Witt, who walked in the third, and Ruth, who was hit by a pitched ball in the fourth, were the only other Yankees to reach base. Wittie napping off first base, was caught by Earl Smith's quick toss to Kelly, and the first "home" play of the series was automatically recorded.

The Babe came out down at third when he crashed with Groh in trying to get an extra base. Frisch rumbled off Bob Meusel's grounder. As in the other departments of the game the Giants excelled in fielding although there was little of the spectacular variety. Groh's running catch of Scott's foul near the Yankee dugout, in the fifth, and Bancroft's rear of Frisch's hot grounder over second base in the ninth, were outstanding.

The Giants, with two victories and no defeats, now hold a formidable advantage over their rivals. Their supremacy in pitching, general base hitting, and defensive work, while especially clear-cut today, has been outstanding in the entire series to date.

Few more startling reversals of form have been recorded in the fortunes of the rival twirling staffs. The Yankees, with stars to rely on, was conceded an overwhelming advantage. McGraw, on the other hand, with a staff riddled and ineffective by a hard campaign, faced a dubious outlook with the sole chance that one or more of his moundsmen might come through. They did come through in the form of Scott and Frisch, and displayed more pitching skill, resourcefulness and courage than any other pitcher in the series.

McGraw was voluble in his praise of Scott and Miller Huggins, the beaten and crestfallen mentor of the Yankees, was not remiss.

Though Scott's marvelous pitching stood out today—as only the victory of the "under dog" can—two other incidents furnished material for the crowd, a better tempered and more appreciative gathering than yesterday.

Ruth and Groh Have Hit. Babe Ruth, from whom so much is expected and so little comes, almost got into the headlines through a tic with Heinie Groh, the Giants' fourth baseman. In a play in the fourth inning, Ruth tried to go from first to third when Frisch booted Meusel's hit. Frisch whipped the ball to third and Heinie was waiting for Ruth.

Caught under full headway, Ruth bumped into Groh, who tagged him and then fell from the impact. Groh jumped up, shouting and threw back his fist. He didn't strike, however, and umpire Hildebrand stepped between the two.

Babe came to the dugout in a roar of bores and a faint mingling of applause. He was repeated when Ruth came to bat, but the cheers and clapping were stronger, and must have been for him. The next time he crossed the field he stopped Groh and tried to explain what happened, but Groh refused to be appeased in the heat of the moment.

Scott Starts Downfall. Jack Scott started the Yankee downfall in the third with a single to center. Bancroft hit sharply to Ward and when Frisch booted the ball to left Scott raced to third and Bancroft pulled up to second. Groh bounced one to Hoyt, who caught Scott off the base, taking the throw and running down the pitcher. Bancroft, who had reached third on the play, scored on Frisch's sacrifice bunt. Frisch, in deep center, Groh advanced a base and came home on Irish Meusel's wallop to right. Irish forced Meusel to end the inning.

Bancroft scored the third run in the seventh. Two were out and Hoyt had the Giant captain "in the hole" with two strikes and one ball but walked him with three wide ones. Groh hit the first ball pitched to right field, on a hit-and-run play, and Bancroft easily reached third, from where he scored on Frisch's line single to right. Ward ended the rally by tossing out to Meusel.

Hoyt No Puzzle. With the top end of the Giant batting order again leading the attack, the youthful Yankee twirler was hit hard throughout the seventh inning he worked. The Giants collected two hits off his delivery in each of the five innings. The fifth was the only hitless inning for the winners. Sam Jones pitched the eighth after Frank Baker had rattled for Hoyt. He retired the side after Young had singled for his third hit and Cunningham walked.

The Yanks on the other hand, threatened only once in the seventh, but it was a golden opportunity they missed. With Pipp out, Bob Meusel bounced an infield hit over Scott's head and Seanez wallopped the first call down the rightfield foul line for a double. Meusel holding third.

Crises at Hand. It was the game's crisis for Scott. The Giant infield parleyed with the pitcher and Coach Hughie Jennings came from the dugout with instructions. "The outlook was even more dubious with Elmer Smith, a dangerous hitter, batting in place of Ward. But with the count 3 and 1, Smith let a second strike shoot by and then missed the third one. Even

GOVERNMENT STICKS FOR U. S. ISOLATION

Near East Blow-up Fails to Alter Policy.

