U. S. CABLE PLANT ATTACKED BY IRISH

Sandbag Barricades Are Thrown Up Nearby.

CENSORSHIP IS BEGUN

Large Number of Motor Cars and Motorcycles Taken—Lines Are Trans-Atlantic.

CORK, July 6.—(By the Associated Press.—Word has reached here that the cable station of the Commercial Cable company of New York at Waterville, the terminus of the trans-Atlantic cables, has been threatened by the irregular Irish forces who have seized property of the company and its employes, terrorized the families of the employes and have demanded the key to the school quarters to be used as general headquarters of the Irish force.

Waterville is on Ballinskillings bay at the southwest extremity of Ireland and is the landing point for a large number of cables connecting with the United States. The trouble has been serious for some time in this section. On July 1 the first direct operations began against the Commercial Cable's quarters when the irregulars threw up sandbag barricades at the coastguard house. The free state forces were powerless against this move as they were without arms.

The next day the irregulars seized a large number of motor cars and motorcycles. They also established a censorship for letters and telegrams. The situation became very disquieting at Waterville yesterday.

MILITARY RULE IS CHARGED

De Valera Declares Pact Between Irish Parties Is Torn Up.

LONDON, July 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—Eamon de Valera, the republican leader, in a message addressed to the people of the United States, declared the pact between the Irish parties has been torn up; that civil war has broken out; that the Dail Eireann is not allowed to meet, and that the provisional government has assumed a military dictatorship supported by the British big guns.

"The danger to Ireland which I feared most and warned our people of—civil war—has come upon us," said Mr. de Valera in his message. "Soldiers of the army of the republic have been attacked by forces of the provisional government at the instigation of English politicians, who wanted an immediate set-off to the shooting of Sir Henry Wilson in order to avert from themselves political consequences which they feared.

"The political pact between the Irish parties which had insured peaceful elections which could have secured the unity of the Irish army and which was the only hope of maintaining peace was ordered to be torn up, although the pact had been ratified by the national assembly and by the national convention of the Sinn Fein.

"The Dail Eireann has not been allowed to meet and the provisional government, relying upon the English powers, has unconstitutionally assumed a military dictatorship and with English big guns, English ammunition and English methods of press censorship and false propaganda, has made war on the voluntary soldiers of Ireland who are simply keeping their oath to the public and preventing the sovereign independence of their country from being surrendered.

"The Irish people want a republic. They do not want an English king as their king or an English governor-general, or an English privy councillor as legal supervisors. Under threat of a renewal of the infamous war many of our people have been induced to give an appearance of submission, but there are men and women who will not submit and who will never pretend to give an allegiance which it is not their intention to render, and all these today send their felicitations to the great republic of America and their greetings to the descendants of those whose faithfulness to the cause of independence on some of the dark hours that succeeded 1776 won for America the proud position she now enjoys."

A note appended to the message explained that its issuance was delayed because the censor in Dublin refused to pass it for transmission.

CLARK FUNERAL IS HELD

Military Honors Paid to Member of Coast Artillery Corps.

ABERDEEN, Wash., July 6.—(Special.)—With military honors last rites for Perry N. Clark, 19-year-old son of J. W. Clark, were held yesterday morning from the Whiteside chapel. An American flag covered the coffin, while a wealth of flowers from individuals, lodges, societies in the city surrounded it. Rev. Charles McDermoth officiated. A detachment of the 489th company, coast artillery guard, of which the young man was a member, formed an escort which fired the salute at Fern Hill cemetery.

Pallbearers, who were all fraternity brothers and members of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity at the University of Washington with young Clark, were: Vernon Bellman, Casper Schnieder, Hubert Lewis, Floyd Vammen of Aberdeen, Theodore Smort of Portland and James Palmer of Seattle.

AMUNDSEN IS DELAYED

Adverse Ice Conditions Postpone Flight for North Pole.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 6.—Captain Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer who plans an airplane flight from Point Barrow, Alaska, across the North Pole to Spitzbergen or Grants Land, has been delayed by adverse ice conditions in Bering sea and his ship, the Maud, probably will not reach Point Barrow before July 20, according to word received here today by H. H. Hammer, the explorer's American representative.

Captain Amundsen had originally planned to hop off from Point Barrow about July 15.

ORANGE DIET APPROVED

Physician Says Use of Fruit Will Prevent Spinal Curvature.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 6.—One of the most frequent causes of spinal curvature in children can be eliminated by including oranges in their daily diet, declared Dr. Thomas L. Thorburn of New York at the National Osteopathic convention here today.

