MANY society maids and matrons will call at the home of Mrs. John Ross Dickson at Garthwick this afternoon, when she will compliment her daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Ross Dickson Jr., whose wedding was a recent event. Mr. and Mrs. John Ross Dickson Jr. will pass a few days in Portland before returning to their home in Pendleton.

Miss Charlie Fenton arrived in Portland yesterday from Berkeley, Cal. Her wedding will be a smart event of the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen E. Meier (Jane Sailer), whose wedding was a brilliant event of last week, are spending several weeks at Colorado Springs.

Mrs. H. C. Wortman was the motif for an attractive luncheon Tuesday afternoon, when Mrs. J. D. Coleman entertained. The luncheon was given in the blue room of the Hotel Malloy. Eleven guests enjoyed the affair.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Allen are attending the American Legion convention in New Orleans, La.

Saturday evening Mrs. Mary H. Scarborough will give an informal supper-dance out at her home at Riverwood.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. James B. Montgomery entertained with a smart luncheon.

A large reception was given Wednesday afternoon by Brigadier-General and Mrs. Richard M. Blatchford at the Vancouver army post, complimenting the new officers and their wives. The autumn flowers and leaves were used as decorations. Presiding at the attractive tea table were Mrs. William Lawson Little and Miss Anna Trotter. They were assisted by Mrs. Keith B. Wise, Mrs. Bryant E. Moore, Mrs. Julius L. Blatchford, Mrs. William M. Chapman, Mrs. Freeman B. Hodson, Mrs. Caryl R. Hazeltine, Mrs. Charles C. Bond, Mrs. Arthur H. Wolf and Mrs. Hubert S. Miller.

to the closer fitting sleeve measurement. The dress should open at the left side front. Have your skirt not more than five inches long from the floor in this type of dress.

GREYSTOWN, Or., Sept. 29.—Dear Madam: I am 27 years of age, weight 170 pounds, 5 feet 4 inches tall, bust 40, waist 30, blue eyes, dark brown hair and no much color.

The waist part is real "blousy" with a vestee front of same material and the sleeves are long, light and sewed on a lining. The skirt is plain gathered and reaches to the floor. The front piece is 20 inches wide and 39 inches long and each back piece is 13 inches wide and 39 inches long. Also have each in two pieces; each piece is 4 inches wide and 7 inches long. It is possible to remodel this dress with other kind of material should I wish in combination, also kind and color of trimming. What colors should I wear?

The coat is black plush and is the latest length. The coat has a style three or four years ago. The style of the coat fits tight between the shoulders to the waist line. The skirt, shown in the sample, will preclude the use of hand-work in any great degree for the trimming is already made with such a fabric weave. Therefore, the safest plan would be to combine your material with the canvas crepe, using it for the collar, the cuffs and the belt, which at either side has the long ends. This treatment will add width to your skirt and give the whole thing a freshened and more up-to-the-minute appearance. The long tight sleeves are worn. In fact many of the newest models show this type. Have a cuff six inches in depth.

This season finds many combinations and among the most popular is plush and broadcloth of the same or a different shade. Use the skirt portion of your coat for a new blouse and the old sleeves recut to better match the blouse type. Have a skirt of the black broadcloth, for with your proportions the two colors will make you appear with a cut line, which you cannot afford to have. The plush can be used for the collar, cuffs and the narrow belt. A model which will perhaps give you a clearer picture of this frock will be found in the fall quarterly of the Pictorial Review, page 25. No. 1030. The model shows a bound neck, but the small beaver collar will add a pleasing note of contrast.

WOODBURN, Or., Sept. 12.—Dear Madam: I have scanned your paper carefully, but have not found an answer. May I hear from you soon, as I wanted my dress by October 26 if possible. Thanking you.

INTERESTED READER. I received your letter and hope that the information will meet the need of the inquirer. You may have missed the answer, which may have been in a daily. The letter may also have been lost after filing.

From the requested date this will have reached you too late, but perhaps you will still find use for the suggestion. The best materials for such a gown will be found in the tricotine, broadcloth, serge and pique; twill; the above are especially good for the street wear. For the dress used for the tea hour where one is assisting, there are several fabrics such as the satin, crepe, tulle and crepe de chine. The latter group drapes well, as they have the softer texture. The tricotine and broadcloth, named in the first list, are best in the heavier material for draped effects.

A stunning combination would be found in a black kitten's ear broadcloth with a "wrapped" skirt slightly draped on the left side, the end of a diagonal front meets a ruffled ornament or a whirl of the material with a beaded center of steel. A loose panel is over the entire back length and finishes with the end looped under the skirt edge. The panel width should be between eight and ten inches according to the proportion of the wearer's back. Embroider in steel beads and gray floss, embellishing the left front side of blouse in an inch hand design. The sleeves are attached to a drop shoulder line and are rather closely fitted, finished at a three-quarter length with a cuff also embellished. Use three-inch depth and 12-inch width, which means that the outside portion of cuff becomes a loop due to the closer fitting sleeve measurement. The dress should open at the left side front. Have your skirt not more than five inches long from the floor in this type of dress.

