

SECOND GAME SLOW BUT DESPERATE ONE

Shawkey and Barnes Cool but Too Deliberate.

YANKS, TOO, HAVE NERVE

Team Shows It Can Come From Behind by Steady Plugging as Well as Giants.

BY GRANTLAND RICE

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(Special)—

The Giants and Yankees, fighting out their second battle, had just closed out the tenth inning with the score tied at 3-3. The minutes hand on the big clock in center field was pointing 20 minutes to 5. There was a haze over the diamond but the sky above was cloudless. At this moment two senior umpires, George Hildebrand and William J. Klem, ordered the announcement made that the game was called on account of darkness.

For perhaps a second or two the big crowd of 38,000 fans sat stunned and then from almost every nook in the grounds, from grandstand to bleachers, a terrific roar of protest swept back and forth across the field, followed by the prolonged boom of the raspberry chorus working at full blast.

Fans Are Enraged.

In the excitement that followed hundreds of enraged fans swept around Judge Kane's Mountain Landis, while thousands of others began to pour a fusillade of burning words against the club owners who had no more to do with the decision than Babe Ruth or Kemal Pasha.

The two senior umpires, Klem and Hildebrand, had decided an inning before that the game should be called after the tenth on account of the heavy haze which they said was obscuring the plate through the blur of the center field background. The two umpires gave their decision courageously and honestly with no other hope of reward beyond an extra day's work without any extra emolument for the trouble.

The light was falling slowly but in our opinion another inning could have been played without any trouble and due to the immense amount of money that had been paid in and the great amount of money that had been lost in the last few years, it would have been wiser to have let the game run at least another chapter.

Psychology Is Overlooked.

With unquestioned honesty the senior umpires thought that the combination of slow pitching and approaching twilight might ruin serious trouble later on if they attempted to add another chapter to the serial story.

From their viewpoint psychology did not enter into the question. But psychology has a way of taking full control of a crowd that has just paid out $120,000 to see a decisive result. If such be the case, those who sat in the bleachers where the light was even brighter than it was under the heavy stands were even more vocal.

The umpires merely considered the ball game more important than the feelings of the fans, and they stand they will be blamed by the many and praised by the few. But a little more far-sighted judgment would have taken the chance of another inning with slow pitching and setting back of the fall stands.

Desperate Contest Fought.

Before the umpires had opened the clubhouse door, the crowd, hailing "Honey, dear, listen here—I'm afraid to go home in the dark," the Giants and Yankees had fought out the game of the decade, the year of the conflict was as slow as frozen molasses at a Baffin bay breakfast but for the greater part of the route it was as slow as a quivering drama, sensational fielding, hard hitting and game, skillful pitching where a hit meant disaster.

Shawkey and Barnes, under a tension, pitched with cool deliberate courage that at times was entirely too deliberate. Shawkey, after a stunning blow from Irish Meusel in the first inning, rose to brilliant heights after the second inning when he checked the Giants with three widely-scattered hits, the remainder of the way. But that one blow from Irish Meusel came near wrecking Shawkey beyond all repair.

Clean Home Run Hit.

Groh and Frisch had just nicked the Yankee star for two clean hits after that, first round and his stout defense backed up his fine pitching in flawless style.

It was a matter of the Yanks getting back three runs to tie and a fourth to win against the steady work of Jess Barnes and his brilliant support.

The Yankees got a start in the first inning when Bancroft proved the power of his arm by throwing Dugan's grounder far over Kelley's left hip. Kelley, who was in a tough spot, hit the ball to the right field fence for the second home run of the afternoon. That made two of the needed run back with only one to go for a tie.

The aroused Yankees kept firing away with all they had but the brilliant infield support of Frisch and Groh helped Barnes to suppress each threatening rush. On two occasions Frisch killed off sure base hits by supernatural agility as he raced far out of his position to break down grounders or fall down.

Defense Is Flawless.

There was no getting by Shawkey after that first round and his stout defense backed up his fine pitching in flawless style.

It was a matter of the Yanks getting back three runs to tie and a fourth to win against the steady work of Jess Barnes and his brilliant support.

The Yankees got a start in the first inning when Bancroft proved the power of his arm by throwing Dugan's grounder far over Kelley's left hip. Kelley, who was in a tough spot, hit the ball to the right field fence for the second home run of the afternoon. That made two of the needed run back with only one to go for a tie.

The aroused Yankees kept firing away with all they had but the brilliant infield support of Frisch and Groh helped Barnes to suppress each threatening rush. On two occasions Frisch killed off sure base hits by supernatural agility as he raced far out of his position to break down grounders or fall down.

