The savage Glant altack got to Hoyt for two runs in the third, but the Yanks never got to Scott. Note that the Yanks never got to Scott. Note that the Yanks never got to Scott. Ruth at Scott's Mercy.

Scott held Ruth at his mercy, a misrionette at the end of a string. The big Babe took his old toe-hold, scowled each time with grim determination and drove the big ash at the ball, but Scott, still unruffled and unperturbed, continued to do his stuff as the Babe tried in vain to hit one out of the infield, in four separate and distinct trips to the plate the Bambino died the Babe's glory again disappeared back of a hitless cloud. The big boy gave the best he had, but Scott had more on the ball than Ruth had on the bal, and when this happens there is only one story left to tell.

As the game wore on and the stands aw the ex-derelict of fate drawing closer and closer to the kingdom of victory they began to wonder whether or not the tall pitcher could go the roure. Thirty-eight thousand fans got their answer in the fourth inning. Wally Pipp had grounded out when Rob Meusel pumped a hit over the pitcher's quivering reach. Schang then followed by a line lash down the right-fleid line that drove Bob Meusel to third as Wally slid in safety to second base.

Blood is Whiffed.

The slaughter was about to take place after all. The crowd scented the first whiff of blood and after the manner of all crowds upon such an occasion one of these wild, rolatering roars beat back and forth across the field. Scott had made a brave start, but he was now standing on the rim of doom. Yankee bats were back again and the tids was running their way.

In a flash Huggins lifted Aaron Ward, who hadn't been litting a lick, to make way for Elmer Smith, the left-handed hitter with the eagles eye. Since Scott was breaking up, one more heavy shot would the the count and drive John William from the reservation to seek

Interest In Brenthless,

Interest is Brenthiess.

The second largest crowd that ever saw a world series game in the Polo grounds sat in breathiess mierest as Smith took his place at hat while Scott, taking his time tooked the batter over before handing over the first strike. Three balls followed and then Scott turned on two perfect strikes and Smith staiked hack to the bench as 35,300 voices paid their tribute to a good arm and a game heart.

But Scott had another Scott to handle and the Yankee deacon is no piker in a pinch. This time be, too, was helpless as Bancroft threw him out and the Yankee rally went to seed.

They never had a chance against the combination of Giant pitching and Giant infield play, where Groh, Bancroft and Frisch continued to back up their pitching mate with an impregnable defense. Four hits, only two of which were bunched, tells the story of Scott's greatness and the second Yankee defeat. For the Yanks were beaten in that third inning when none other than our hero, viz: John Williaft, Scott, led off with a single to Heyt's astonished disgust. Ward booted Bancroft's hard low ground-

BY L. H. GREGORY. The Beavers made it three in row from Salt Lake yesterday in another well-played game. The score was 7 to 1. Among other features was another homer over the right-field wall by Jimmy Pools, his second in two days. James holsted the pellet across the extreme center-punted the ball clear past Scott into left field and a sarrifice and a hit followed, which yielded two runs. The other run Hoyt practically presented to the Giants after hope was abandoned. He pitched carciers by as if angry, and the Giants added one more to their majority. They ought to have made awe, perhaps, three other runs, but their efforts to press their openings led to taking too many chances and they destroyed two fine openings. The excitement of the day was furnished by Ruth, who fell so far fourth inning and when thrown out he humped Groh clear off the damend. The crowd resented his dirty ball playing and jeered, booed, hooted and hissed him through the remainder of the battle.
