts about your business that you can send direct to your trade by Third-Class Mail in attractive folder and circular form.

Interview yourself about your business once a month or so. See that this interview is properly written, illustrated, and printed, and send it to your trade.

Done well, it pays.

OREGON ELECTRIC RAILWAY COMPANY

To Employees Members of the Federated Shop Craft:

The management of these railway companies requests that striking employees affiliated with the Federated Shop Crafts give earnest consideration to the following quotation from statement by Chairman Hooper of the United States Railroad Labor Board:

"Regardless of any question of the right of men to strike, the men who take the strikers' places are merely accepting the wages and working conditions prescribed by a government tribunal and are performing a public service. They are not accepting the wages and working conditions which an employer is trying to impose.

"For this reason, public sentiment and full governmental power will protect the men who remain in their positions and new men who may come in."

It is the wish of the management that the harmonious relations which have in the past existed between these companies and their employees may continue, and in order to protect the interests of employees who are now on strike, such employees are hereby advised that all who report for duty on or before Wednesday, July 5th, 1922, will be returned to service in their former positions and with seniority rights unimpaired. Those who fail to return on or before Wednesday, July 5th, 1922, will lose their seniority and, if re-employed, rank as new men, and their seniority will date from the time of their re-employment.
