Tacoma Probe of Major's Death to Be Extensive.

WITNESSES TRAVEL FAR

Every Bit of Evidence Available Is to Be Presented to Federal Grand Jury.

PUGET SOUND BUREAU, Seattle Wash, Aug. 29.—Every bit of evi-dence and information that the United States government has gathered regarding the killing of Major Alexander Cronkhite at Camp Lewis. September 25, 1918, will be spread before the federal grand jury at Tacoma next month. Witnesses who have previously appeared in con-nection with the case and other per-sons who claim or are supposed to have information have been called from near and far.

Press dispatches yesterday from Providence, R. I., and Washington, D. C., to the effect that important witnesses had been subpensed in both of these cities might have been duplicated from a score of other cities. The witnesses will come to Tacoma from all directions, for the number of persons who are supposed to know something about the Cronkhite case is very large Witnesses Senttered Afar. Since the demobilization of the forces concentrated at Camp Lewis at the time Major Cronkhite was killed, these witnesses have gone about their businesses in all parts of the country.

The grand jury is to be empaneled on September 3. The Cronkhite witnesses have been called to appear on September 15. There will be nearly, if not quite 100 of them.

Federal officers in this district have refused to discuss the case or the nature of the evidence to be presented, but it is known that the represented of the response of the presented of the present government is determined to put be-fore the jury overything that has been learned and to open up every lead that indicates a possible solu-tion of the mystery. On only one point are the federal officials at all outspoken at this time and this is in the declaration that the grand jury is not to be influenced to fix the crime of killing Cronkhite on any person other than as the full spread of evidence may suggest.

The statement of J. W. Selden, prosecuting attorney of Pierce county, that "the department of justice is trying to square itself and make Captain Robert Rosenbluth the goat' is indignantly repudiated. Captain Rosenbluth and Sergeant Roland Pothler are among the witnesses to be brought to Tacoma.

In March, 1921, in Providence, Pothler was said to have admitted firing the shot that killed Cronkblie and to have pleaded guilty to the charge of involuntary mancharge of involuntary man-sinughter. In a confession which he subse-quently retracted Pothier accused Captain Rosenbluth of baving insticaptain Rosenbluth of having instigated the crime. Rosenbluth was attracted and released on bonds, but after investigation and Pothier's retraction of his confession the charge against Rosenbluth was withdrawn and his case dismissed by order of the attorney-general. At that time attorney-general Daugherty questioned the jurisdiction of the federal government in the matter, as Cronk. Attorney-General Daugherty ques-tioned the jurisdiction of the federal government in the matter, as Cronkhite had been killed while at target practice on a part of the Camp Lewis reservation to which the government had not then acquired full title, Attitude Is Changed.

On this point the attitude of the attorney-general's office has been changed on the advice of Thomas P. Revelle, district attorney for west-ern Washington. Before taking this office Revelle in his private practice, represented a concession company which resisted the effort of Pierce county to collect taxes on the ground that it was located on government property. The government title to this location corresponded at the time to its title to the land on which Cronkhite met his death. The state supreme court decided in favor of Revelle's client, and this is held to establish the government's title and its jurisdiction over the scene of the Cronkite killing. Settlement of this question of jurisdiction was necessarily pre-cedent to further inquiry into the case by a federal grand jury. Revelle was called back to Washington assemble all possible information of any kind according to L. S. for presentation to a federal jury in this district is believed to have been bureau, yesterday.

The Coffey forces had no hope that the big gain of the first day would be repeated, for the two precincts counted Monday were No. 201, that in which fraud was disclossed by the Hall-Olcott recount, and No. 179, where an unusually heavy Kirkwood vote led Coffey supporters to believe that the results might have been at the expense of their candidate. Thirteen precincts were count.
