Umpire All Wrong.

DALLAS, Or., Aug. 12.—(To the Sports Editor.)—Dear Sir: Batsman hits high fly to right, one umpire being at home and other at first base. Field umpire at first base calls "foul." Batsman has gone to second, but field umpire sends him back to bat. Pitcher throws him two more balls, then umpire at home plate concludes it was his place to make the decision on the hit, calls it fair and sends batter back to second. Was that right?

It is true that the umpire at the plate is supposed to call foul or fair hit balls, but having accepted the field umpire's decision that hit was a foul, and let pitcher throw twice more to batter, it certainly was not within the authority of the umpire-in-chief to reverse the decision at that late date.