HARDING URGED TO ACT

Return of Turk-to Europe Shock to Many People; Leader Liko Wilson Declared Needed.

BY MARK SULLIVAN. (Copyright, 1922, by New York Evening Post, Inc. Published by Arrangement.)

(Special.)—The facts as they stand today concerning American cooperation with the rest of the nations to handle world problems, are these:

(1) It is clearly evident that the foreign policy of the administration for some months has been and is now the isolation policy. This policy was adopted at a time and for reasons that did not anticipate the present explosion at Constantinople. This unexpected development has surprised and jolted the isolation policy, but has not yet changed it.

(2) The administration is under strong pressure from many of the churches to "do something" about the return of the Turk to Europe. They thought the Turk was out of Europe forever, and regarded that historic result of the war as even more worth the cost than the down-fall of the Kaiser. To see the Turk coming back triumphant shocks them deeply.

"Do something" is the vague phrase in which the churches frequently express their demands on the administration. The sort of things which are done in their mind is not possible and will not be attempted.

One Distinction Impossible. Some of the church people go on the theory that our government ought to take account of the fact that the Greeks are Christians. While the Turks, in the theological phrase, are infidels, they think our government ought to take sides based on this distinction. They try to think in terms of the crusades.

In the present state of the world this cannot be done. In no state of the world ought it to be done. The government of the United States cannot look at Christians differently from non-Christians. Aside from this general principle, it is within the knowledge of those whose business causes them to be well informed, that the actions of the Greeks and the Armenians have begun on occasions no less odious than those of the Turks. Further, there is just now a condition in the Moslem world which makes it desirable not to give the Ottomans any just cause to start a religious war.

The administration is just now under an additional wave of pressure from persons who have always believed in some sort of world peace, and who are looking for a step looking to co-operation with the other nations of the world with a view to preventing further exploitation of the world at Constantinople. To this demand it is well known President Harding is and always has been in a general way sympathetic.

Isolation Party Strong. This goes us to the fourth fact, which is that there is a large and strong element in America which believes exactly the contrary, which insists upon the policy of isolation. This isolation group may or may not be larger than the co-operative group. But whether large in numbers or not, it is certainly better organized, more stubbornly aggressive in its leadership and more effective in its action.

One of the spokesmen of the isolation group is Senator Borah of Idaho, and Senator Borah is larger in power than any other isolationist in his career. Another is Senator Johnson of California, and he has just been endorsed by his party. Another is Senator Reed of Missouri, and he, too, has just received a re-nomination. Another is La Follette of Wisconsin, who has just received the most sweeping endorsement of his career.

Between the cross fire from these two groups, Harding is in a painful position. He cannot lead the country into any world association except with such a majority of support in congress and in the country as enabled President Wilson, for example, to lead us into the war. It is axiomatic that a comparatively small group can achieve its ends, whereas it takes a preponderating group to achieve action. The way for those who believe in co-operation to achieve success is to make themselves effective politically.

Issue Up to Voters. Specifically, one immediate step would be to defeat the irreconcilable group when they come up at the polls. So long as the irreconcilables succeed in getting endorsement from the voters, the opposition to any world association must be accepted by the administration as a fixed and determining factor in the situation.

The clergyman, who do not "carry their own wards" and do not even try, send leading letters to the president. But the irreconcilable group, who do "carry their own wards" and do not even try, send "hold a pistol" at Harding's head.

If one were to venture into prophesy it would be necessary to say that in the clash of the present cross fire the more likely result is inaction rather than action. So far as your correspondent is called upon to express a judgment, or to attempt to reflect the preponderance of being judgment, it is that at some time in the future a conference and some form of world co-operation are almost inevitable.

The Versailles treaty is already in the scrap heap. The Versailles treaty is almost equally bankrupt. But the conference and the partitioning of America in a world association are not yet in sight, and must await certain definite developments both in America and in Europe. These developments have not yet begun to ferment with sufficient force and no immediate modification of policy is in sight.

