WASHINGTON, D. C., July 27.—
(Special.)—Anybody who has access to expressions of public feeling throughout the country must be sware that there is just beginning a rising tide of apprehension, more acute than before, on the part of manufacturers and other business
mon as to the possibility and effects of a really serious coal shortage. It is said, among other things, that this psychological factor has slowed this psychological factor has slowed down or halted the business activ-ity which was just getting momen-tum. This apprehension is accompanied by a disposition to make dublous queries as to whether the administration has handled its rela-tion to the coal strike in the best tion to the coal strike in the best imaginable way.

If you were to give a single answer to the question it would probably be that Mr. Hoover for more than a year has foreseen that this situation was coming, has looked forward to it and has put an immense amount of work himself, besides that of his department, into preparedness for it. The mere fact that there was so large a degree of preparedness on the part of the government to handle the situation jusernment to handle the situation justifies the guess that it would have been difficult to do better than has been done.

Public Vitally Concerned.

Of course, it might as well be admitted that if the government had kept out of the situation and merely announced that it would at no time take any hand in the strike except to maintain order, probably more coal would be coming out of the mines today than is the case.

mines today than is the case.

The moment President Harding called for arbitration production at nonunion mines was increased daily. Moreover, the price of coal was reaching a point that made it profitable and tempting for the operators to open their mines, pay any wages the miners asked and pass the bill on to the public in the shape of an increased price for coal. But it has become a part of the public policy of the country that the public policy of the country that the federal government shall take no-tice of coal strikes and save the public both from the scarcity of coal and from the high prices involved in such strikes. It may or may not be good policy, but it is overwhelmingly assented to.

Old-Timers in Minority.

Old-Timers in Minority.

The number of people has become very small who hold old-fashioned views about the constitution, or that there is in the constitution neither authority nor obligation for the executive department of the government to guarantee a comfortable winter. About the only conspicuous man in public life who still holds tness old-fashioned Jeffersonian and Jacksonian views about the limitations of the constitution is Senator Reed of Missouri, and anyone who believes that Harding should have kept himself out of the coal strike ought also to hope that Jim Reed will win in the Missouri primaries next Tuesday. Undoubtedly the administration was compelled to lay hold of the situation by the overwhelming weight of public opinion and was justified by precedents established, by Presidents Wilson and Roosevelt.

Having determined to intervene, it is evident the things they worded not things they wante the things they whispered were recorded for enemy ears by means of dictaphones, bribery and theft; it affirms that old friends of the Fontaine family who had the temerity to support them at the trying moment when Evan was a penniless patient in a maternity hospital severed their friendships because they lived in a fear inspired by a campaign of intimidation.

The most determined attempts were made to intimidate the two women when, the exile to Towaco conded, Mrs. Fontaine brought Evan to a hotel in Grammercy square. New York city, to await the moment for childbirth in the nearby Lyingin hospital. By this time Evan had been long unemployed and the things they white the things they who the things they who the things they who the things they white the things they who the things they who the things they white the things they who had the things they white the things they who had the things they who had

It would be much simpler, and the chances of easy success would be greater, if the administration confined itself to the emergency only and let the larger matter await a time of less difficult conditions.

But the thing Hoover learned during the past year is that when things are going relatively smoothly during the past year is that when things are going relatively smoothly the various parties interested are unwilling to take the necessary steps for the permanent stabilizing of the industry. It is well known that for many months Hoover has had the thought-out plan that goes to the heart of the industry. He has urged it on the parties interested, but they have been unwilling.

Mr. Atterbury's visit to the White House was believed to mark the beginning of a series of conferences by the president with rail executives in an effort to bring about a solution of the seniority problem. Mr. Atterbury upon emerging from the White House indicated that the president had not been able to make much progress.

the details of this plan for permanent stabilizing of the coal industry may be are not known. From such hints as come out of the White House one would guess that there would be, on the part of the operators, a guarantee to the miners of a minimum number of work days in a year and that the operators would be nermitted under government be permitted under government scrutiny, to form regional co-opera-tive selling agencies, somewhat like the farmers' co-operative associa-tions that have been so beneficial both to the farmers and consumers.

Doctor Declares There are More Than Enough Hospital Beds for Disabled Soldiers.

(By Chicago Tribune Leased Wire.) WASHINGTON, July 26.—Brigadier General Charles E. Sawyer, President Harding's personal physician and chief co-ordinator of the federal board of hospitalization, in a statement today declared he would not be "forced, cajoled or stampeded" into abandoning his policy in providing for the care and treatment

His statement was in reply to the demand of Colonel A. A. Sprague of

"It is the determination of the present administration to give the disabled world war veterans the very best of hospital service that can possibly be provided," said General Sawyer, "and it shall be my constant effort and my policy to proceed with reason, efficiency and economy in carrying out such of its affairs as come to the attention of the federal board of hospitalization.

From this position I will not be forced, cajoled or stmapeded."

Answering Colonel Sprague's charges that the hospital facilities are inadequate, General Sawyer stated that there are over 10,000 will be saved to the control of the General Sawyer's statement was companied by letters from other "The thief who
