

EPISCOPAL DIVORCE LAW IS TIGHTENED

House of Deputies Ratifies Amendment to Canon.

REMARriage IS LIMITED

Church Explicitly Forbids Communicants to Wed Except as Allowed.

The divorce law of the Protestant Episcopal church was tightened by action taken last night when the house of deputies ratified an amendment to the canon which the bishops had already approved forbidding communicants of the church to marry divorced persons except in cases where the divorce had been granted on grounds of infidelity.

As amended the divorce law is made explicit in forbidding remarriage of divorced persons, with the exception provided as to infidelity, whereas the present church law merely forbids clergymen to perform ceremonies in cases where either of the parties is divorced.

Many Seats Vacant. When the deputies acted there were many seats vacant, many of the delegates having already departed for their homes. Only a few deputies arose to ask questions, and no opposition was voiced.

Resolutions Offered by Rev. Dr. F. W. Tomkins of Philadelphia providing for the omission of all that section of the divorce canon which relates to permission being given to divorced persons to remarry in such cases as the single exception applies and making the inhibition against remarriage of divorced persons absolute, were referred to a commission which will make a study of the whole divorce canon during the next three years and report at the next general convention.

CHURCH UNITY INDORSED

Episcopalians Vote for Concordat Measure. Bishops Get Power to Ordain Clergymen of Other Faiths as Priests.

The general convention of the Episcopal church went definitely on record for church unity last night, when the house of deputies, by a decisive majority vote, concurred with the house of bishops on the concordat which will give bishops power to ordain ministers of other denominations in the Episcopal church, without losing identity in their own.

Boy R. Renick Gets High Tension Discharge When Wire Comes in Contact With Power Lines.

CONVENTION UNCONVENTIONALITIES

The next general convention will meet in New Orleans in 1925. Climate is an important question in connection with a meeting of the convention. It is unnecessary to mention the climate at Portland, for, like in California, it is the constant comment of the natives. But serious question was raised as to the weather in such a southern section of the country as New Orleans.

All of which reminded the Right Rev. William F. Nichols, bishop of California, of a story about the meeting of the convention in that fair climate some years ago. A local newspaper reporter in writing up the opening service recorded that "the bishops marched up the aisle, vested in their rubrics."

While the climate of California is more than could be desired," said Bishop Nichols, "it is not so warm as to allow of such scant attire as that." After the Right Rev. Charles Pinke, bishop coadjutor of central New York, was consecrated, a faithful friend was brought up in the Church of England, where every bishop is a lord bishop, started to address him as "My Lord Central New York."

The Right Rev. Charles M. Beckwith, bishop of Alabama, is one of the wittiest of the members of the house of bishops. If the chairman would permit he would give a humorous turn to many more of the solemn matters that come up than he does. When the question of leaving the "obey" out of the marriage service came up it was he who suggested that it be made retroactive so that the women who were married when it was included should be released from their promise of servitude.

11,000 volts in his body and died an hour later, after strenuous efforts had been made to save him. Foreman Renick was working with a crew of men at Williams in Moore, putting in some new wires. A line of high tension cables was near the new line, and while Mr. Renick was pulling a light wire it dropped against the highly charged line. He was knocked unconscious immediately, and at first it was thought that he was killed instantly.

CHILD'S ART IS PRAISED

Work of Pamela Bianco Declared Wonderful.

Creations of Young Artist to Be Exhibited in Portland Museum This Month.

The attention of Portland art connoisseurs is being attracted to the exhibition of paintings and lithographs, creations of Pamela Bianco, the child artist whose work has won so much attention. It is scheduled to be on display at the Portland Art Museum not later than September 27 to October 15.

The groups of the child's works have gained popularity wherever they have been shown and many items have been purchased by enthusiasts, yet at least 250 pieces will be exhibited in Portland. Pamela Bianco displayed talent at an early age, and her creative genius was encouraged. Now, though barely 16 years of age, her paintings have been shown in London, New York, San Francisco and Honolulu.

At 11 years her pictures first appeared in an exhibition of children's work at Turin. Since then the big galleries have been thronged to see her creations on display.

IRRIGATION CROPS GOOD

Arrowrock Dam District Displays Fine Products in Nampa.

W. V. Chapman of this city has just returned from Nampa, Idaho, the heart of the Arrowrock dam irrigation district, embracing about 300,000 acres, where there was staged a street fair displaying the products grown on the irrigated lands. Mr. Chapman says the quality and quantity of produce which the irrigated country yields are remarkable. The farmers, he says, are raising excellent quantities of all sorts of vegetables, fruits and grain, but they are not so prosperous as might be desired, due to the low prices of the various farm products.

representatives the other day Miss Rachel MacDowell, religious editor of the New York Times, was voted the most beautiful woman present. Incidentally, she was the only one.

"The purpose of the revised rubric in the ordination service requiring that the hymn is to be said or sung is to make it clear that some bishops can't sing," explained Bishop Parsons.

"That's perfectly clear," called out one of the neighbors.

It is evident that the convention is getting along in days, if not in years. It is aging. Those who have the responsibility of recording the happenings realize that. Therefore one was not surprised to find a stenographer had put it down "Venerable Convention."

Archdeacon Reynolds of Los Angeles was talking to his chief, the Right Rev. Joseph H. Johnson.

"So you are going back next week," said the bishop. "I suppose that you will be received with open arms by your people."

"Yes, I expect I will be in the hands of the receiver after staying at this expensive hotel," said the archdeacon.

"I suppose you are going to settle down, then."

"No, indeed, I will get busy and settle up."

The Rev. Dr. Pott is president of St. John's university, Shanghai. When they were holding an election of a bishop for the then diocese of Wo Wo, a certain man in this country was expected to be the fortunate candidate. He made arrangements for a friend in China to cable the news when the election took place. He was much disconcerted to get the cablegram reading:

"Wo Wo gone to Pott."

Mr. Henry Hanby Hay is a lay deputy from Delaware. He boasts of a flowing white beard, not unlike that of the presiding bishop.

Later he told a group of friends that he had been married to his wife always obeyed him. "Whenever I am going away from home I always tell her exactly what to do, and she always does it," he boasted. "Of course," he added, "I first inquire of her what she is planning to do, and then I tell her to go ahead and do it."

At a luncheon given to the press has been sued for divorce by his wife who asks alimony to the extent of $350,000. She alleges mental cruelty. Brown has departed for the coast, where he will compete in golf tournaments this fall. He recently broke the record for 36 strokes at Nuanu, doing it in 130 strokes. Brown's fortune is estimated at $1,000,000, besides a third interest in the John H. estate, a legacy left to him on the recent death of his mother.
