

LIQUOR INJUNCTION IS BRAIN TEASER

Federal Officials "In Air" Over Enforcement.

OFFICIAL DATA LACKING

Chief Does Not Know What to Do—Attorney Silent—Customs Collector to Act as He Has.

Although the order of Attorney General Daugherty, banning liquor from all foreign vessels in American waters, is to become effective Saturday, local federal officials, which will be expected to enforce the ruling, is completely "up-in-the-air" regarding its plans.

Dr. J. A. Linville, national prohibition director, frankly says that he does not know what to do. Lester W. Humphreys, United States attorney, refuses to discuss the case until such time as he has seen an official copy of the ruling. George Piper, collector of customs, in the absence of official orders, says that he will follow his procedure of the past until he receives orders to the contrary.

Many Complications Feared.

The Daugherty ruling, if enforced to the letter in Portland harbor, would cause no end of complications. There is much liquor aboard foreign vessels, both as ship's stores and as cargo. In accordance with existing agreements with foreign governments, masters of such vessels are allowed to draw a certain quantity of liquor from sealed stores for use while in port. If the Daugherty order is enforced, it means that foreign sailors will be forced to forego their daily ration of rum, beer and wine.

The ruling will cause more trouble on the Pacific coast than on the Atlantic, said Mr. Piper yesterday. Cargo steamers, bound from the continent to Vancouver, touch port with large shipments of liquor in their holds. One vessel recently passed through Portland with 50,000 cases of whisky for Vancouver.

Japanese passenger liners, which run between the orient and South American ports and which touch at Portland, carry liquor, both as cargo and as supplies for passengers and crews. A line of Dutch steamers and motorships which put into Portland handle large quantities of rum and whisky, both as cargo and for consumption aboard ship.

Question of Duty Disturbing.

In the past such vessels, in entering the mouth of the Columbia, have been boarded by customs officers and the liquor supplies sealed. The masters were allowed to draw their daily supply for use while in port. The amount of the supply is regulated by agreement with the foreign nations.

If the Daugherty injunction is carried out it means that the liquor aboard these vessels must be thrown overboard as the steamer passes into the mouth of the Columbia. It also means that all liquor aboard vessels now in the harbor must be confiscated and destroyed.

The question of whether it is worth the cost to carry out this order is now disturbing the federal officials. Dr. Linville says that, according to present disposition, Washington prohibition officials would be required to carry out the provisions of the law. With this in mind, he called on District Attorney Humphreys yesterday to request additional information. Mr. Humphreys, being without data in the case, refused to give any opinion and referred the dry chief to Assistant United States Attorney Baldwin, whose specialty is the Volstead act. That official, likewise without data, refused to comment on the case.

"I have no orders regarding this matter," said Mr. Piper, "and until I receive instructions from Washington I do not intend to change my present policy. I understand that a test case will be made at once for foreign ship owners, in New York, probably.

Vessels Are Boarded.

"I have no idea who would be called on to enforce this order. According to maritime law, a foreign vessel, entering this port, is boarded at the mouth of the river by customs officers and is considered 'in customs' until she leaves. In the past, our office has taken general charge of all liquor aboard."

Officials do not care to comment on the legality or the probability of strict enforcement of the ruling. French ships, they say, are required by French law to issue a certain amount of wine to each of the officers and the crew. With the wine supply cut off by reason of visiting American ports, officials say that it would be a difficult matter to ship a crew of Frenchmen for a voyage to this country.

On the Atlantic coast, it is pointed out, European vessels generally carry cargo to and from one American port. On the Pacific, with liquor making up a large part of the cargoes of some steamers in coastal and trans-Pacific trade, the probability of barring such vessels from American ports by reason of their liquor shipments, probably would cause serious complications.

Unless instructions are received, it is a certain fact that the local federal official will attempt to carry out the Daugherty ruling when it becomes effective, Saturday.

PROCEDURE TO BE MAPPED

Customs and Prohibition Officials to Meet in New York.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 10.—Representatives of the headquarters office of the customs service and the prohibition unit are to confer in New York within the next few days with port and dry law enforcement officials regarding the procedure for carrying out Attorney General Daugherty's ruling banning liquor from ships in American waters pending the promulgation of formal regulations by Secretary Mellon.

Regulations under the new ruling, officials declared tonight, will be forthcoming at an early date but uniform procedure in the meanwhile is desired.

It is believed that the procedure to be worked out for carrying into effect the new liquor ban will follow the general programme that customs officers shall take charge of liquor found aboard foreign ships and then turn it over to the prohibition officers for disposal. In the case of American ships less strict duty is expected, as they cannot carry liquor on their manifests and the importation of liquor is forbidden under the tariff act of 1922.

Keep the Ends of Ribbon From Fraying.

HERE is a very simple and at the same time ornamental way of keeping the ends of your little daughter's hair ribbons and sashes from fraying out. Cut the ends any shape you want, then dip them into melted sealing wax. Place small pieces in a shallow tin over a small flame. When the wax is well melted dip the ribbon into it. Use wax of the same color as the ribbon or of a contrasting shade. It is surprising what wonderful effects can be given to a plain ribbon with the use of melted sealing wax.

Housewife's Idea Box

Use a Safety Pin Instead of a Bodkin.

YOU will find that a safety pin is much more convenient than a bodkin for running ribbon or tape through headings or insertions. Pin one end of the ribbon to a safety pin. It cannot slip off as it sometimes does from a bodkin.

New McCall Patterns 2900, 2907

The Tale of a Sleeve

There's a sleeve in the sketch just above—the long one cut slanting from a wide wrist to a narrow cuff. It's the very newest of new sleeves and it distinguishes the new McCall Printed Pattern 2900. A new collar is shown, too, in this model, which would be very smart as a fall coat dress.

A long pleated panel and side drapes mark the other frock, number 2907.

They are McCall styles—just two of the new frocks that women make with such confidence because they know McCall styles are as new as the printed pattern is easy to use. And nothing goes beyond that.
