Dr. Frank Wynn Drops From Mount Siyeh Cliff.

BODY ROLLS OVER LEDGE

President of American Alpine Club Overcome by Exertion and High Altitude.

GLACIER PARK, Mont., July 27.—Dr. Frank H. Wynn of Indianapolis, president of the American Alpine club and one of this country's foremost mountain climbers, was killed today in a 300-foot fall from a cliff near the summit of Mount Siyeh, one of the highest peaks in Glacier national park.

According to Dr. H. Goddard, also of Indianapolis, who was a few yards behind Dr. Wynn on the trail, the latter's fall from the narrow ledge on which the party was crossing, followed what appeared to be an epileptic stroke. Dr. Wynn was 55 years of age and while apparently in good health, it is believed that the 10,000-foot altitude and the exertion of the climb proved too much for him.

Dr. Wynn, Silent, Falls. They had just negotiated an unusually steep portion of the trail, Dr. Goddard said, when Dr. Wynn, who was leading, turned and opened his mouth as if to speak. Then, without uttering a word, he pitched forward on the trail. Before Dr. Goddard could cover the intervening distance his body had rolled over the rocky ledge and disappeared.

The remainder of the party made rapid progress as possible to Glacier hotel, where the accident was reported to government rangers and a party formed to recover Dr. Wynn's body. Because of the inaccessibility of the ledge on which the body landed, this will be a slow task.

DIFFICULT PEAKS SEALED

The party which Dr. Wynn was leading was composed of a dozen of the most prominent members of the American Alpine club. Dr. Wynn has guided and accompanied through Glacier park for the past eight years, each year sealing a new mountain and leaving the club mark at the summit.
