Priest Says Story True. A priest, whose name must remain out of the story, said, when asked about the case:

"Most interesting. Of course it is true. I mean to this extent, that there is an extraordinary occurrence in a convent. Personally I regard it as nothing short of supernatural."

The priest then asked if the reporter had seen another clergyman, whose name cannot be disclosed. "He interviewed her," continued the first priest. "He describes it as something out of the ordinary phases of life. See him."

The second priest was found at an institution where he was conducting a retreat. Reporters had gathered proof that he had talked freely and sympathetically of the case and had put his views into a four-page manuscript, but he denied to the reporters who visited him that he knew anything about it.

"I will not even discuss it with you," he said.

THE OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, D. C., July 7.—An investigation of government crop insurance for farmers was proposed in a bill offered in the senate by Senator McNary of Oregon. In a speech explaining his bill Senator McNary declared that this congress had done more than any of its predecessors to better the condition of the farmer, but that much more waited to be done.

McNARY PROPOSES TO INSURE CROPS

New Legislation Wanted as Aid to Farmers.

BILL OFFERED SENATE

Investigation of Plan to Offset Hazards of Agriculture Is Asked by Oregonian.

THE OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, D. C., July 7.—An investigation of government crop insurance for farmers was proposed in a bill offered in the senate by Senator McNary of Oregon. The bill was introduced at the request of farmers and agricultural championing from all parts of the west.

"Today I offered a concurrent resolution providing for the appointment of a joint congressional committee consisting of three members of each house to investigate the subject of crop insurance, with a view to determining the practicability and expediency of creating a government crop insurance bureau, or other agency," he said.

There is no industry subject to as many vicissitudes and hazards as farming. A year's toil and crop investment may be destroyed in a night. This threatening possibility is one of the reasons that drives farmers to the already over-concentrated result in a condition both uneconomic and fraught with social evils.

Excessive heat or rain may ruin his planted fields. His gardens or orchards may suffer from the frosts, the lack of heat or drought. His growing grain or fruit may be injured by plant diseases or suffer damage by wind storms or hail.

Insurance Is Proposed. "The plan I propose by the resolution contemplates a study of all forms of crop insurance and the inclusion in a general legislative bill of all forms of losses against which insurance may be practicable."

For many years the farmers have carried their fire risk. Indeed, there are more than 2900 mutual fire insurance companies in the country today actively, prosperously and soundly engaged in fire insurance. The total amount of insurance which they now have in force exceeds $3,000,000.

Insurance contracts against loss of grain by hail are issued in some of the states, but they do not have worked to the benefit of the grain growers. A certain amount of fire insurance has also been written on standing grain in some states in the west. This form of insurance is most common where the wheat is left standing until thoroughly ripe and dry and then cut and threshed in a single process.

Hazards to Be Offset. "I realize it is not practical to enact legislation that will justify the issuance of an insurance policy covering all the hazards to which crops are subject, but in my judgment a number of serious hazards may be met by a study of the legislation of this character, which have worked out money made in the past years would assist in carrying the farmer over during the lean years."
