DUMMY HELPS ROBBERS

NEW SCHEME ADOPTED TO CATCH AUTOISTS.

Drivers, Seeing Supposed Human in Road, Halt Cars, Giving Outlaws Opportunity.

Holdups operating in the out-skirts of Portland have a new scheme to catch unwary autoists. By use of a dummy dressed as a Ballasting of North Bank Line Into Timber Progresses. Ballasting of the new track of the man in rough overalls, they have stopped several autorists, but the amount of their loot is not known.

The dummy is placed face down in the road. The autorist coming upon it believes some man has been run down and stops to investigate. Then the holdups dart out from the underbrush and command: "Stick Two of the intended victims of the stickups and their dummy reported the matter yesterday to the police.

One was an auto stage driver operating between Portand and Hood River. He stopped his bus when he came upon the dummy, but because his car was filled with passengers the holdups made no attempt at robbery.
