

BLOOD REBELLION CRUSHED IN BRAZIL

Outbreak Suppressed After Fighting in Capital.

16 DEFY WHOLE ARMY

Remnant of Insurgents Killed in Fighting After Terms Are Refused by President.

A formidable rebellion has been put down in Brazil after desperate fighting, during which the capital, Rio de Janeiro, itself was shelled for several days. The rebellion ended by a pitched battle in the streets of the capital in a heroic stand reminiscent of Thermopylae. The only whippers of all this have been permitted to reach the outer world. It was only by the use of the courier that this story was sent by the stringent censorship and reached the United States.

BY CHARLES LUCAS.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service. By Chicago Tribune Leased Wire.)

RIO DE JANEIRO, July 30.—(By Courier.)—These stirring days of June and early July in the states of Pernambuco and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, are rife with excitement and slaughter and heroism. The administration of President Epitacio Pessoa trembled on the brink of political ruin during two days of warfare and sieges, which ended only after terrific street fighting between government forces and a handful of gallant rebels. The word gallant is used because 16 lone survivors of the rebel forces held off 2000 troops for several hours, slew 200 of them and died fighting.

The trouble started in Recife when the president of the republic, Epitacio Pessoa, demanded the installation of his candidate, Lima Astro, as governor of Pernambuco. The people remonstrated that they had elected Enrique and clamored that the president send his nephews were making the state.

Paper Gives Support.

The political, military organ, sided with the people. There were nightly clashes between federal troops and the people. The government at Rio, under the guise, so Enrique's followers said, of maintaining order in Pernambuco, sent 3000 men into the state, two companies of machine-gun troops and two gunboats to enforce the installation of Castro.

It reached its climax following the arrest on July 4 of Marshal Hermes de Fonseca by order of the president. Nevertheless the president placed Captain de Fonseca in command of Fort Copacabana. A strong garrison was given him. Captain Fonseca, once ennobled, defied the government and touched off the revolution.

One thousand marines with machine guns were landed from the warships and sent to Catete to guard the president's palace. A cordon was thrown around the palace with machine guns trained on the boulevards. A torpedo boat protected the palace from the bay, ready to shell any attacking forces.

Cables Are Seized.

Cables were seized by order of the government and not one official dispatches of American or other governments were permitted to pass over the wires.

Meanwhile the heavy guns at Fort Copacabana continued to boom. At 5 o'clock the batteries on the forts in the harbor began to return the fire. The rebels silenced the battery guns with four direct hits. Warships steamed into the fray against the garrison but their fire failed to dent the rock walls of the fort.

The city was shaken by terrific salvos from the fort and the warships. The building occupied by the minister of marine was struck, swarming houses were shattered and numerous fatalities occurred. A ten-inch shell fell near the Palace hotel, where many Americans were quartered, but no one was injured. The president's palace was shelled. Hydroplanes bombed the fort. The battleship Minas Geraes was bombarded out of commission. The lat turret of the Sao Paulo was carried away by a shell and several killed.

Conditions Are Asked.

Then Captain Fonseca escaped from the fort under fire, made his way to the city and said the fort would surrender conditionally. The elder daughter of the president begged him to accept this offer, but he was firm in demanding that the garrison give up unconditionally.

When Captain Fonseca failed to return the 16 remaining members of the garrison first threatened to turn their guns on the city proper and slaughter thousands of civilians unless he was returned safely to them. Then they decided against this as a useless butchery. Unconditional surrender meant death anyway, and declaring that they were in the right and would die fighting, they armed themselves and fought bravely against the 2000 troops on shore.

14 Rebels Killed.

Emerging from the portals of the fort singing the national songs of Brazil, they traversed the Avenue Atlantica, and, reaching Rua Barbosa, waited at the Praca Serzedello for the government troops. The fighting lasted two hours. Fourteen of the rebels were killed and their two lieutenants wounded. Two hundred federal soldiers fell before the small band was exterminated.

Word has come from Pernambuco that peace between the factions there has been declared.

CHICAGO, July 30.—With a general strike of surface and elevated street car men only a few hours away, active preparations were made today to transport the thousands of workers to and from their homes and to insure speedy transmission of mail and merchandise. All the large institutions arranged several days ago to care for their employees by transporting them in trucks and automobiles. The telephone company will take an entire floor of one of the largest hotels and house its employees there. Surveys have been made by all big establishments of the number of cars available, those belonging to the firm and also individual cars

NEW YORK, July 30.—Bareheaded, dressed in trousers and a sleeveless undershirt, bleeding from slashes across the chest and carrying a bloody knife, a man rose from the kneeling congregation in St. Patrick's cathedral shortly after 10 o'clock this morning, ran past the pulpit and through bewildered altar boys to the altar where Father Daly was celebrating the mass.

