Court Charges Collusion in Ordering Sale.

CLAIMANT IS CENSURED

Raleigh Falconer Falls in Attempt to Get Machine Taken While Delivering Liquor.

Collusion among bootleggers as to the ownership of automobiles used in the liquor traffic will not save those machines from confiscation by the government, ruled Federal Judge Wolverton, in ordering the sale of a Volstead act automobile seized in August with a cargo of liquor. The attempt of Raleigh Falconer, a man with a varied penitentiary and county jail record, to claim that the machine was his, stolen from him by an ex-bootlegger partner, drew severe censure from the court. Judge Wolverton's decision was regarded as a victory by prohibition officials, who contended that it added teeth to the Volstead act and made the recovery of a machine used in transporting liquor a very difficult matter.

Column a great help and shall appreciate an early reply. Thanking you in advance.

It depends a good deal on the kind of lace just what will be the best cleaner. You might try brushing it with dry baking soda. Benzine is sometimes helpful, or a regular silver polish. Try a small portion first. Possibly some reader may have other suggestions to offer. I am glad you find this column useful.

NEWBERG, Or.—Dear Miss Tingle: Would you kindly publish in your column the recipe for making candy? I have a good fatty recipe. I have derived much help from your column by reading others' hints. I am sincerely, Mrs. S. M. M.

I do not know of any "muguet" candy. "Poussin" some reader may help. Or do you, perhaps, mean nougat? If so please describe it—hard or soft, clear or fluffy, with or without honey, or a regular silver-fruit or both? Nougat is a general term, not a particular name for one kind of candy. Following is a recipe for molasses and nougat taffy. A good recipe for plain molasses taffy was given recently. If you want some other kind please write again. I am glad you find this column useful.

Molasses candy—Two cups molasses, one cup sugar, two tablespoons vinegar, three tablespoons butter. Boil until the mixture is brittle in cold water (about 250 degrees Fahrenheit), stirring constantly the last part of the cooking. Pour on a buttered slab. When cool enough to handle pull until porous and light colored. Cut into pieces with scissors and wrap at once in paraffin paper. Flavoring may be added if desired. A little knead and practice in handling will usually be found necessary for the best results.
