Household Problems by Lillian Tinslo Dear Miss Tinslo—In reading your problems a few days ago I noticed that someone wants a different lemon pie. Here is a recipe that I make. Grate the rind of one lemon and squeeze the juice into a double boiler, add the beaten yolks of four eggs, half cup sugar and three tablespoons butter. Let this boil until thick, stirring often. Have ready the beaten whites of two eggs and add one-fourth cup sugar. When the yellow mixture is thick pour on the beaten whites, stirring quickly. Four in baked crust and use.

the whites of the other two eggs with one-fourth cup sugar for meringue. This is the only lemon pie my ranch hands will eat. A CONSTANT SUBSCRIBER. M is an old English one which I have often used for small cheese cakes. It is, perhaps, a little rich in its quantities, unless for those doing heavy physical work, but it is "good eating."

LAKE LYTEL-BY-THE-SEA, July 28.—My Dear Miss Tinslo: I am a constant reader of your column. I imagine my surprise to read the enclosed recipe for "cracked wheat" (what ever that is) brewed.

Before printing any more "surprises" like this read up a little on genuine whole wheat flour in the enclosed recipe.

If you find the recipe you quote is a "surprise," it would seem that it is you, rather than I, who ought to do a little reading and research. The points which you underline (and which, I judge therefore, constitute the "surprise") seem to be (1) the scalding of the coarser part of the wheat meal before the yeast is added, and (2) the use of molasses. (1) The preliminary partial scalding method is one that was found during the wartime bread investigations) to be decidedly advantageous in dealing with any coarser-ground meal, such as oatmeal, cornmeal, rye-meal or cracked wheat. Of course sugar may be used instead (as in the recipe you enclose) or the bread may be left entirely un-sweetened. The recipes you enclose are quite "standard" and unoriginal, except for the rather poor English and the obnoxious "cessna-tional half truth" type of advertising material. I am sure you will agree with me that it is a pity to see so good a recipe degraded by such unintelligent "advertising." I judged that my correspondent wanted the coarser type of wheat bread, or I should have given practically the same recipe you enclose—one that has previously appeared in this column.

It is never possible for me to send personal replies or to print names of special products or dealers.

Problems of Dressmaking by Madam Rachel BEND, Or., Aug. 18.—Dear Madam Rachel: Will you please suggest a way to make over a dark blue tricot dress made like the one depicted by such un-intelligent "advertising." I judged that my correspondent wanted the coarser type of wheat bread, or I should have given practically the same recipe you enclose—one that has previously appeared in this column.

It is never possible for me to send personal replies or to print names of special products or dealers.

The Oregonian publishes practically all of the want ads printed in the other three Portland papers, in addition to thousands of exclusive advertisements not printed in any other local paper.

page 24, No. 4011D. The entire frock can be of the brown or combined with the fawn shade of duvetyn or broadcloth.

CORVALLIS, Or., Aug. 17.—Madam Rachel: Like lots of others, am coming to you for help in regard to my fall and winter clothes. I am 5 feet 8 inches tall, weigh about 110 pounds, measure 35 bust, 27 waist, 37 hip, have medium brown hair, brown eyes and rather a slender complexion.

Could you tell me kind and color of material, also style, for making an all-around silk dress for fall and winter wear? Not for evening wear, but something that would be serviceable and look right for any occasion in a small town, where they don't wear evening gowns.

Also color, material and style for wool dress? I have a tweed coat (brown mixture) that I bought in the spring. It is lined to the waist, is made with loose back with two box plits in back. Could I use a coat for winter or by lining it throughout, and would some kind of fur collar look out of place on the tweed? If not, what kind and color fur would be suitable?

Could you select patterns from McCall's style book, as that is the kind of pattern I prefer using? Hope you can publish this soon, as I want to get my sewing done before I leave for Idaho, which will be inside of three weeks.

Thanking you for the help I know you can give me. L. L. F. Corvallis, Or.—With your slender figure and the place which the drape dress has in the world of fashion, why not have the model as shown in the Butterick Quarterly on the cover page. I should think that the sapphire moire would be charming and certainly will give you the wear you desire. See No. 3845. Another stunning style is the one shown in the same issue on page 21, No. 3795. This one I would have in the canton paper or by lining the panels as well. The last two named can be beaded in a black and steel which on the blue material is very effective and distinctive. Also see McCall's, page 26, No. 2760 for the moire and page 55, No. 2856 for the canton or a blue satin crepe. The bottom of the panels to be trimmed with the fur strips of beaver, seal or monkey.

wool dress which shall give the wear and keep to the simple line you wish will be found in the last-mentioned issue, page 52, No. 2807. This purple has a distinctive quality and will be happily combined in a deep purple with the handwork done in the tan, fuchsia and black rope silk. Follow the pattern as shown, as it is well suited to the type of dress.

For the tweed suit I would line the jacket as you mention and wear a silk sport scarf with it. The tweed and fur combination is not particularly good, while the other is the very proper form of things. Hope the suggestions here given will meet your need.

Don't endure pimples and boils—have a firm clear skin and a good healthy complexion. Yeast Foam Tablets reach the real seat of the trouble—a wonderful aid for men and women suffering from skin disorders. The lack of vitamin in food, due to modern methods of cooking, results in malnutrition—indicated by lowered vitality and skin disorders such as boils, pimples, sallow color, etc. Take Yeast Foam Tablets along with your regular food. Then you'll get the vitamin your body craves and thus correct the cause of the trouble. Yeast Foam Tablets are recommended not only for boils and pimples but also for failing appetite, indigestion, lack of energy, under weight and "run-down" conditions. Sold by all druggists.