Dr. Thorburn stated that a large proportion of the cases of curvature in children are the results of malnutrition and a deficiency of certain food elements, producing a softening of the pulpus which forms the center of the cartilage cushions between the vertebrae. When this pulp softens, he said, it permits the vertebrae to rotate or bend to one side and thus marks the beginning of a spinal curvature.

Dr. Thorburn declared that if the child's diet contained two or three oranges daily the proper food elements would be provided and the results would be a decrease of spinal curvature.

The memory of Dr. Andrew Taylor Still, founder of osteopathy, was honored by the delegates today. Dr. W. A. Gravett of Dayton, O., was in charge of the ceremonies and addresses on the uplift work of Dr. Still were made by Dr. Asa Willard of Missoula, Mont., and Dr. Josephine Liffring Pierce of Lima, O.

WHAT CONGRESS DID AS ITS DAY'S WORK.

Senate.

Debated application of cloture to tariff revision, Borah, republican, Idaho, denouncing increased taxation, the bonus and all forms of extravagance.

Smoot, republican, Utah, declared he will read his Crowder letter to senate and lay bare entire plan of sugar refiners and New York bankers to control sugar industry of this country.

Tariff debate made little progress, no vote being taken.

President Harding denounced by Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, as most flagrant violator of prohibition laws.

GOVERNOR KEEPS STILL

ATTORNEYS RETAINED TO DEFEND ELECTION CONTEST.

Friends Say Demurrer Will Maintain Charles Hall Filed Briefs Too Late.

SALEM, Or., July 6.—(Special.)—Governor Olcott announced today that he had retained Attorneys Jay Bowerman of Portland and Roy Shields of Salem to represent him in the election contest proceedings filed in the Marion county circuit court here last night on behalf of Charles Hall, defeated candidate for the republican nomination for governor at the recent primary election.

R. R. Coster, secretary of the so-called Oregon Defense league, appears as contestant in the action. Governor Olcott was named as contestee. Governor Olcott said that any defense he might make in the case was in the hands of his attorneys, and that he had no statement to make with relation to the contest proceedings.

Friends of the governor said today, however, that the case probably will be brought to issue through the filing of a demurrer to the complaint by Mr. Olcott's attorneys. This demurrer, it was said, will allege that the time for asking a recount of the votes expired five days after Governor Olcott filed his formal acceptance of the nomination. This acceptance was filed with the secretary of state two weeks ago.

TOURIST LOSES FARM

Property Given to Complainant in Breach-of-Promise Suit.

TACOMA, Wash., July 6.—T. N. Pederson, a resident of Lewis county, is now touring Europe, but not with his bride-who-was-to-have-been. When he returns from his tour he will discover that Miss Eliza Morgan of Tacoma, who declared Pederson promised to marry her, is in possession of his fine Lewis county farm.

Superior Judge Card today signed a breach-of-promise judgment for $12,000 in favor of Miss Morgan and at the same time signed a special execution on the farm, which is said to be worth approximately the amount of the judgment.

Miss Morgan alleges that Pederson promised to marry her last Christmas and take her on his European trip, which he began in January. He refused to take notice of the suit.

IDAHO BANK IS ROBBED

Outlaws Lock Officers in Vault and Take $3500.

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho, July 6.—Two unmasked men held up the Jefferson County National bank at Rigby, Idaho, near here, this afternoon and escaped with approximately $3500 in currency.

Officers of the bank were locked in a vault by the robbers, who apparently have made good their escape.

Gas Kills Hotel Keeper.

OLYMPIA, Wash., July 6.—John McKanna, 70, landlord of a local hotel, was found dead in his room today seated in a chair beside a gas heater with an open jet.

SECRET IS WELL KEPT

Soldier Picks Up Handfuls of Yellow Metal While He Stoops to Drink in Jungle.

NEW YORK, July 1.—(Special.)—A party of nine men organized at Katonah, N. Y., and including substantial citizens regarded as hard-headed business men, sailed on the Majestic in the hope of reaching in the jungles of the Belgian Congo, 6000 miles from civilization, a stream in whose bed nuggets of gold are to be picked up by handfuls.

The existence of this El Dorado in darkest Africa is vouched for by the supposed discoverer, who is the guide of the party. He is Julius J. Dolgos, a chemical engineer, who has lived at Goldens bridge, near Katonah, since the war. Serving in Africa in the mounted forces during the war, his horse tumbled with him down a deep ravine, landing him on the side of a gold-paved brook. He picked up several handfuls of the precious metal, kept the secret after rejoining his fellow troopers and sold the nuggets after the war to a jeweler for $1600, according to his story.

