

NORTHWEST WANTS UNIFORM ROAD LAW

Committee Named to Draft New Legislation.

DRUNKEN DRIVER SCORED

Conference of Motor Vehicle Administrative and Traffic Officers Closes.

Formation of an executive committee to draft new legislation relating to traffic on highways in the western states and British Columbia was the principal business transacted at the second and closing day's session of the conference of motor vehicle administrative officers and traffic officers of California, Idaho, Oregon, Washington, Montana and British Columbia, at the Multnomah hotel yesterday.

Sam A. Koser, secretary of state of Oregon, was elected chairman of the committee, and L. E. McArdle, director of the department of efficiency of the state of Washington; Fred J. Dibble, director of the department of transportation of Idaho; H. E. Crockett, secretary of state of Utah; and Charles J. Chent, chief of the division of motor vehicles, California.

The new committee is empowered to meet at the call of the chairman or of any two members. Its first business will be to hold meetings at which a uniform law governing interstate and intra-state traffic will be submitted to the various lawmaking bodies of the states represented and British Columbia.

Oregon paved 162 miles of highways last year at a cost of $28,100 a mile. The average width of these highways was 16 feet and the average depth was five inches. Washington paved more than that number of miles at a cost of $28,300 a mile and the average width of the roads was 26 feet and average depth seven inches, according to Douglas Shieler, manager of the Automobile Club of Western Washington.

"The speed limit for motor vehicles in our state," said Mr. Shieler, "is 35 miles an hour, while Oregon's speed limit is but 30."

Wide Roads Safer.
"Why did we build our highways wider and deeper than Oregon? And why did we increase the speed limit? The answer is service to the motorist. It is just as safe to drive 30 miles on a narrow road as to drive 30 miles on Oregon roads and our thoroughfares cost practically the same."

"Oregon has 150,000 automobiles. Washington has 200,000 and California has more than 800,000. California's speed limit, 35 miles an hour and California's laws governing traffic and highways are admitted to be the best in the United States. We copied the California laws. Oregon should follow in our footsteps."

"Examination of drivers with a view to eliminating incompetents on our highways is bound to come in every state of the union. We are already contemplating the drafting of a law providing for this."

Law Enforcement Aided.
"The Automobile Club of Western Washington is backing law enforcement officers of the state to the limit. In the past, motor vehicles acted on the theory that every motorist except their own members should obey the law. But times have changed."

"If a man gets drunk and drives a motor car he should be sent to jail. He has no more right to escape than any murderer. An intoxicated automobile driver is a potential murderer at all times."

Municipal Judge Ekwall of Portland contributed an impressive paper at the conference. He said he has made it a practice to punish careless, reckless and intoxicated drivers to the full extent of the law in the six months since he took office.

Drunken Drivers Scored.
A dozen other speakers, representatives of the various states which sent delegates to the conference, picked on incompetent drivers and lambasted John Barcovics and Miandy Lotuliosom without any consideration whatsoever. It developed during the discussion that narcotics users are just as culpable as those who imbibe too freely of strong and rebellious liquors.

Moonshtiner Fined $250.
Ernest Webber, in whose room a local apartment house, prohibition officers recently found a small quantity of moonshine, pleaded guilty to violating the prohibition act and was fined $250 by Federal Judge Wolverton yesterday. Glenn H. Price, one of the dry agents killed at New Grand Ronde by Phillip Warren, a drunken Indian, was one of the men who arrested Webber.

LOVE beckoned—love with a price tag on it. But it was more than she was willing to pay. So Anita Stewart, in "Rose of the Sea," the current attraction at the Columbia theater, rejected the son and married the dad. It was a case of wasting her love on a reckless man and being paid in full by the father.

This story of a working girl has figured in numberless plots before, but the writers have investigated it with many unique and interesting twists and turns. Rose Eton, played by Miss Stewart, is a homeless waif, the sole survivor of a wreck at sea. Later she becomes a saleslady in a Florida's. There she attracts the attention of Elliott Schuyler, an idle, useless boogie-woogie, played by Ripoll Cameron, in private life the husband of the star. As the result of an accident to him, the girl becomes acquainted with his father and runs up against old Knickerbocker conventionality. The father sees in this unsophisticated girl the means of winning back his business from the glittering lights of Broadway. But the plans go all wrong. The girl is found in another man's room at a house party. They do not know that she went there to obtain possession of a check that the son forged. But eventually it leaks out and the father realizes that he is in love with the girl himself, slightly repented that he ever simplified matters by secretly wedding the girl of his choice.

In this feature Rudolph Cameron enjoys the luxury of playing opposite his own wife, and then, according to the scenario, suffers the humiliation of being rejected by her.
