

INJUNCTION ORDER SERVED ON UNIONS

Deputy Marshals Leave for Eastern Oregon.

DAY QUIET ONE LOCALLY

Pickets, as Usual, Busy at Shops; No Violence Done; Women Share in Activities.

Armed with scores of copies of Federal Judge Wolverton's injunction against striking railroad shopmen, Deputy United States Marshals Morelock and Davidson left Portland last night to commence service of the order on various union officials of the eastern Oregon district. Union heads in Portland who were named as defendants in the action brought by O. W. R. & N. attorneys, were served yesterday with copies of the injunction.

The day passed quietly in the vicinity of the railroad yards. The Alhambra shops, the only plant affected by the order, was besieged as usual by pickets, but no violence was reported. The question of the time when the injunction will become legally effective was raised yesterday and it was generally agreed that this was a point to be settled by the court. In contrast to the complaint of O. W. R. & N. company officials, who declared that rioting and the assaulting of non-union men by strikers prompted their injunction proceedings, came the statement from the legal representatives of two other systems that everything was quiet on their lines and that no injunctions were needed. According to W. F. Turner, president of the Spokane and Seattle system, that road does not contemplate any injunction proceedings, as everything is peaceful in the vicinity of its shops and yards.

Strikers "Very Decent"

"The men have been very decent and there is no need for an injunction as far as the Southern Pacific is concerned," said James H. Day, legal representative of that road. "While we have had a few reports of assaults, it is not our present intention to ask for aid from the federal court."

According to the wording of Judge Wolverton's order, it was to become effective at 12 o'clock in four Portland daily papers.

For the first time since the strike began women pickets took positions in the line outside of the Alhambra yards yesterday morning and with their husbands greeted the strike-breakers arriving for work with shouts of derision. No violence was attempted, and when attention was called to the existing anti-picketing injunction, the strikers declared they had no official notice of such a document.

That disorders are not common at the shop entrances was the statement of city policemen near the big O. W. R. & N. company shop yesterday. One lone policeman stood near the gate and a block away another mingled with a group of strikers. A third was seen in a quiet corner eating his noon lunch.

Workers Not Molested.

About 50 of the non-union men come and go from their work daily, the bluecoat said. The remainder of the force remains behind the board barricade that surrounds the plant and is housed and fed on the river steamer T. J. Potter, which is moored to a nearby dock.

According to the policeman, the pickets have refrained from violence at the shop entrances, confining their activities to the shouting of names and attempts to engage the strike-breakers in conversation relative to the justice of the union cause.

No action will be taken by the federal court until the railroad heads, by sworn affidavit, call to the court's attention some violation of the injunction. After that the future attitude of the government will be decided by the orders of Judge Wolverton.

Valentine Fitch, a striker, was found not guilty of disorderly conduct after a jury trial in police court yesterday. He was accused of hurling rocks at the home of Otto Kahn, a railroad shop worker, and of threatening Kahn with violence. To offset Kahn's version of the alleged threats several witnesses appeared on behalf of Fitch and all of them denied that Fitch had even spoken to the plaintiff. The case was tried before two jurors, who returned a verdict of not guilty after deliberating but a few minutes.

Household Problems

PORTLAND, June 1.—Dear Madam: Kindly give recipe for making rose beads and oblige. MRS. M. S.

I HOPE the following is what you want. It was sent in by a correspondent, who is a rose bead enthusiast.

Rose beads—Have ready a small meat grinder, 150 opalescent or any other small beads, one iron dripping pan, a paper of iron pins, 10 cents worth of oil of rose, a soft clean board large enough to hold the beads and three gallons of fresh rose petals. Start the process in the morning. Use the fine blade of the grinder, grind the petals, allowing the juice to drip into the iron pan. Repeat three times, place the petals and juice in the iron pan and sprinkle with a few drops of oil of rose. Mix thoroughly, let stand all day, stirring occasionally. At night repeat the grinding four times. Let stand over night in a cool place. The following morning roll into beads the size of a thimble, rolling between the fingers until round and hard and smooth. This is the tedious part, but if you care for the beads do not get discouraged. Keep on rolling until you have 150 beads. Put a pin through each bead as it is made, sliding it to the pinhead, being careful not to break or crack them, and stick on the board. Leave for a week or ten days. They shrink as they dry and will be very hard, black and fragrant. Before too dry you can mark them by rolling a screw or file over each bead. When dry remove from pins and string on dental floss, one rose bead and then one opalescent bead, until all are used. This makes a chain nearly two yards long. When the beads become hard rub them with a little olive oil to polish them. Red roses make the darkest and most fragrant beads. For a short chain use half the quantity given above.

Following is a recipe for the quick "beat-all-together" cake asked for some time ago by Mrs. C. C. (Portland). A better texture, however, may be obtained by putting it together by the second method, which takes really very little longer. Quick two-egg cake—One-third cup soft butter, one and one-third cups white or light brown sugar, one-half cup milk, two eggs, one and three-fourths cup flour, two and one-half teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, or any preferred flavoring.

Method 1.—Put the ingredients all together and beat thoroughly for three minutes. Bake in a shallow pan previously greased and floured.

Method 2.—Cream the butter, add the sugar with one egg (unbeaten) and beat one minute, add the second egg (unbeaten) with about two tablespoons flour and beat one minute. Beat in the milk gradually with a little flour to maintain the "creamed butter" consistency. Fold in the remaining flour sifted with the other dry ingredients. In putting into the pan, spread towards the corners, leaving a hollow in the center.

With two cakes made with the same quantities and proportions and baked in the same oven, it will usually be found that the cake made by the second method will be finer in grain and a little larger in bulk than the one made by the "beat-all-together" method.

Little Girl Leads Officers to Father's Still.

Dry Agents, Chagrined at Failure to Find Plant, Relieved.

THE moral of this is—if you are in the moonshine business don't tell the family where you keep the still. C. H. Townsend, who lives on the Taylor's Ferry road, failed to make the whereabouts of his still a secret and as a result must answer to a federal grand jury on a charge of manufacturing moonshine liquor.

Last Friday night a group of prohibition agents, told of Townsend's activities, trailed a machine from his home, stopped it on the macadam road and after seizing a gallon jug of his product, arrested Townsend and two of his customers.

The following day the dry agents went to the Townsend home with a search warrant and commenced to look for the liquor-making apparatus.

The moonshiner's 3-year-old girl was much interested in the proceeding. When the agents expressed their chagrin at their failure to locate the still, she willingly came to their assistance.

"I'll show you where daddy's copper can is," she lisped. "He keeps it down in the creek." Proudly leading the way, the tot took the searchers to a deep pool, where the still was located within the aid of poles. When Townsend appeared before United States Commissioner Frazer yesterday, the copper vessel was introduced as evidence against him. Townsend was held to await grand jury action. His two companions and customers, Harold Walsh and A. V. Ridgley, were also bound over.

Pacific Highway Closed.

KELSO, Wash., July 26.—(Special)—The Pacific Bridge company, which has the contract for the Kelso-Kalama grading project on the Pacific highway, has begun construction of the concrete bridge over Owl creek, closing the highway. A detour route, which is narrow and winding, via the Shana-hai road, is being used.

The road from Kelso to Kalama is very rough and the motorist will find it desirable to travel from Kelso to Rainier and the paved Columbia highway.
