

ACTORS DEVILS? NO, SAYS MOVIE PARSON

Screen Workers Just Pure and Home-Loving Folks.

VAMP IDEA LAMBASTED

Rector Who Marries, Baptizes and Buries Stars Calls Halt on Condemnation.

Male movie stars have neither horns nor cloven hoofs; they are not milk and water "sissies."

The beautiful women of the silent drama are neither hopeless morons nor conscienceless vamps; the director does not devote his entire attention to dragging beautiful and helpless young maidens down to black pits of perdition; dope is not an article of diet of the folks of the silver sheet.

So says the Rev. Neal Dodd, parson of the movies, father confessor of stars of minor and major magnitude, rector of the church of St. Marys of the Angels, the religious home of thousands of people connected with the motion picture industry of Hollywood. Rev. Mr. Dodd is in attendance at the Episcopal convention here.

The Rev. Mr. Dodd knows. For four and a half years he has been an integral part of the motion picture life of the southern city. He has married and baptized, he has prayed over and buried hundreds of those people whose work before the camera is so important a factor in America's amusement world.

"They're just ordinary people, like you and me. If I were asked as to the morals of motion picture people, I would say that they are more moral than the average run of folks," he says.

Rev. Mr. Dodd occupies a novel position in church and theatrical circles. Four and a half years ago, struck by the utter lack of religious work among the thousands of people in picture work, he opened a small mission in the studio section of Hollywood. He did not seek members; instead of going to the actors, he allowed them to come to him.

Many Consult Rector. Today, the best known man in Hollywood is "Father" Dodd, as he is affectionately called. Stars and others in the industry come to him with their troubles. Directors call on him for advice in staging church scenes. He is often called on to act the role of the clergyman in scenarios calling for such a person.

"Much has been written of the morals of Hollywood," Rev. Mr. Dodd stated yesterday. "In refutation I can say that these salacious and obscene writers are, to use the terse Rooseveltian term, liars."

"The garbage man, driving down the street, looks for and sees only garbage cans. He does not see the young children or beautiful women. Garbage is his business. The same with these collectors of mental garbage."

Rev. Mr. Dodd performed some of the more famous of the movie marriages. He united Bill Hart and Winifred Westover in the bonds of matrimony.

"And, I am happy to say, these stories of their separation will prove false. I have just received word that they will be reconciled. The first year of married life, you know, is the critical one."

"Mr. Hart has told me of his hopes, his aspirations, his ambitions. His work as an actor is a secondary consideration. He loves his children and I feel sure that the birth of a son will reunite him and his wife in a stronger and more holy bond."

"I married Jack Pickford and Marylyn Miller a few months ago. I wish society people could have seen that ceremony. It was the most elaborate, the most dignified at which I ever officiated. I feel sure that that couple will get along, too."

Blue Sunday Opposed. "I know an extra girl who goes out with a married director. But in 14 years of my ministry I've known bankers, and shoemakers, and merchants who did likewise."

"This talk of a girl being compelled to sell her soul to secure advancement in the motion picture world is without basis of fact. There is too much money involved in the making of a picture for many people interested, to allow one man's lust to dominate the work."

Rev. Mr. Dodd is the inveterate foe of the censor, the blue law reformer, the man who would take amusement out of life.

"I am unalterably opposed to any blue Sunday movements. I believe that after a person has performed his or her religious duties on a Sunday he or she is at perfect liberty to indulge in any form of clean recreation. I go to ball games on Sunday afternoon in the summer. I go to theaters, too. I do not think that I am a bit more unworthy in the eyes of the Heavenly Father than the man who sits at home in idleness on that day."

"There is too general an inclination to damn others without reason or justification. The motion picture people are victims of just such a condition. Let me say in their behalf that they are not riotous libertines, not home wreckers and home breakers, as many of these writers would have you suppose, but a clean-living, charitable and home-loving people, whom I am glad to call my friends."

The matter of the making of the sign of the cross during baptismal service created a short but spirited debate. The revision committee entered a public in the proposed new edition of the prayer book, making the use of this sign an optional matter with the clergyman. The rubric was voted down after several delegates, lay and clerical, had vehemently expressed their ideas regarding the change.

$1,000,000 DRIVE PLANNED

Episcopalians Prepare to Raise Fund for Theological School.

Plans to raise $1,000,000 by popular subscription for the Episcopal theological school in Cambridge, Mass., were announced at a dinner at the University club last night, where prominent delegates to the general convention were present. Right Rev. William Lawrence, bishop of Massachusetts, made the announcement.

This Episcopal seminary is located beside Harvard university and is to some extent affiliated with Harvard. All courses of each institution are said to be open to students of the other.

