boxer. He rates Lew Tendler a lesser man than Rocky Kansas, who was easy for the champion a few weeks ago. He is training as assiduously players. as he trained for his important matches of the past. That, he said today, is why he thinks he will knock out the Philadelphian before the seventh round of their light-weight championship tilt in Jersey City Thursday night.

Leonard today began tapering off for the bout with Tendler. When he finished the grind, the champion said he would have a thorough workout tomorrow, go through light exercises on Wednesday, and do a little road work.

Top Form Believed Reached.

"This year," said the champion today, "I feel that I am at the height of my power—that I never will be a better man than I am now. This is the best year of my life. This is why I have had so many bouts this summer and why I am going to have several more after disposing of Tendler. I won't have an alibi if I lose—not even that I was worried or off form.

"Yes, I am in better shape than when I won the title from Walsh."

"Now Tendler is a good boy and a good boxer. He is young and am-bitious and he can hit—but not hard enough. You know I violated all the canons of boxing when I began fighting with a right lead—a right and that works like a left fab. But that is why I always have it only with southpaws.

Overconfidence Is Denied.

"I am not over-confident and I realize I'll have to fight. I'm training hard."

The champion went through his whole repertoire and bundle of tricks today; first a four-mile run. then a light breakfast, a few hours play with his sister "Sid." eight three-minute rounds with sparring partners, one round of shadow boxing, calisthenics and a long rub-down and muscle kneading from Matty Seamon, the trainer, Afterward the champion took a dtp in the lake, came home for arp in the lake, came home for a lamb stew dinner, back down to the lake to paddle "Sid" about in a canoe, and then trudged, home to talk with his mother and three brothers and wait—with the aid of a pinochle deck and a rasping phonograph-until bedtime.

Style Is Not Changed.

The most impressive feature of his ring work in camp has been his condition at the end of eight or nine

MANY EX-PLAYERS ASPIRE TO BE BEAVERS' MANAGER

land Beavers, Bill Klepper's mail has been choked with applications for the job. Apparently there is no scarcity of managerial talent willing to step in where a good healthy angel would tread lightly for fear of making the boards creak.

Rube Ellis, who retired this season as an active player after many years in the Los Angeles outfield, is one applicant. Rube's application is backed by the warm recommendation of Red Killefer, the Los Angeles playing chief, who says Rube is one of the smartest ball players he has ever known. Likewise, one of the finest fellows. Red says all Rube needs is a chance to show his wares and that he will have a hustling, winning team because he knows basehall and players like him and will hustle for him.

Then there is Justin Fitzgeraid, once a Beaver, more recently with San Francisco and for the last month or so with Sacramento. Fitz figures that his active playing days league, in which Rodgers managed the Calgary club, broke up a month figures that his active playing days are nearly ended and wants to break in as a manager. He thinks and many of his friends think he would make good, for he is smart and a hustler.

Mike Donlin, once a star outfielder with the New York Giants, now scouting for one of the major league clubs, is another applicant.

Ed Leader, the University of Washington rowing coach who has accepted terms with Yale, may wish many times next season that he were back in the good old congenial Pacific coast atmosphere. At Washington Leader drew deep water, as the saying goes. Everybody liked him, everybody respected his judgment and considered him a great coach and a genius. At Yale he not only will be breaking in and trying to demonstrate his fitness for the past but it is outle cherry amparpost, but it is quite clearly apparent already that he will have decided opposition from an element in the alumni that is disappointed because Yale didn't sign Glendon, coach of the famous navy crew. Now Glendon has signed with Harvard those Yale alumni members

That will make it doubly hard for Leader to make good. He will have to be a real coaching genius to do it.

He says he hasn't changed his style for Tendler and his sparring proves it. He will attempt the same amazing footwork, the dancing in and out, the quick punch and get-away, the clever blocking and snappy return.

So confident is the champion that he has signed articles to meet Ever Hammer, who has been making a name for himself in the middle west, at Floyd Fitzsimmons' arena at Michigan City, Ind., August 9. Two weeks later he will probably meet another man in Pittsburg.
