American Palates Infallible

Like many popular delusions, is the prevalent opinion that certain foreign nations surpass the people of the United States in knowledge as to the proper selection and serving of food. While it is true that certain chefs, and justly famous, are of foreign extraction, no race of people are so particular about their food or live as well as the American Nation.

It is surprising when the facts are disclosed by investigation, how infallible is the palate of the American public. Invarably the best flour, the best bacon, the best cereal and the best coffee is always the best seller. The average citizen cannot be misled in the selection of food and the manufacturer who offers a better quality than his competitor is on a sure road to general recognition. Advertising has little to do with the final result, it merely hastens the day.

The fact that Hills Bros. Coffee has for many years led all other brands in volume of sales is a source of much pride, because it demonstrates that the majority of people can, and do, appreciate quality, and are quick to place the stamp of their approval on the goods of a manufacturer producing a perfect product.
