fence on the first ball Courtney pitched him. He personally scored the second and winning tally in the fifth with two at rest when by Bunching of Hits.

Hale and his war club out of there some left-hander on his ball club should be able to stop the five lefthanded batsmen of the regular Beaver lineup. He thought Courtney was the man to do that yestorday and the ex-American leaguer did his durndest, but always there was Mr. Hale to spoil it in the Vernon Also Loses.

The net loss to the Seals, how ever, was exactly nil. The Beavers did their stuff and stopped the Seals, but Vernon couldn't stand prosperity and dropped one to Sacramento, so the Tigers remain two and one-half games in arrears.

The other ace in the Portland vic-tory besides Hale was that decep-tive pitching gentleman, Suds Sutherland. This young man four weeks ago was supposedly a candidate for the morgue. Yesterday he let the Seals down with four singles, only one of them being the real thing.

Kamm got that one, a single to center, in the first inning.

But for a regrettable accident in the eighth. Mr. Sutherland might have achieved the feat of holding the Seal sluggers to two hits. Yelle and Courtney were easy outs and and Courtney were easy outs and Sutherland was facing Kelly ready to pitch when suddenly he doubled up, an expression of agony on his face, dropped the ball, got on his hands and knees and began to writhe all over the place. Consternation was written on the faces of the Beaver players, the Seals looked sympathetic. arently Suds had wrenched that old pitching strain again that so nearly put him out of baseball. Quid Is Swallowed.

Umpire McGrew rushed out and tenderly questioned the fallen hero. "Suds, old boy, where does it hurt ou? Are you in pain?" he queried "C-c-call t-time," gasped Suther-

and. "I've s-s-swallered my quid."
It was true. McGrew called time. Sutherland rushed to the bench, frantically drank water, the club trainer rubbed him on the stomach, he choked, spluttered, ran in circles for three minutes. When he took the mound again Kelly and Valla both nicked him for infield singles, but he finished strong and Kamm could only hit into a force play. In the ninth Ellison led off with a walk, but by this time Sutherland had digested the chew and O'Connell flied to center. See, batting for Rhyne, forced Ellison at second and Compton, hitting for Kilduff, skied to Wolfer.

Lone Tally in Sixth.

the Portland score, three Beaver runners in as many innings being thrown out at the plate. One of them was Brazill, who in the fourth with none out, tripled for the third time in three successive games, but was caught a moment later at home. Tilden's superiority over the Australian opponent was fully as marked as the scores of the sets indicate. O'Hara Wood, once camped at the net, is as fine a finishing stroke player as has been seen in this country in years. But today Tilden refused to let him park in his favorite spot. The champion, by the severity of his service and returns, kept Wood hovering about his own base line, where he was far less formidable than when cutting off returns at the barrier. There were moments when the doubles star succeeded in reaching the net and in these occasional stands that his tennis sparkled, for even Tilden could not prevent him from angling off ungettable returns.