The one condition which would most greatly hurry matters would be the arising in America of a general speaker with a faith as strong as Woodrow Wilson's and an equal capacity for inspiring that faith in others.

ITALY GOES TO TURKS (Continued From First Page) and as wanting some undertaking in writing from the allies.

More Dreadnoughts Arrive. Three additional British dreadnoughts arrived before Chantok today, bringing the strength in first-class battleships up to nine. The British are making extensive naval concentrations in the neighborhood.

Related dispatches from Turkish sources in Mudania telling of the arrival of British destroyers, chief Greek delegate to the armistice conference, said the Greeks had not received the privilege of active participation in the armistice negotiations. He was informed by the allies' representatives of all decisions taken, as an act of courtesy.

Colonel Plastiras was quoted as declaring the Greek army was prepared to take the field at once in defense of Thrace.

DIPLOMATS ARE OPTIMISTIC Hope Held for Success of Negotiations at Mudania.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—Although no definite news had been received from Mudania, where the allied representatives have gone again to renew their conference with the envoys of the Turkish nationalist government, at midnight tonight, there was a distinct current of optimism among the allied diplomats here regarding a possible successful outcome of the negotiations.

This feeling prevailed notwithstanding the fact that the Kemalists today issued an ultimatum demanding their consent to Turkish occupation of Thrace and the previous rejection by the Kemalists of the proposal for the sending of allied troops and the establishment of an allied control commission in the province. The ultimatum regarding the evacuation of Thrace at first demanded a reply by 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon. Later the time was extended to midnight and later to 8 o'clock. Meantime the allied generals had sailed for Mudania.

Dispatches received during the day from London and Paris seemed to indicate that the French and British governments still were seeking ground for the Greek army, Thracian which they could again face the Turkish delegates with a united front. The feeling among the British here was summarized by a staff officer tonight, as follows:

We showed a willingness to go any honest length to avoid rupture. If our pacific advances are not acceptable or are not reciprocated we are ready for eventualities.

Most of the Italians here expressed regret over orders received from Rome directing General Mombelli, the Italian representative in Thracian, to support Turkish claims.

An announcement received from London that ex-Premier Venizelos was willing to have the Greek troops evacuate eastern Thrace, thus permitting the early establishment of a Turkish civil administration there, was considered as offering a way out of the present crisis, but the belief prevailed that the Kemalists would adhere to their expressed intention not to permit the presence in Thrace of allied control commissions.

FRENCH PROTEST TO GREEKS Moving of Reinforcements into Thrace Is Resented.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—The French government has instructed its minister at Athens to protest against the Greek government's having sent reinforcements to the Greek army in Thracian. The inappropriateness of sending troops into one of the disputed regions at the moment an armistice is in negotiation, will be pointed out, as will the view that the Greek government by this action is adding to the embarrassment of her situation and to the general fund raising in Greece.

The form of the French representations was described as firm. Premier Poincare received ex-Premier Venizelos of Greece today. They had a rather brief conversation. Nothing of an official character was discussed, but Venizelos communicated to the public except that Venizelos had the kindest sort of a reception at the hotel. He did not make any explanation, it was stated, of the present trying situation of his country.

FAIR DRAWS BIG CROWD Races and Other Contests Feature Klamath Exhibition.

KLAMATH FALLS, Or., Oct. 6.—(Special.)—The first clear day this week brought out a big crowd for the second day of the Klamath county fair and rodeo. Dean Hall won first place in the daily riding contest. Boss Richardson was second and Red Schonstein third. One of the most exciting events was a chariot race, in which the Ely team narrowly defeated the Klamath team. Eight riders out of a score who have ridden remain qualified to take part in the finals tomorrow.

Final judging of livestock entries took place today. According to County agent Henderson, this year produced the most entries and the highest class of stock yet shown in Klamath county. There were 75 dairy entries, 55 beef, 50 registered sheep and 55 swine.

Lebanon Turns Out to Fair. LEBANON, Or., Oct. 6.—(Special.)—The Lebanon schools gave the pupils a holiday today to allow them to attend the loan county fair at Albany, where all the school children were admitted free on public school day. The school attended almost in a body, and many of the parents went for the closing day.