Screams and shouts from the congregation gave a warning to the priest, but he continued his service without hurry or change of voice.

Just as a great outcry came from the worshippers, Father Daly caught sight of the madman, knife in hand, standing at his left. The man gesticulated and pointed to his chest, where he had inflicted long, intersecting wounds.

The fanatic later declared himself as Frank Johannes Gabrielle, 41, a window cleaner. He was taken to Bellevue hospital for observation. "I wanted to give my life's blood for Jesus Christ," was Gabrielle's only explanation for his act.

WOMEN PICKETS ABSENT

POLICE ON SHOP DUTY DO NOTHING BUT YAWN.

Railway Attorney Says Union Officials Have Done Everything They Can to Promote Peace.

There was an absence of men and women pickets in the vicinity of Albina shops and complete peace and quiet in other strike centers yesterday.

Because the shops were idle yesterday the bevy of feminine picketer pickets who have been causing some confusion at the Albina shop entrance, did not take up their posts at the usual hours when strike-strikebreakers come and go from the plant. A squad of policemen, on constant duty there, found little to do but sit in their automobile and yearn for relief from duty.

That union officials and their attorney, E. A. Green, have done everything to cause the strikers to obey the terms of Federal Judge Wolverton's injunction against picketing and disorder, was the statement made yesterday by Charles E. Cochran, attorney for the O.-W. R. & N. company.

"I had several conferences with Mr. Green regarding the injunction and he, with union officials, promised to see that it was obeyed. The women pickets have been causing some trouble for the last few days, but I have every reason to take Mr. Green and labor heads at their word and believe that they are doing everything in their power to preserve order. At present I do not contemplate any action against anyone, as I believe that these women

ROME, July 30.—The ministerial crisis here is still unsolved. Although the socialists were willing to co-operate with the demand of Sig. Orlando they would not accept his conditions.

"They have now changed about, insisting again on no right wing representation in the cabinet, and it is possible Orlando may be forced to decline the task of forming a new cabinet."

CAR KILLS FIVE AUTOISTS

Speeder Crowds Driver Directly in Front of Interurban.

(By Chicago Tribune Leased Wire.)

DETROIT, Mich., July 30.—Crowded from the roadway by an automobile near Royal Oak, a Detroit suburb, John W. Murphy, his two sons and two women guests, en route to Orchard Lake for a Sunday outing, were killed today when their automobile was struck by an interurban car. The gasoline ignited, the car took fire and Murphy's body was nearly cremated.

As Murphy was about to pass a truck, laden with automobile bodies, a speeding touring car whose driver was sought later, swung alongside in an attempt to pass. In a desperate effort to avoid an accident, Murphy turned squarely on the right or way of the interurban. The motorman was in no way at fault.

MAN BOUND ALL NIGHT

VICTIM SAYS ROBBER TRIO LEFT HIM IN WOODS.

Well-Dressed Youths Said to Have Offered Wallace J. Rickert Ride, Then Attacked Him.

How he was kidnaped by three well-dressed robbers in an expensive touring car late Saturday night and taken to a lonely spot near Oswego lake, to be bound and gagged and robbed of $20, was the story told to police yesterday by Wallace J. Rickert of Carson Heights, who returned to his home since being mysteriously missing since early Saturday night.

While taking a stroll along the Taylor's ferry road Saturday night, Mr. Rickert said, he was accosted by three well-dressed youths who drove in an automobile. They offered to give him a "lift." He accepted and sat in a rear seat. Shortly after they started, he said, he was seized about the throat by one of the strangers, while another bound his hands and feet and gagged him. He was then robbed of his money, he said, and dumped off by the road near Oswego lake.

Mr. Rickert said he was unable to release himself from his bonds until morning, and was gagged for a greater part of the night. As soon as he procured his freedom he returned home and reported the attack to the police.

Mr. Rickert said he was subject to fainting spells and was out for an evening walk Saturday to overcome this type of illness when he met with his strange adventure. He was unable to furnish the police with a description of the youths, except that they were all well dressed and wore straw hats.

When Mr. Rickert failed to return home Saturday night his family became alarmed and notified the police. He had been posted by the missing persons bureau and police were conducting a search for him yesterday when he returned at about noon.