When a boy observes his father reading the newspaper at the breakfast table, an absorption which prevents him from taking any interest in the family table talk, he is apt to follow in later life the ill-mannered example set before him daily during his boyhood. Thus he grows up into the type of man to be observed at hotel tables everywhere, or in his own home, even when guests are present, with a newspaper wall of rudeness shutting him out from all the others at his table.

A man who has been trained in civility from his earliest days asks permission or pardon before reading a letter or a newspaper at the table. Even then he does not read the paper continuously, nor entirely to himself. He glances over the headlines, announcing the most important or most interesting news to his table companions, scans the market reports, perhaps, and then folds up his newspaper to finish reading it on the way to his office. AMMONIA WILL BRIGHTEN OLD BRASS. Sometimes you can pick up a nice piece of old brass which, however, is discolored with dirt and age and looks as if you could never get it bright. This can be easily done by pouring strong ammonia freely over the brass article. Then scrub it thoroughly with a brush. It should not take more than five minutes to see the brightness reappear. Rinse it in cold water and dry.

moment and cannot give you an exact reference date. However, though it is rather late in the season, I have so many dill-pickle requests besides yours, that I am giving another recipe. I am glad you find this column helpful.

Dill pickles (fermented)—Use very fresh cucumbers, 4 to 6 inches long, but not too thick. Wash them and prepare a crock or wooden keg or bucket by scalding thoroughly. Put a layer of dill at the bottom, with or without a few dried peppers or a small quantity of commercial "mixed dill-pickle spices." Put two or three layers of cucumbers over this, then a layer of dill and dill-pickle spices, then cucumbers, until the container is almost full, having dill on top. Cover with a layer of grape leaves or beet leaves or cherry leaves about one inch thick. Fill up and cover with a brine made in the proportion of one pound salt to ten quarts water and two quarts vinegar. Place a weighted board on top to keep the pickles well below the brine. Allow to stand until fermentation ceases. They will probably take three or four weeks. Then the pickles may be heated to boiling point in the same brine and sealed while hot in glass jars when they will probably keep indefinitely, or they may be put up in fresh dill-flavored vinegar. Or, if large barrels are used, they may be completely filled up with brine and bunged closed. If left in the crocks considerable care and watchfulness will be necessary to prevent moldy spots of rotting. Place a tin or oil over the surface is helpful, but for ordinary family quantities the most satisfactory method is to put them up in quart jars. Pickle size as suggested above.

Women's Activities

The Y. W. C. A. programme for next Sunday afternoon is being planned by the Ergatheia class of the Y. W. C. A. The programme consists of one kind of service rendered by this class of young women has been the excellent programmes prepared for the social and philanthropic institutions.

New Today in the Markets

AN ADVANCE of three cents in the wholesale price of eggs took effect yesterday, making select eggs about 58 cents a dozen retail. Although some stores and markets had not taken advantage of the increase yesterday, it is quite sure housewives will have to pay more today. Tillamook cheese also took a rise of one cent a pound wholesale and retailers formerly selling it at 40 cents a pound yesterday raised the price to 45 cents.

Flour is almost certain to take a jump in price next week, it is predicted, and the housewife who wishes to save herself added expense would do well to buy at once.

Salvage peaches can still be found in the markets and are selling at 30 and 35 cents a basket or $1 a box. String beans are priced at six cents a pound and extra fancy varieties are selling two pounds for a quarter. Cabbage has dropped from two cents a pound to one and a half cents and the heads are white and firm. Celery is ten cents a stalk and three stalks for 25 cents. Potatoes are a cent and a quarter a pound, and onions are two and a half cents.

New spinach is priced at three pounds for 15 cents and mustard greens are three pounds for ten cents.

United Workmen to Gather. ABERDEEN, Wash., Oct. 19.—(Special.)—J. F. Fogarty of Seattle, grand master of the Washington Ancient Order of United Workmen, has arrived in Aberdeen to prepare the local lodge for the annual district meeting to be held here October 25. More than 300 officers and members of 11 southwest Washington lodges will attend the convention.

Loggers' Body Is Recovered. PORT ORFORD, Or., Oct. 19.—(Special.)—The body of Andrew Tuikkala, a sailor on the steamer Acme, who fell overboard and was drowned while the vessel was loading logs here last Thursday, was recovered by members of the life-saving crew from the coast guard station at Bandon.

Highway Work to Begin. GRANTS PASS, Or., Oct. 19.—(Special.)—Work on the highway between Grants Pass and Crescent City will start immediately. A survey crew, under E. E. Green, engineer, is being organized, and the grade stakes will be placed at once. Only 12.8 miles of the road has been constructed to date, this highway