Bishop Lawrence announced that he intends to devote most of his energies to the subscription campaign for the school. He said he will turn over a major portion of his diocesan duties to his coadjutor-elect, Rev. Dr. Charles Slattery.

"I have accepted the duty of chairman," said Bishop Lawrence, because I am 72 years old and have known every student, teacher and officer of the school in its 56 years of history. I have been student, teacher and dean."

BISHOP TO GET BIG FUND

Fully $70,000 Expected to Be Given for Alaska Work.

Bishop Peter Trimble Rowe of Alaska will be the central figure at the mass meeting in the auditorium at 8 o'clock tonight at which the Bishop Rowe foundation will be presented by Bishop William Ford Nichols of California.

The occasion and the presentation of the fund will mark the completion by Bishop Rowe of 25 years of work for the church in Alaska. The exact amount subscribed to the fund has not yet been announced, but some believe it will be fully $70,000. The money will be held as a trust fund by the Domestic and Foreign Missionary society of the Episcopal church, and the annual income will be used by Bishop Rowe so long as he is the bishop of Alaska, for work in that vast missionary diocese.

Other speakers will be Bishop Lucien Lee Kinsey of Brazil, Bishop G. F. Mosher of the Philippine Islands, and Bishop C. S. Quinn of Texas. Motion pictures will be shown at the meeting of the general convention of 1923, and of missionary work among the Indians of South Dakota.

WHAT IS HAND TAILORING?

The frequent use—and misuse—of the term "hand-tailored" in the advertising pages of magazines and newspapers, while it emphasizes the importance attached to this feature of ready-tailored clothing, has created confusion in the minds of both retailer and consumer as to just what constitutes "hand-tailoring."

The traditional standard of quality in clothing has long been represented by custom tailoring. Today successful retailers, who believe in quality, specify certain operations of hand-tailoring as essential in their garments that they may possess the merit of custom tailoring.

Catering to a critical trade, including some of the largest and most particular merchants in the country, we have incorporated in our merchandise over fifty hand operations which we feel are necessary to a well tailored garment. The 23 hand operations listed are the essential or key operations, other hand operations are contributory.

- 23 Hand Tailored Points in Goodman & Suss Clothes
1 The canvas front is hand padded to secure not only softness but flexibility; one of the most important essentials to produce style and balance in the garment.
2 Canvas fronts are carefully hand pressed so that the proper effect may be developed in the front of the garment, and that the shoulder may lie smoothly.
3 Lapels are hand padded with small stitches to insure softness and the proper roll.
4 The under collar is carefully padded by hand for pliability.
5 The front darts are hand tacked with linen to hold the forepart correctly on the canvas.
6 The top and front edge of the lower pockets are fastened to canvas by hand to give strength to pocket and insure the front being held in perfect position.
7 Pocket welts are hand felled on all plain edge coats. Welts on all coats are tacked by hand to canvas with linen, to prevent sagging.
8 The bridle is basted and padded by hand to the forepart and tacked on the collar so that the front may hang evenly.
9 All flap pockets are bar tacked by hand with silk twist to give strength and durability to the pocket.
10 Tape is hand felled to the canvas in the front of the coat that the edge may remain in a smooth condition.
11 The outer edge of facing is securely hand tacked to the tape on plain edge coats to keep the edge firm and to prevent the edge from turning.
12 The seam in the edge of the lapel is hand tacked to the canvas to keep the edge flat and to insure a solid effect.
13 The facing is securely hand tacked to the canvas with linen thread to hold the front in place.
14 The inside breast pocket is blind tacked by hand to keep the right front absolutely secure.
15 The front and back arm eyes are drawn in by hand with linen thread with chain stitch, to insure a well-fitting armhole and to give ease and flexibility without allowing the armhole to stretch.
16 The under collar is put on by hand so that the length can be accurately adjusted and fullness properly distributed.
17 The under collar is hand felled to the neck gorge.
18 The top collar is put on by hand by expert tailors so that the leaf of the collar may lie perfectly.
19 The outer edge of the collar is felled by hand.
20 The neck gorge is hand felled. The facing and top collar are drawn together by hand not only where lapel meets collar but the entire length of the facing, so that at no point does the top collar overlap the facing.
21 The buttonholes are all reinforced and made by hand.
22 The sleeve vents and bottoms are felled and tacked by hand. Sleeve linings are also hand felled and tacked.
23 The bottom facing of coat is tacked and felled by hand to the forepart and linings are hand felled to the bottom lacing.
The same super-custom tailoring embodied in our coats is applied to vests and trousers. Tops of trousers are hand felled—pockets are hand turned. Trousers are carefully shaped and shrunk by hand, and satisfactory wear is insured by the special reinforcement feature in the crotch.
