Dempsy Trains Big Choice Before American League

As Told To Hugh Fullerton

World Title Cinch With Giants' Opponents.

NEW YORK CLUB POOR

If Ever Junior Circuit Had Opportunity to Win It Will Next Month, Avers Chadwick.

BY GEORGE CHADWICK. (Copyright, 1922, by The Oregonian.)

If the American league ever had a chance to win a world's series, it will have one in the month of October. This is a sure thing, mental and physical assets of the American league are reduced to a condition of voluntary bankruptcy. Here's why:

Unless all that has gone before in the present baseball season is grossly misleading and a trickster to watch closely for signs of hardening muscles. Nothing slows an athlete so quickly as does over-trained muscles—muscles that have been hardened by the muscles of the leg and the heavy shoulder muscles of the crowing arm.

The team to which reference is made is the Giants.

No Early Assurance.

Last year there was no early September assurance. The Giants, by this time last year, had their heads above the ground and wore vigorous sprouts, but the Pirates had by no means given up the ghost.

Even after the mauling which they received from New York they had a chance to win a pennant. It was not until well along in the last melancholy days of September last year that the Giants were actual winners.

All of the question will be asked by many as to whether the Giants, as a team, are a better team than they were last year. The answer is in the negative. Their catchers are unchanged and no better. Snyder seems to have had a good season, yet it is remembered that he ushered himself out of St. Louis because he fell off in his work.

The first baseman is the same and just as much better at first base as a young man could be expected to be who becomes more and more accustomed to the position, and who tries. As a right-hand first baseman Kelly is as good as any right-hand first baseman playing, hands on at his very best he is as good as Kelly.

At second the sturdiness of Frisch makes up for the bad underpinning of last year, but a little worry for the year of 365 days.

When Frisch is sound the Giants show they have improved at third base. The trouble here is not of Frisch's making. He has been out a great deal this year and he is not a player who has to be a star in the eyes of his joints and his muscles. When thoroughly adjusted, physically and mentally, with each pitch rod working smoothly in the hand and each little thought tinged with a crimson sunset of happiness, Groh plays sensational baseball, but on other days he is a liability.

There is nothing in the outfield to cause anyone to attune his ear to rhapsodies. Casey Stengel, old and a case of the "old man's blues," is indicative of some conditions of baseball these days. Not that Stengel lacks the mental ability, but he is just the kind of a man who revolve in beautiful uniformity but his legs are likely to splinter on him any day and his arm creaks and groans in the test of a long throw.

The Giant pitching staff is made up of a combination of merit and mediocrity. The fact is that the league team should let Neft, Jess Barnes, Virgil Barnes, Scott, Ryan, McQuillan and Jonnard go and compete in the big league. The neck through the yoke is the saddest reflection that could be placed on 1922 baseball.

True there was Toney and the dumb and pitiful Douglas. They helped some, but they are gone. Douglas is a good pitcher, but he is not, although when rated as a wonder work fast with his hands and punching the bag. I keep moving around on the feet hitting from different angles.

In the next article Dempsy's system of training the eye and hand and foot to work together will be explained.

CHANGE OF PLANS AIMED TO HELP VALENTINO.

Attorney Intimates Bride's Aid May Be Needed in Suit Against Movie Company.

(By Chicago Tribune Leased Wire.) NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Rodolph Valentino, at the Waldorf Astoria, today explained the sudden decision of his actress-artist bride, the former Winifred "Freddie" Harling, not to sue the White Star Film Company last Saturday for an extended stay in Europe.

The screen star asserted that it was Mrs. Valentino's desire to stand by him in his fight for freedom from his contract with the Famous Players-Lasky company that caused her to quit the Olympic and her foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hudnut, but a few minutes before the object was stated.