The expedition of nine members, backed by their own money and that of small capitalists in New York state, New York city and Connecticut was arranged after many long conferences.

The plan to send a party of argonauts deep into Africa on a mission far more dangerous and difficult than that of crossing the plains or rounding the Cape in '49, has been developing for months. Capital of unknown amount has been raised.

Secret Is Well Kept.

The secret has been whispered under the seal of confidence to scores, if not hundreds. It has been well kept, as such things go, but someone "sprung a leak" at Katonah after the expedition had departed. Almost the whole countryside in that part of the state has been admitted to some part or all of the secret. Relatives of the adventurous men and their bankers expressed great indignation when they learned that the plans for the gold-seeking expedition had become public.

The discovery by Dologos is said to have been made in 1917. Operating with cavalrymen in the Belgian Congo, he became lost in a jungle, according to the story told at Katonah. The vegetation was so thick as to conceal the ground from both horse and man, and the horse stepped out into space and tumbled with the rider, rolling over and over again down the sides of a slope, their fall broken by the thick growth, so that both escaped serious injury.

Nuggets Are Found.

After readjusting his saddle and looking around, Dolgos walked his horse along the ravine. At first the ravine was dry, but he came upon a spring of water rising from a small basin. It flowed a short distance and then disappeared into another basin.

The thirsty trooper lay prone and drank. He noticed that the bottom of the basin was paved with yellow pebbles. Picking one up, he found it heavy and metallic. On being scratched it shone like gold. Dolgos filled his pockets.

The reported discovery by Dolgos is far greater than the original one by John Marshall in California in 1848. He picked up a few small bits of gold in a mill race near Coloma. His find, followed by similar discoveries by employes of Captain Sutter, brought 80,000 people to California in the following year, in spite of efforts to husband the secret. The news traveled back overland from California to the Mississippi valley and farther east, and by ship to New York and New England. The gold seekers took two main routes overland by prairie schooner from St. Joseph and by ship from New York and Boston.

SEARCHES END IN FAILURES

Metal Believed to Exist, but Many Fevers Prevent Discovery.

British, French and Belgian scientists have been of the opinion that gold was to be found in plentiful quantities in certain parts of Belgian Congo. Many expeditions have set out up the Congo river northeast from Boma, the capital of the Belgian state, to a point some 250 miles from that city.

At that point the Congo is extremely wide, fringed on either side with dense tropical jungles spreading over a rolling surface.

Here are to be found numerous ravines hidden entirely by the thick undergrowth of shrubbery. The earth formation is of peculiar type and resembles, it is said, the soil and rock aspect of the once famous Alaska gold fields.

Organized expeditions in a large measure have failed in the past, however, to unearth any large amount of gold nugets. Every year some straggler drifts into Boma with a story of a rich find. Some are able to substantiate the stories, while others, believed stricken with fever, are regarded as delirious and little credit is given their reports.

In 1917 a party of English scientists spent approximately four months scouting through the Congo jungles in the hope of establishing the real worth of any possible gold veins. Disaster overcame the party in the form of fever and sickness, and their work was not finished. Mineralogists, however, then expressed the opinion that there undoubtedly were rich gold veins in certain parts of the jungles, especially in the neighborhood of the treacherous ravines, but because of their almost inaccessible location it was predicted that probably years would ensue before full discovery and actual mining resulted.

LUMBER MILL IS BOUGHT

Two Portland Men Included in Company That Buys Concern.

KELSO, Wash., July 6.—(Special.)—C. A. Taylor, Charles Kletch, William Beck, Al Bray and J. W. Taylor of this city and Max Whittlesay and George Barker of Portland have purchased the mill and equipment of the Linco Log & Lumber company at Lindberg, Wash., near Morton, on the Tacoma & Eastern.

They are organizing the C. A. Taylor Log & Lumber company with a capitalization of $150,000. C. A. Taylor, William Beck, Al Gray, Charles Kletch and George Barker are trustees, and Mr. Taylor will be president and manager; William Beck vice-president and Max Whittlesay secretary-treasurer.

The Oregonian publishes practically all of the want ads printed in the other three Portland papers, in addition to thousands of exclusive advertisements not printed in any other local paper.

White shirts with small bow ties are correct.