Defense Is Flawless.

There was no getting by Shawkey after that first round and his stout defense backed up his fine pitching in flawless style.

It was a matter of the Yanks getting back three runs to tie and a fourth to win against the steady work of Jess Barnes and his brilliant support.

The Yankees got a start in the first inning when Bancroft proved the power of his arm by throwing Dugan's grounder far over Kelley's left hip. Kelley, who was in a tough spot, hit the ball to the right field fence for the second home run of the afternoon. That made two of the needed run back with only one to go for a tie.

The aroused Yankees kept firing away with all they had but the brilliant infield support of Frisch and Groh helped Barnes to suppress each threatening rush. On two occasions Frisch killed off sure base hits by supernatural agility as he raced far out of his position to break down grounders or fall down.

Defense Is Flawless.

There was no getting by Shawkey after that first round and his stout defense backed up his fine pitching in flawless style.

It was a matter of the Yanks getting back three runs to tie and a fourth to win against the steady work of Jess Barnes and his brilliant support.

flies. The "Fordham flash" was a ball playing centipede all the afternoon. He covered enough ground to build a course with additional acres left over for the development of suburban homes. He was all over the unbacked lot, playing always with the flame and flash that catches the fancy of the crowd.

Against this combination of Barnes, Frisch, Groh and others the Yankees found that Jess Barnes needed a hard one to get. It was not until the last half of the eighth that the Yanks finally closed up the gap and moved back to even terms with that crushing wallop of Irish Meusel's. Ruth was at bat with one out when Jess Barnes attempted to baffle the Bambino with a slow one. The Babe fell heavily against it, spinning the ball on a line to left field for a two-base turn amid the tumult that he beaver so well.

Ruth Sent to Third.

Pipp's long fly sent him to third and then with Bob Meusel at bat the Babe became worked up to such a frenzy that he attempted to steal home. But Meusel's foul stopped his wild charge at the rim of the plate. The play was brief, however, for Meusel lost little time in socking a line double to left field as Ruth carried the tying run across the plate.

The Yanks, having tied the count, then made a last desperate assault to break through in the ninth. They had come from behind to even terms and when Deacon Scott singled to center with only one man out the deep-mouthed chorus gave Shawkey encouragement as he came to bat. Bob tried to sacrifice—and failed. If he had the Yanks might have won, for after Shawkey had hit Scott, Whitey Witt looped a single into left. It was now up to Dugan, but here Barnes faced the big moment with most every nook in the grounds, from grandstand to bleachers, a terrific roar of protest swept back and forth across the field, followed by the prolonged boom of the raspberry chorus working at full blast.

Umpires Hold Conference.

This was the final turn either way. As the tenth was being played the sun had dipped back of the stands, leaving the field hazy but still fairly clear. It was the contention of the umpires that the chance to the tenth inning balls and strikes were getting more and more difficult to judge around the plate and the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

CALLING OF GAME DECLARED ROBBERY

Baseball Suffers Another Smear, Says Fullerton.

HIGH OFFICIALS BLAMED

Writer Avers Umpires Had No Intention of Ending Contest; Play Display of Nerve.

BY HUGH FULLERTON

(By Chicago Tribune Licensed Wire.)

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Oct. 5.—Baseball suffered another black smudge today when the great, guileless American public was gulped after a game of thrilling excitement and a brilliant and bad play.

With the score 3-3, the teams fighting and Shawkey and Jess Barnes struggling for victory in a great pitching duel, the game was called at the end of the tenth. Almost an hour of daylight remained, two more innings could have been played, even at the slow and drawing gait with which the pitchers were working.

Reduced to simplest terms, it meant that the public would pay another $125,000 or so into the coffers of the baseball club owners. The crowd of almost 40,000 spectators today must pay again. Until Umpire Hildebrand, on orders from above, stopped play after the tenth, the Yanks had failed to score in their tenth, it was a ball game. The Yanks, who should have won by a score of 5 or 7 to 3, perhaps 4, were struggling all the time to overcome the handicap imposed on them by the first inning when Emil Meusel, with two men on bases, had maulled home run into the left field bleachers and given the Giants their three runs.

Against this handicap the Yankees fought desperately, determined to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided that if the game was not decided by the tenth it should be called.

It was here that the crowd failed to agree with their judgment. Another inning might have brought without any great trouble, and for the general good of the game, the umpires decided that the game was called on account of darkness. The umpires were adding its share of trouble to the attack. They had conferred over the situation as far as the eighth inning and had decided