

$100,000 WON, THEN LOST IN WHEAT

J. Leonard Replogle Testifies on Market Deals.

TRADE PROBE IS BEGUN

New York Steel Manufacturer Denies Having Associates in 2,500,000 Bushel Buy.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 3.—The story of a series of speculative operations in wheat last winter and spring involving about 2,500,000 bushels was detailed to the federal trade commission by J. Leonard Replogle, New York steel manufacturer, at the initial session today of the commission's senate-directed inquiry into grain price fluctuations.

Mr. Replogle agreed in response to questions put to him by Chairman Murdock that his operations resulted in a preliminary profit of more than $100,000 and in a later loss of about the same amount. He conceded that purchasers of millions of bushels of wheat might have a speculative effect on prices, driving them up and down, but said that the speculator could not alter market prices contrary to supply and demand, "permanently or profitably."

Associates in Deal Denied. Mr. Replogle was asked if the "steel crowd" had not been involved in extensive speculation in wheat during the period of its fluctuation and whether he was not one of the group.

"I had no associates," he asserted, "and I don't know a single steel man who went in. I was surprised at this commission's subpoena coming to me. I thought you were after some of the big wheat fellows."

Report Held Magnified. "Did all this go on in a bunch at Palm Beach go in and buy at the same time you did?" Mr. Murdock asked after Mr. Replogle had testified that he had had several million dollars "with his broker, which was enough to pay for all the wheat purchased."

More Witnesses Called. "Well, I guess it was the Jew in me that got me out—I had a profit," Mr. Replogle returned, "but by the middle of May there was a report in New York, it was common gossip, that wheat was going higher and I went in again. It was all a question of price with me, I had no use for wheat. I bought it because I thought it was cheap and I could make a profit."

LEGAL FIGHT BEGUN OVER NIGHTRIDING

Motion to Quash Indictments Bitterly Argued.

REPORT IS OPPOSED

Making Public Grand Jury Notes Declared to Put State at Disadvantage.

MEDFORD, Or., Oct. 3.—(Special.)—The first gun in the legal battle arising over the Jackson county night-riding outrages, for which six indictments were returned by a special grand jury, and 16 John Doe bills have been taken in abeyance, began in the circuit court at Jacksonville today before Circuit Judge Calkins. A motion to quash the indictments and make public the grand jury notes argued, bitterly at times, and at the conclusion, the court announced he would take the matter under advisement.

The state, represented by Assistant Attorney-General Liljeqvist and his law partner, district attorney, opposed the making public of the grand jury records on the grounds "that it would be against good public policy to change witnesses from 'John Does,' causing an exposure of citizens whom it would take the sheriff a year to catch" and that the future work of the grand jury which convenes October 16 would be hampered and that the motion was an "11th hour move that put the state at a disadvantage."

Plea for Overruling Made. District Attorney Moore in his plea for overruling of the motion declared he would be willing to go to jail before he would agree in order of the court to turn over the grand jury notes. Mr. Liljeqvist declared "the Ku Klux Klan is not above the law, when men who are members are suspected of being those who put on masks like burglars and go out upon the highways and byways as an organized mob."

LEASE IS RENEWED

O.-W. R. & N. CO. TO CONTINUE IN PRESENT HOME.

LEASE IS RENEWED

Contract for Space in Wells-Fargo Structure Runs for Another Year and Two Months.

Continued occupancy of the Wells-Fargo building for another year and two months by the O.-W. R. & N. company was assured yesterday, when a lease was signed with the owners of the building extending until December 1, 1923. Reports that the railway company would move its headquarters offices from its present location at Sixth and Oak streets to a building of its own, to be built or purchased, have been current of late, based upon increased rental charged the railroad company. It is understood no definite plan for a change of quarters has as yet been adopted by the company heads, who elected to remain in the offices so long occupied.

The O.-W. R. & N. company officials and clerical forces moved to the Wells-Fargo building from the Worcester building, Third and Oak streets, more than 15 years ago. At that time the company name was different, but the railroad was generally speaking the same as now, the Union Pacific coast extension, known then as the Oregon Railroad & Navigation company. These followed the merging of the Harriman lines under one management and their subsequent divorce by order of the government.

The Express Building company of San Francisco, owner of the Wells-Fargo building, has been considering for some time plans for the erection of a 12-story office building on the quarter block at the southeast corner of Broadway and Oak street, according to announcement of E. Trapp, vice-president of the company. The proposed building would cost $1,000,000, Mr. Trapp said. The quarter block is owned by the Wemme Investment company and is occupied by a three-story brick building. Details of the deal for erection of the building are still to be worked out, according to Mr. Trapp.

Dick Morgan, who was arrested with the other two, confessed and was sentenced by Judge Campbell to two years in the state penitentiary. The date for sentencing Davis has not been set.
